This resolution and a further one authorising the liquidation of the company were seconded and passed; and after some further discussion and an expression of regret that the S.S.N. Company would no longer be under the conduct of Messrs. Russell and Co., the meeting separated with the usual compliment to the Chair.

ADDRESS AND TESTIMONIAL TO MR. W. H. MEDHURST, H.M.'S CONSUL AT SHANGHAI.

An Address and Testimonial were presented to Mr. Medhurst, in view of his retirement from office, and approaching departure. The presentation took place in the Supreme Court, before a large and influential gathering of residents. The Address, which was as follows, and was signed by 210 persons, was presented by Mr. Krauss :—

Sir,—The intimation of your retirement from H.B.M.'s Consular Service has been received with general regret, to which we desire to give public expression, and we cannot allow you to leave China without asking you to accept some assurance of the regard and esteem we feel for you personally.

In the position you have so long held among us, we know you have had many and serious difficulties to contend with, and, recognising these, we have had frequent occasion to admire the tact and judgment you have shown in the discharge of your public duties.

Whenever opportunities for independent action have been given you your fearless acceptance of responsibility has gained for you the warm approbation of those whose judgment was based on a complete knowledge of the circumstances. Notably we cordially recognise the value of your services in connection with the expedition to Yangchow in 1868, when you compelled the observance of our Treaty rights, and by your able management of affairs gave to the important trade of Chinkiang an impulse largely contributing to the recovery of that city from the ruinous consequences of the Taiping rebellion, and materially benefiting foreign trade.

The pleasant relations which you have always so carefully preserved with the representatives of other nations, have, by securing united action, greatly facilitated the transaction of public business wherever you have been stationed; and this we regard as another and convincing proof of your peculiar fitness for the post you occupy.

As a student of Chinese literature you have sustained the reputation of your distinguished father, and have not failed to turn your acquirements to good practical account in the public service; for it cannot be doubted that your success in dealing with Chinese officials is to be attributed to your thorough knowledge of their language, and your intimate acquaintance with their train of thought.

It is appropriate that this Address should be presented to you in Shanghai, your name having so long and so honourably been connected with the history of the settlement. You were the first foreigner to land at the port when accompanying General Sir George (then Captain) Balfour in 1843, and your name appended to the first copy of Shanghai Land Regulations testifies to your early connection with the interests of foreigners residing here. During the past nine years, there has scarcely been an affair of public importance in Shanghai with which you have not been more or less intimately concerned. When his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh visited the Settlement in 1869, the community was glad to have its representative; and on this, as on other similar occasions, you have shown yourself well qualified to discharge the duties of the position, and to maintain that character for hospitality which has always distinguished Shanghai. At the present date we are pleased to note that your interest in the welfare of the Port has in no degree abated, your name appearing at the termination of your official career in China as the Chairman of no less than eleven public bodies, representing some of its most important and flourishing institutions.

We cannot doubt that it will be a source of gratification to you to recognise among the signatures appended to this Address the names of many sincere personal friends, to whom you have endeared yourself by numerous acts of kindness and consideration, and by a display of those qualities which are everywhere recognised as distinguishing an English gentleman.

In bidding you farewell we have to express an earnest hope that health and strength may for many years be given you to enjoy that leisure which you have so well earned by your long-continued and distinguished services in China.

Shanghai, 30th December, 1876.

The reading of the address was received with much applause.

Mr. Medhurst replied as follows :—Gentlemen,—I cannot remember when I ever felt more keenly the poverty of speech to express my feelings than I do at this moment. Knowing, as I do, the stern independence and individuality of character which so notably distinguish the foreign residents of Shanghai, I cannot but feel overwhelmed with the sense of my own demerits when I see assembled to-day so many of the most influential members of this community simply to do me honour. (Applause.) And when I have heard read the very flattering address which you have just presented to me I cannot but feel that an impromptu reply cannot at all do justice to the occasion. But if you will bear with me I will endeavour as briefly as I can to make you a befitting answer. (Applause.) Let me then thank you as heartily as I can for the great honour you are doing me to-day, and for the very handsome manner in which you have in this address spoken of my public acts and of my private character. (Applause.) As regards my public acts, the post of a Consul in China, as you may possibly know, is not one of the easiest. He has practically to serve three masters. He has to satisfy his Government, who binds him down with the most stringent of restrictions lest he should at any time commit them to disagreeable responsibilities by acts of indiscretion or over zeal. (Hear, hear.) He has to satisfy a body of merchants like yourselves who live in a country where there is only a too-deplorable tendency to misconstrue if not entirely to evade existing treaties. (Applause.) He has to conciliate the Chinese mandarins, than whom a more clever, but yet at the same time fanciful, shifty, and very often obstructive race does not exist. (Hear, hear.) Between these three fires, gentlemen, it should not be a surprise if the Consul does at times get himself severely singed. (Hear, hear, and applause.) You have spoken of the Yang-chow affair. You highly approve what was done there; yet I may now say that that was considered an act of over-zeal. In any case, Gentlemen, I can, after having heard read this flattering address, convince myself that I have succeeded in earning the approval of one of my masters, and that is the public. (Loud applause.) That thought is, I assure you, a great consolation to me in leaving this country, and it more than makes up to me for the worry and anxiety which I have had in serving the public, ever since I landed a mere boy with Sir George Balfour, on this bank of rushes which now forms your magnificent settlement. (Applause.) You have also spoken most flatteringly of my private character. I can scarcely presume to be associated with the memory of so distinguished a man as my father in the way you have placed it; and I can scarcely accept the title you have given me—an English gentleman. I look upon that as the highest honour you can pay a man, and I appreciate it very deeply. A man can scarcely live a series of years in a community like this without earning the good-will of some and the ill-will of others. I hope and I believe that I shall leave but few enemies behind me. I shall have the happiness of knowing that I have met in China some of the best friends of my life, to some of whom, indeed, I owe debts of gratitude I can never repay. I can scarcely trust myself to speak of the friends whom I am leaving and those with whom I have been associated in the discharge of my duties so many years. But one thing I can say, that wherever my lot may be cast, the interests of China in general, and those in Shanghai in particular, will always be near my heart. (Applause). And if at any time I can in my humble way promote those interests, you may depend upon it I shall use my best efforts to do so. (Applause.) I shall also bear away with me the most affectionate remembrance of my Shanghai friends. (Hear, hear.) And now, gentlemen, I feel the most poignant regret in wishing you farewell. But I hope the time may soon come when you will be, like myself, homeward bound, and have as many friends to wish you "God speed" as I have to-day. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

Mr. Mowat—Mr. Medhurst, I am asked to read to you the following Address, and it gives me special and peculiar pleasure to do so:—

To Walter Henry Medhurst, Esq., Her Britannic Majesty's Consul for Shanghai and Chinkiang.

Sir,—A few of your friends, unwilling that you should leave Shanghai without some token of their sincere esteem for your character, and for your public services, have joined to offer you a small present which, for want of time and opportunity to choose any object fit for your acceptance, takes the form of the accompanying draft. It is their desire that the sum should be applied to the purchase of a service of plate with a suitable inscription, for the purpose of commemorating the friendly connection which has so long existed between yourself and them.

Mr. Medhurst replied as follows:—Mr. Mowat and Gentlemen,—I have said enough just now to show how deeply I appreciate the high honour you are doing me to-day. I am most grateful for this additional evidence of your esteem and friendship. I accept it with great gratitude, and you may depend upon my taking the first opportunity of so laying it out that I shall be able to point to the equivalent as a proof of your kindly, and, I fear, only too tolerant appreciation of my service. (Loud applause).

FOOCHOW.

The Japanese Post-office has assumed a local habitation, as well as a name; Messrs. Hedge and Co. have been appointed agents, and are to make up a mail bag by each Shanghai steamer, for Japan, America, and Europe. They also supply Japanese postage stamps, so that every requisite has been arranged for.

Grave difficulties continue to be experienced by the Road Committee, on account of the native population having a prejudice against roads, however well made, running over the resting-places of their ancestors. The Foochow Herald says:—"Great improvements have, no doubt, been effected of late, and the roads are particularly well kept; but the numerous graves are an insuperable difficulty in the way of further extension. About three weeks ago, the lower road leading to the Fives Court was suddenly obstructed by two newly-made graves—in a manner calculated to convey an idea that a little "squeezing" on the part of petty district officials is contemplated. No doubt as to the new graves, but the old ones ought to be respected. Experience in Shanghai and elsewhere shows that an average Chinaman values the repose of his ancestors at an average of no less than ten dollars a-piece.

The Foochow Rifle Club have decided that the breech-loading carbines supplied by the Hong Kong Government shall be adopted for general use. Friends at home will be glad to hear that the Committee of the Rifle Club have decided that, in order to prevent accidents, it was decided that Members of the Club should for the present practice at the range in squads—each squad being under the command of a committee-man. The report of the proceedings does not say whether anybody is to be appointed to look after the committee-man too. The Race Club Ball is pronounced a success. The local chronicler of fashionable intelligence says:—"Under the skilful direction of the stewards, the large reading-room of the Club was completely transformed, and afforded ample space for the numerous guests—including a large proportion of the fair sex." It would seem from this that some of the ladies were excluded, rather an unusual thing in a community hitherto reckoned to be polite.

The Foochow Herald also gives the following items of general news:—

Side by side with the Proclamation anent the Yunnan outrage (noticed in our last issue) may be seen an edict by the prefect and magistrates forbidding street gambling. Both documents are, we think, equally valuable as deterrent instruments. To sin is pleasant, and the fulminations of mandarindom are not likely, in the present state of affairs, to greatly affect the public mind. It would not be so very difficult to prevent the murder of British officials (by the exercise of more powerful arguments than mere paper "talkee talkee"), but the vice of gambling is not to be suppressed by edicts in a country where there is no approach to what we foreigners term morality. And it is only fair to add that in the distant West, where the voice of the people is really supposed to be the voice of God, gambling in many forms is still rampant.

The Canton Joss-house narrowly escaped destruction by fire on the evening of the 15th January. The kitchen and other out-houses were burnt down, but, by great exertions, the flames were prevented from reaching the main building.

A rather extensive fire took place in the south-western suburb on the night of the 11th instant. About one hundred houses were destroyed; but, so far as we can learn, the actual loss of property was fortunately small, and we do not hear of any loss of life.

H.M.S. Hornet will, we understand, leave almost immediately for Tamsui, and thence to Hong-Kong, there to be re-commissioned. The Hornet's term of service at this port has been of unusually short duration, but during her brief stay on the station her commander and officers have become deservedly popular.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 25th January; the French mail from London, Dec. 15, arrived out on the 24th Jan.

H.E. Sir Arthur Kennedy was still at Hong Kong at the date of the departure of the last mail, namely, the 25th January, and was to distribute the prizes to the scholars at the Government Central School on Friday, the 28th. This would be a very suitable act towards the close of Sir Arthur's connection with Hong Kong, as he has, in common with his predecessor, Sir Richard MacDonnell, always taken the greatest interest in public education in the Colony, and has done much, by the exercise of equal tact and firmness, when questions as to denominational or non-denominational education and the like matters have arisen, to make the Central Schools as effective as possible.

The Chinese Government have employed Messrs. Inglis and Co., shipbuilders, &c., to provide them with a gunboat for the Revenue service. The new vessel, which is of about ninety tons, and is called the Chun-tung, made a successful trial trip to Chungchow and back.

The Colony has been troubled with a disease among the cattle brought to market for European use, similar apparently to the rinderpest, which causes so much anxiety and loss at home. The Daily Press, however, reassures its readers on the subject, and states that it is satisfactory to learn from the Inspector of Markets that there is no possibility of any diseased meat finding its way into the market. This statement, it appears, was made by the Inspector of Markets in the Police-court, when giving evidence against the masters of two cattle "lans" charged with sending diseased animals to the slaughter-house. The above-named paper adds that a most rigorous inspection is made of all the animals sent to be slaughtered. It appears probable that the extent of the disease has been somewhat exaggerated, though it is still considered desirable that the strictest precautions should be taken, both to prevent the spread of the malady and to guard against any animal suffering from it being slaughtered and sold in the market.

As usual the monthly report of the Fire Brigade is self-congratulatory. It sets forth that the regular monthly inspections and parades had been held, and the Government engines and equipments found in good order, with the exception of slight repairs needed by one of the manual engines. It goes on to detail the receipt of sundry stores from England, among which are 2,000 ft. of small size canvas delivery hose and implements

It is to be hoped that this new "rig out" will be beneficial, and that something will ere long be done to improve the discipline and organisation as well as the "materiel" of the Force.

A sad accident has happened to a Chinaman, who was engaged in lighting a fuse in a new tunnel at the Pok-fu-lum Waterworks. The stone which was blasted came out direct, and struck the deceased, causing death on the spot. Another sad death is recorded, namely of one Ashü, a pork butcher, who died from the effects of opium. There appeared no doubt that the unlucky man had taken the drug himself, and that the case was one of those instances of suicide so common among the Chinese. Inquests were held in both the above cases. In the former no blame was attached to those in charge of the blasting operations at Pok-fu-lum.

A case of some commercial interest, namely, that of Browne v. Meyer, Alabor, and Co., came on on the 20th Jan., before Chief Justice Smale, in the Supreme Court, and was still under hearing when the mail left. It arose out of the accounts in connection with various orders for rice, and the plaintiffs claimed no less than $12,307.92 in settlement, which the defendants disputed. The matter was of a complicated nature, but while each party held the other to be responsible on the disputed items, no imputation of dishonourable conduct was made on either side.

A correspondent who has recently returned to the Colony after an absence of some years, speaks in terms of high admiration of the improvements which have been made at Kowloong, where a little foreign settlement is rapidly rising up. Many of the residents in the Colony live over the water, and go across every evening after their labours to enjoy the cool breezes. There are now two steam-tugs, one of which runs every half-hour, the fare being the very moderate sum of five cents.

HONG KONG AND CANTON STEAM SHIP COMPANY.

The report of the Hong Kong, Canton, and Macao Steam-boat Company (Limited), for the half-year ending 31st December, 1876, to be presented to the meeting on the 25th January, shows that after paying running expenses, premia of insurance, salaries, ordinary repairs, and the sum of $11,458.80 for completion of the extraordinary repairs to the Kinshan and Spark, alluded to in the last report, there remains, including $5,039.24 brought forward from last account, a net profit of $30,099.84, which, in the opinion of the directors, is a fair return on the working of the steamers, considering that they have been carrying cargo and passengers at extremely low rates, consequent on continued opposition to their traffic. The directors are of opinion that it is more important that the permanent interests of the Company should be considered and its strength increased, than that a dividend should at this time be paid; and they, therefore, propose that the above net earnings should be disposed of by $11,114.97 being transferred to credit of depreciation account, bringing that fund (which has been reduced to $138,885.03 as shown in the statement), again up to $150,000, by appropriating $2,500 as directors' fees, and by carrying forward $16,484.87 to new account.

HONG KONG HOTEL.

The report of the Hong Kong Hotel Company for the half year ending Dec. 31, 1876, to be presented at their meeting on the 26th January, has been published. The "loan account" shows that a further sum of $2,000 has during the past six months been paid off, thus reducing the Company's debt to $66,000. The profit and loss account shows a credit-balance of $7,378.93, being an increase of $537.29 on the profits of the same period of last year; and the directors propose to distribute of this amount amongst the shareholders a dividend of $2.50 per share, thus absorbing a sum of $4,645, and to write the balance $2,733.93 off "hotel and furniture" account.

CANTON.

We regret to notice that Sir Brooke Robertson, H.B.M.'s Consul at the above port, has been seriously unwell. The correspondent of the Daily Press, writing on the 23rd January, says:—

The health of our Consul, Sir Brooke Robertson, is the absorbing topic at present amongst the British community. A day or two ago he was reported better, and it was hoped he was progressing favourably towards convalescence. On Sunday, however, he suffered a relapse. The fever has returned, and the patient's condition now causes much anxiety. The doctors, however, have not given up hopes of a recovery, but it will be a long time before Sir Brooke regains his usual health.

Fires and robberies complete the news from the City of Rams. On the 15th Jan. a sad conflagration occurred at Chun Chuen over a hundred houses being burned down. The cause of the fire was the carelessness of a woman, who, with exemplary piety, got up at midnight to worship her idols. With less exemplary care, however, she went to sleep again, leaving smouldering fire about. This soon kindled combustible material, and the fire spread with great rapidity, destroying much property. It is reported that another fire occurred at Sam Shuey village, in which a fire-cracker shop was burnt down, and the family of the proprietor, ten in number, were all burnt to death.

Robberies continue to occur with alarming frequency, both in and out of the city. Scarcely a couple of days pass without reports of outrages being brought in from the surrounding country. Another case has occurred in which a man and woman have been carried off and retained for a ransom. It is satisfactory to learn that two notorious robbers have been captured at Houam by the soldiers of the Nam-hoi magistrate. It would be still more satisfactory to hear of the capture of two hundred; and, with an efficient force to preserve the peace, far more than this number would soon find themselves compelled to forego their roving life in order to submit themselves to durance vile.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Advertiser has the following items:—

The King has gone to Chantaboon, the first time his Majesty has visited this part of his dominions. Many of the Royal family and prominent nobility accompanied his Majesty. The King coasts from Anghin for the first fifteen miles, stopping at different places, and then the party takes steam yachts and proceeds to Chantaboon. Six steamers go on this trip down the eastern coast.

There were several quiet dinners on Christmas evening, and Mr. Loftus, an English gentleman in the King's service, gave a brilliant party. The ladies appeared to great advantage, and the gentlemen vied with each other in agreeable courtesy and affability. Nothing was overlooked to make all at their ease and pleasantly entertained. Mr. Loftus soon leaves for the north of the country, with a design of plotting a tramway in the vicinity of the cotton, hemp, silk, &c. It is Siam's first attempt in this direction.

BORNEO.

SARAWAK.

The Gazette of the 14th December gives the following:—

We are glad to announce that the s.s. Rajah Brooke brought intelligence that the case of Helms v. the Borneo Company had been settled by arrangement. The Borneo Company's operations have therefore been resumed. It is a matter for congratulation that the cessation has been for so short a period that but slight disturbance of trade, &c., will have been felt.

The annual regatta and sports were held at Kuching. H.M.S. Aline and the S.S. Company's steamer Rajah Brooke were both decorated with flags, and their display of bunting greatly contributed to enliven the scene. Towards mid-day the weather became overcast, and several light showers fell, and continued off and on during the afternoon; but, with the exception of an occasional putting up of umbrellas, the rain did not affect the sport in any way. At twelve o'clock the European community were entertained at a sumptuous breakfast, provided by their Highnesses the Rajah and Ranee at the Astana, and although the company assembled was not so large as on some former occasions, the enjoyment was in no way diminished, the healthy appetites of those present fully compensating for the loss in numbers. After breakfast a general move was made for the river, and the racing commenced.

Two Dyaks were seized in their boat by a large alligator, which reared itself out of the water and pounced down upon them whilst they were lying close together asleep. One of them managed to escape with a frightful gash in the shoulder, but his companion, less fortunate, was borne away by the monster. There were several other people in the boat, which was a large one, but the affair took place so rapidly that they were unable to afford any help to the victim. It may not be generally known that alligators have this power of raising themselves out of the water, but the natives say that it is not an uncommon sight. About three years ago three Dyaks were attacked in a similar manner by two alligators, and only one of the party escaped.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 1st February; no later mail from London had arrived out. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The Straits Times has the following items:—

The troopship Orontes, with the 10th Regiment for England, and two companies of the 80th Regiment for Mauritius, has left for Portsmouth, via the Cape.

The following account of the execution of Maharajah Lela, Datu Sagor, and Pandak Indut has been forwarded to us:—

"Maharajah Lela, Datu Sagor and Pandak Indut were launched into eternity on Saturday morning; the first met his fate without uttering a word; he walked boldly up the scaffold in a manner which the Malays commonly say—"brani buat brani mati." The second and third, I am told, asked that they might be strung up at Qualla Kangsa; they were both forced to go up the gallows; the second (Sagor) broke or snapped two handcuffs off, and when the drop fell, he held the rope tightly with one hand, raised himself up a little and put both his legs round the post; but of course he was overpowered, and had to submit to die after all."

By the steamer Pyah Pekhet we have received intelligence to the effect that on the day H.M.'s 74th Highlanders arriving at Qualla Kangsa two of the privates went to bathe in the river, and on account of the force of the current, somewhat resembling a whirlpool, were carried to the bottom. Lance Corporal Carter swam out to their assistance, and was also drowned. Subsequently, Lieut. Swinburne, of H.M.'s 80th Regiment (now Superintendent of the Perak Police), went out in a boat in search of the drowned men, but only succeeded in finding one of the corpses. A reward of ten dollars each for the recovery of the other two corpses was offered by H.B.M.'s Resident, but up to the date of the Pyah Pekhet's departure they could not be found.

The French war steam transport La Creuse, from Saigon, arrived alongside the Borneo Company's wharf, and left for Toulon with 400 French naval and military passengers.

His Majesty the King of Siam has presented Capt. Wharton, of the s.s. Celestial, with a handsome gold cigar box, as a mark of appreciation of the skill displayed by him in a late voyage in averting a collision with his Majesty's yacht in the Bangkok river, under circumstances of peculiar difficulty.

Market Reports.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There had been a little more inquiry, and reported settlements comprise:—Oopack, 1,500 at Tls.14 to 17; Oanfa, 1,300 at Tls.11 to 15; Ningchow, 400 at Tls.15 to 17½; total, 3,200 chests. At the same date last year there was only one chop of 300 half-chests Ho-how left in stock; the present stock is 25,000 chests, and consists of cheaper teas than have been seen here for years. The relative cheapness of these teas as compared with Oolongs is noticeable, and there has again been some demand for America, about a thousand chests having been taken for that market that are not yet reported. A string of Oopacks at a proportion of Tls.14½, constitute half of the week's settlements, though the Oanfas at the difference in price seem to leave less chance of loss. Green: The long period of inaction seems to have ended, settlements for the week being 9,500 half-chests, viz., Teenkai, 700 ½-chests, at Tls. 31; Moyune, 2,300 ½-chests, at Tls. 26½ to 29½; Fychow, 3,000 ½-chests, at Tls. 19 to 23½; Pingsuey, 1,500 ½-chests, at Tls. 17½ to 32; Shanghai, 2,000 ½-chests, at Tls. 16½ to 22½. The inquiry for common country teas existing last week has continued, and nearly half the settlements are of Fychow and Shanghai packed teas at a cost under Tls. 23. There is still some demand for these kinds. The most marked decline is shown in the settlement of the Teenkai chop at Tls. 31, at the highest point of the market or about the last week in November this chop could probably have been settled at Tls. 33 to 33½. It costs still however much above home prices. Two sailing vessels have been put on the berth for New York, and will no doubt succeed in loading, and this almost precludes the possibility of another steamer being put on, and after the fleet of steamers that have sailed for New York have arrived, a reaction in that market may confidently be expected.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton, and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—The amount of business reported during the week is very heavy for the time of year, but the greater part of the settlements was effected some time since. The market is now cleared of all descriptions, with the exception of Congou, the stock of which is reduced to 2,638 chests. Settlements for the week are:—Congou, 12,997 chests; Souchong, 565 chests; Oolong, 1,010 half-chests; Flowery Pekoe, 80 chests. Congou: There is no change to report. Souchong: The remaining 565 chests have been settled. Oolong: A string of 1,010 half-chests have been taken at Tls.18 per picul short, showing very poor value. Flowery Pekoe: A chop of very undesirable quality has found a buyer at Tls.23 per picul. Scented Teas: No Stock. The export to date to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe is 53,285,810 lbs., against 63,094,100 lbs. To the Colonies, 15,730,202 lbs., against 15,099,603 lbs. To America, 665,141 lbs., against 974,665 lbs. at the same time last year.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—A very moderate business had taken place, and including 64 bales silk shipped for New York on the 14th Jan., settlements reached only 600 bales, making a total of 62,800 from the commencement of the season, against 60,700 at the same date last year. The purchases reported were K.F.S. Beautiful Woman No. 2 at Tls. 537½, common Tsatlees at Tls. 470, some Kahing Taysaams and 9 × 12 moss at Tls. 350 to 390 and Tls. 310 to 330, and 150 bales of re-reels at Tls. 500 to 530, besides some consignments on native account. With exchange steadily rising and the approaching settlement at China New Year, holders are anxious sellers, coarse silks and re-reels generally being pressed, and although the tael price of the few Tsatlees taken is rather lower, the laying down cost can only be a trifle cheaper than last mail's rates. Arrivals for the week were only 150 bales, and the unsold stock was reduced to within 18,000 bales.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell, and Co.'s Circular says:—Sugar: Dealers have continued firm, and buyers finding that no business could be done at the prices mentioned in our last have had to give in. The transactions reported during the fortnight amount to about 20,000 piculs of extra, and 26,000 piculs of superior. Unclayed: The first cargo of Taal has arrived, and was at once sold at $3.50 per picul. A parcel of 4,000 piculs Cebu unclayed has been sold at $3.75, laid down in Manila. The Ilo Ilo market is rather quieter, but prices are still relatively high. Hemp is weaker, and may be quoted $5.75 to $5.50 per picul (£24 0s. 3d. to £23 1s. 9d.). Coffee: Prices have gradually crept up to $20.25 per picul (£77 10s. 11d.), at which a small contract has been entered into for March delivery. Last sales of Zamboanga were at $18.50 per picul (£70 4s. 6d.), and next arrivals will probably be taken at $19 per picul (£72 18s. 10d.), or over. The principal exports from Manila for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1876, were as follows:—Sugar, 1,352,843 piculs; Hemp, 272,180 bales; Coffee, 61,118 piculs; Cordage, 2,542 piculs; Sapan-wood, 53,593 piculs; Buffalo Hides, 3,524 piculs; Hide Cuttings, 4,608 piculs; Mother-o'-Pearl Shell, 1,404 piculs; Gum-Mastic, 963 piculs; Indigo, 3,024 qls.; Tobacco Leaf, 149,727 qls.; Cigars, 75,648 mil.; Tortoise Shell, 297 cat. The stock of Hemp on Dec. 31, 1876, was 21,081 bales, and at Cebu 7,379 bales, making a total of 28,460 bales.

SAIGON.—Messrs. Kaltenbach, Engler, and Co.'s Report says:—Rice: During the first part of the period under review the market has been ruling very steady, and prices were well maintained in the face of a pretty brisk demand for Java. Afterwards, however, the prices gave way somewhat, owing to an increase in the receipts from the interior, a temporary falling off in the demand for Java, and the disappearance with regard to that for Ceylon and Lower India, but latterly a spurt in the Hong Kong market caused prices again to advance. Cotton: Cleaned has advanced about $1 per picul, whilst uncleaned has undergone no change; quotations are $18 per picul for No. 1, and $11 to $11.25 per picul for No. 2 cleaned; uncleaned $4.90 per picul. Fish: No fresh supplies have arrived as yet. Hides: Unchanged; still quoted $16.50 per picul for scoured, and $10.50 per picul for unprepared cow-hides; Buffalo Hides $7.60 per picul. Horns are a trifle higher, and quoted $8.75 per picul. Gamboge: Still quoted $50 to $52 per picul, according to quality. Pepper is slightly lower, and obtainable at $8.40 per picul.

CHINESE LABOUR IN ENGLAND.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Your correspondent "D" may certainly be congratulated upon having made a statement which nobody can gainsay, in asserting that Europeans can do the same kind of labour in China as Chinamen perform in foreign countries if they only accept the conditions of the country in the same way as a Chinaman in England has to submit to the laws and customs. But, as some of those conditions are prohibitory of the very work in question—such, for example, as the construction of railways, and as there are special prohibitions in China against foreigners residing in the interior of the country even for ordinary business purposes, I do not see that his letter throws much light upon the subject, or that it shows any inaccuracy in the statement made in your article that "Europeans are excluded from competing in China in the same kind of work which the natives of that country do abroad."

In asserting that, while extra-territoriality exists in China, it is useless to speak about equal privileges, your correspondent omits to notice the very important fact that extra-territoriality is necessitated not by the fault of foreign nations but by that of the Chinese themselves; and that it will be impossible for it to be removed either in China or Japan until radical reforms shall have been made in the judicial administration of those countries - reforms, be it noted, which must be initiated by their respective Governments themselves.

I deplore, as much as your correspondent, the shameful manner in which Chinese have at times been treated in the United States; but nobody will deny that, on the whole, they are protected, and that the influence of the majority, and especially the educated majority, in America is in their favour—while precisely the contrary to this is the state of affairs in China. The Government there, I do not deny, could not always protect foreigners thoroughly, but nobody can doubt they could, if they desired it, do so much more effectually than is the case at present.

In the concluding sentence of his letter your correspondent goes directly counter to what he says at the commencement. He gives it as his opinion that "the opening up of China will be accomplished in due season by the influence of commerce, not by cannon and diplomatic despatches"—thereby admitting that China is not yet opened up; or, in other words, that we cannot compete with the Chinese in China as they can with foreigners in their respective countries—the statement in your article which he thought it necessary to gainsay.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

ANOTHER "D."

London, Feb. 27.

AT the Queen's Drawing-room on the 2nd inst., the Japanese Minister and the Chinese Minister, Dr. MACARTNEY, were among those who attended the diplomatic circle.

THE HON. T. G. GROSVENOR'S MISSION IN CHINA.

On the evening of the 27th ult., in the lecture-hall of the Royal Association in Aid of the Deaf and Dumb, St. Saviour's, Oxford-street, the Hon. Thomas G. Grosvenor, C.B., gave an account of his recent journey to Yunnan. Nearly 200 deaf and dumb persons of both sexes were present, the lecture being interpreted to them by the Rev. Samuel Smith, the chaplain and secretary of the Association, and who by a dexterous use of the finger alphabet, accompanied by expressive pantomime, enabled the afflicted individuals before him to fully comprehend the purport of the lecture. Lord Ebury had been announced to preside over the meeting, but owing to his lordship's unavoidable absence the chair was taken by the Duke of Westminster, his Grace being accompanied by the Duchess of Westminster, Lady Beatrice Grosvenor, Lord Richard Grosvenor, and Lady Wenlock.

After a few introductory words from the Duke of Westminster, the Hon. T. Grosvenor explained that his journey through China had been undertaken at the command of the British Government, in order to inquire into the murder of Mr. Margary, who had been unfortunately killed while in consular service; and in order to give the deaf and dumb people present some idea of the vast country he had recently left, he then exhibited a large number of gaily-coloured sketches showing some of the customs and occupations of the Chinese, and of the country they lived in. His journey had commenced at Peking, which was one of the largest cities in the world, being about twenty-six miles in circumference, although not very densely populated. On his arrival at Hankow it was doubtful how he and the members of the mission were to travel further in the desired direction, but it was at length determined to go by water, and they accordingly set off in a large junk on the 5th of November, 1875, leaving all Europeans behind, and trusting entirely to the Chinese. The progress was very slow. After a journey of about a month on the Yang-Tse-Kiang they reached I-Chang. Past this place the river scenery changed in character, and became grand and wild in the extreme, high banks of cliffs stretching for miles on both sides of the stream, which was considerably narrowed. By the end of the year 1875 they arrived at the town of Chung-Ching, which was nearly as large as Peking. Here they came upon the head establishment of some Roman Catholic missionaries—"men who had gone out at an early age to spend the whole of their lives in the endeavour to convert the Chinese." They lived like the natives and conformed to their customs; but although their efforts had resulted in the conversion of many Chinese, they had met with much discouragement, and lived with their lives in their hands. Mr. Grosvenor then described the China New Year's Customs, and his difficulty in getting together his train of nearly 500 men for his overland journey to Yunnan, the place to which he was bound. After a long march in a southerly direction upon constantly rising ground they arrived at the capital city of Yunnan, which was 5,000ft. above the level of the sea. On his arrival he was (in company with the Chinese Commissioners) engaged in fully investigating the circumstances attending the death of Mr. Margary. What happened then was unfortunately not in his power to relate, as the papers containing his report were not yet published by the Government, and were therefore not public property. Soon after the month of April, 1876, they left for the frontier of China, in order to see the actual spot where the murder had taken place. At Manwyne, near the frontier, he met with an escort of 300 British soldiers, and it was with real pleasure that he met these men, as he had spent six months in the interior of China without intercourse with any Englishmen, except the two gentlemen who had accompanied him. He was pleased to say that he was enabled to identify the spot where the murder had taken place, though unfortunately he could find no trace of the remains of Mr. Margary. Accompanied by his escort he arrived at Mandalay, on the river Irrawaddy, and the capital of Burmah. The King of Burmah, in expectation of his arrival, had made very great preparations for his reception. Large numbers of native soldiers, clad in the cast-off uniforms of British regiments, were drawn up in the streets of the city, the men being apparently well armed, although he was informed they did not know how to use their muskets. He was obliged to leave without an audience with the King of Burmah, as the regulations of the Consular service did not allow his entry of the Royal palace divested of his boots, as was the custom in Burmah. After a brief stay at the capital he went on to Rangoon, from which place he returned to Shanghai by steamer, after having in eight months accomplished the first overland journey from Shanghai to Rangoon ever undertaken by an Englishman.

TRADE WITH CENTRAL ASIA AND CHINA.

At the meeting of the Society of Arts, on Friday, Sir R. Alcock, K.C.B., President of the Geographical Society and formerly H.M. Minister in China, in the chair, a paper of much importance as bearing upon our commercial interests in Central Asia, and collaterally with China, was read by Sir Douglas Forsyth, C.B., K.C.S.I. The paper commenced by stating that the annexation to Russia of vast regions in Central Asia, taken together with the prospect of further annexation, gave rise to considerations of practical importance, not merely in a political point of view but as affecting our relations in that part of the world. It was shown that very discordant views on the subject were taken both by Russia and by English authorities. Mr. Grigorief, the eminent Russian Orientalist, was cited as to the designs of Peter the Great with regard to Central Asia. He was attracted by two great ideas,—first, to give to Russian trade a way through the Steppe to the treasures of India, which he knew had given wealth to his friends, the Dutch; second, to bring Russia the gold which, as report had told him, was to be found in masses in a river near the city of Yarkund. Taking advantage of an Embassy from Khiva in the beginning of the 18th century, which came with a proposal to swear allegiance to Russia, he despatched a force nominally to give support to Khiva and Bokhara, but really to open the road to India and Yarkand, and to send thither a Russian commercial caravan. The utter failure of this expedition under Prince Bekovitch Tcherknaski is well known. Passing from the historical portion of the subject, Sir Douglas pointed out that although Russia had desired to live in peace with her neighbours, and had a due regard to the interests of civilisation and humanity, she had been compelled to make further and further advances, taking the towns of Tashkend and Samarcand, and spreading out her arms east and west, till now the Russian boundary line included a large portion of Khiva, Bokhara, and the whole of Khokand, while there were clear indications of a desire to extend still further eastward. The commercial policy of Russia was essentially protective, and in Asia it was absolutely prohibitory against English goods, with the exception of indigo, and but for smuggling, wherever Russia finds her boundaries in Asia, all trade between England and the now Russianised countries might be considered at an end. This being the case, they might confine their attention at present to the trade of those countries lying between India and Russia, or might take them as they appeared on the map—Khiva, Bokhara, Afghanistan, Kashgar, and Thibet. Remarking that of these Khiva, although nominally independent, might be at most excluded from the calculation, valuable statistics were given, from the most reliable authorities, as to the population, the commercial needs, and the productive powers of each. Reference was made to the Indian Museum for most interesting information afforded by its collections as to the primitive wants of the people in Central Asia and as to the textiles purchased in the bazaar at Shikarpore before our annexation of Sindh, proving that in those days textiles of Russian manufacture penetrated as far as India. The trade between India and Central Asia during the last ten years was reviewed. It was shown that within this period the trade with Asia from India, or, rather, from the Punjab, had risen, in round numbers, from £1,000,000 to £2,000,000 sterling. The Russian trade with India, as well as its commercial relations with China, where it came into competition with our own, formed the subject of interesting remark. As the result of this manifold survey the practical question was asked,—Is this trade with Central Asia worth striving for? To this he replied emphatically, Yes, it is. With all the drawbacks arising from deficient means of transport, heavy rates of carriage, and undue exaction in Afghanistan, commerce through that country has doubled within the last ten years, and there is now a total yearly trade with the countries between India and Russia proper of about four millions sterling, of which Manchester goods, to the value of about a quarter of a million cross the frontier from Kurrachee and the Punjab, and wool to the extent of one million is exported from India, the bulk of which comes from across the frontier The town of Bokhara, one of the chief centres of Central Asia trade, had a population of 75,000, and was a large consumer of Russian manufactures and other goods; while, up to the present, whatever efforts we had made to open a market in the direction of Kashgar, no such efforts had been made till most recently to push the trade through Afghanistan, simply because the Amir Shir Ali had been unable, or unwilling to listen to the advice given him by Lord Mayo and succeeding Viceroys. The trade with Kashgar is unsatisfactory, on account of the obstructions placed upon it, notwithstanding the agreement to admit all goods at an ad valorem duty of 2½ per cent. The country was underpopulated, and although it offered a market for comparatively small and well-selected ventures of Indian traders, the field was not large enough for English capitalists. The great problem for Russia to solve was to find the shortest and safest route to Western China, and in pursuance of this policy she obtained, in 1860, a treaty from the Court of Peking giving permission to erect factories in the vicinity of Kashgar. But in the large region where the Russians have established their power and influence a rigid blockade is kept up against English goods; and it was to our interest commercially to enter into such treaties as were made with the Amir of Kashgar, because unless we established some such footing as we have got there in those countries we should not be able to remonstrate successfully with Russia if, or when, she annexes these territories to her empire. But if we could show that we have had trading relations with them, and had entered into treaties with the rulers of the land, there would be good ground of remonstrance against anything like a complete stoppage of trade. To remove the obstruction of the Chinese it was proposed to follow the example of the Russians, and obtain from the Government of Peking permission to establish consular agents at the Court of Teshu Lamas, just as the Russians are allowed to place their agents at Urga, near the Court of the Taranath Lama. Sir Douglas concluded by saying that the States of the European Continent do indeed show a slightly increasing tendency to become our customers, but there was one country which has never for a moment relaxed its commercial hostility, and this is Russia. Every portion of the Ottoman dominions, or any other part of the world absorbed by Russia was absolutely lost to English trade, and the pretended civilising mission of Russia is everywhere an errand of destruction to our manufactures.

A discussion, in which Sir George Campbell, Sir Charles Trevelyan, and others took part, ensued; and at its conclusion in moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer,

Sir Rutherford Alcock said he had listened with great interest to the valuable paper on the progress of trade in Central Asia. It was of importance, not only as showing the nature of the trade at present existing with Central Asia, but as suggesting the larger trade which might in the future be developed, and of which at present we could scarcely form an estimate, on account of the obstacles which are thrown in the way of it. Whatever way we attempted to move, whether through Kashmeer or through Thibet, we encountered enormous difficultes; not only as to transport, which in the end limited the quantity of trade which could be conducted, but also from the political opposition alluded to by Sir Douglas Forsyth. The Russians, in order to preserve their trade against competition from Manchester, Birmingham, and Bradford must have protection, and so long as they had the power, would obtain it by taking possession of the countries. The question had been raised how far the difficulty could be overcome by coming to an understanding with China. China was in its way as protective as Russia. She had admitted our trade upon a fair maritime tariff, but she had done so only under pressure, and would shut us out to-morrow if she had the power. The Chinese did not do so only because they did not consider themselves strong enough to go to war. No doubt if they chose they could remove the barriers and enable us to gain access to Nepaul, &c., and so to Central Asia. Russia would then have to compete with us, and there could be no question how far Manchester and Bradford would be successful. It was not, perhaps, the proper place for him to enter fully upon such a point, but he might state that an important move had been made by our Minister at Peking, Sir Thos. Wade, in obtaining from the Chinese as a political concession, that a trade route should be established across Burmah into Yunnan; and still more than that, that we should have the power of transit through Thibet into India. He did not think there could be anything more important than what Sir Thos. Wade had done. He had broken down the walls of obstruction; and we had now only to ask the Chinese to allow us to carry out the same principle which enabled Russia to trade along the frontier; and they could not refuse us. The only argument they could bring forward was that Russia was strong; but that was an argument that might be turned in various ways. It was not, as had been observed, Europe that was pushing its trade towards the inhabitants of these regions, they were advancing towards us, and if we found men willing to meet us, we should take steps to remove political obstacles. Every effort should be made by Great Britain against Powers who stopped the road. Free trade had always had to fight the same battle. So far as Russia is concerned, it was hopeless to look for concession from her, as her inability to meet competition made this impossible. Sir Douglas Forsyth had justly observed that Great Britain could not look to European countries for an outlet for her goods; we could not indeed even look to our own Colonies, who had mostly adopted protective tariffs; but it was to India, China, and Africa and the like places, that we must look for prosperity to our manufacturers and increase of our trade, and we ought not to allow ourselves to be shut out of important regions by Russia, or any other Power.

Sir Rutherford concluded by expressing the thanks that were due to Sir Douglas Forsyth for his excellent paper; and the compliment having been briefly acknowledged, the meeting separated.

Literature.

The March number of the Friend of China (organ of the Anti-Opium Society) contains the translation of an address which was prepared by the Society in 1875, and sent out to China, where it was translated by the Rev. John Chalmers, M.A., of the London Missionary Society, and through the assistance of the Rev. J. C. Edge and other missionaries widely distributed throughout the country; copies having been put into the hands of officials in Peking itself. It has, according to the information which has been received, attracted some attention in China. It urges that it is necessary that the Chinese Government and people should prove the sincerity of their opposition to the opium trade, and that most of all it is to be desired that the Emperor of China would send a deputation to the Queen of England for this very purpose. "If the Chinese Government does not like to do that, at least, they might send a letter through the Ambassador in Peking. Also the gentry and people in every place should make their feelings known. They should send in petitions to the magistrates of their respective districts, and urge them not to allow the cultivation and use of opium within the districts. They should form societies for promoting abstinence from opium, issue publications warning the people against it, and send these publications to our Society that we may put them into English, to show the English people that the Chinese are sincere in wishing to save their country from the ruinous effects of opium. In every city, town, and village in the eighteen provinces let all the people who desire to save China from being ruined by opium-smoking combine in public anti-opium societies, taking a pledge never to buy nor to smoke the drug, nor to allow their sons and nephews to do so; let the gentry and people also petition the magistrates to close the opium-shops within their districts, and to prevent the farmers from planting the poppy."

The leading essay in Petermann's Mittheilungen for February is the discussion of a project for a railroad to Central Africa across the Sahara, by Dr. G. Rohlfs. This question has already been under consideration for some time by French geographers, their object being to show how the wealth of the Soudan might be drawn through Algeria; but the subject has not until now been touched by any traveller of such authority or possessing such a thorough practical knowledge of North Africa as Dr. Rohlfs. After fully considering all the difficulties presented by the 1,200 miles of desert which must be crossed, and the possibilities of obtaining a sufficient trade to support the line if constructed, he decides in favour of the scheme.

The Picturesque Tourist (London: Elzevir Press, Castle-street, Chancery-lane) is a valuable guide to those who desire to travel in the United States or to go to Japan or China by the Trans-American route. "Shall He Live Again?" (Remington and Co., Arundel-street) is a pleasing and effective poem, by Mr. Stapelton. It is founded upon a story in real life, which is told in the preface. The author and publishers deserve credit for the handsome way it has been put through the press.

The Bulletin de la Société de Geographie at Paris for December contains a Paper, by M. J. P. Paquier, upon "Russian and English Explorations in Central Asia," in which the various Russian expeditions and those of Sir Douglas Forsyth, Messrs. Hayward, Shaw, Hayward, and others. It has also an interesting article, by Abbé Durand, "On the Portuguese Colonies in the Far East."

The China Review for November and December contains a continuation of Mr. Watter's Essays "On the Chinese Language;" a Paper, by Mr. S. W. Williams, "On the Establishment of American Trade at Canton," and other Papers of interest, one of the most valuable being "A Note on the Chinese Law of Inheritance," furnished by Mr. Chal. Alabaster.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.

MARINE INSURANCE.—PICKUP V. THE THAMES AND MERSEY MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY (LIMITED).

This case has occupied the Court for six days. The action was brought by a merchant of St. John, New Brunswick, to recover for a constructive total loss in respect of two policies of Marine Insurance for £1,000 and £500, one of which was effected upon a vessel belonging to the plaintiff called the Diadem, for a voyage, "at and from Point de Galle to Rangoon, in ballast, whilst loading there, and thence to a port of discharge in Europe," and the other upon a freight by the same vessel "at and from Rangoon to her port of discharge" in this country. The vessel, shortly after leaving Rangoon on July 4, 1874, with a cargo of rice, was compelled to put back in a leaky condition, and having sustained further injuries by grounding in the river on her way up to Rangoon, she was condemned and sold there upon the recommendation of surveyors. The purchaser, a shipwright, repaired her at a cost of £4,500 so as to enable her to carry timber and railway iron, and estimated her when repaired at about £6,000. The plaintiff, on August 12, shortly after the extent of the damage was ascertained, wrote a letter to the Underwriters to the effect that he was informed that the vessel was much strained and had grounded in putting back to Rangoon; that the repairs would cost more than £6,000, and that as, in his opinion, she could never be repaired properly at Rangoon, he had made up his mind to put her up to auction and sell her to the highest bidder. Upon this letter the plaintiff relied, as constituting a notice of abandonment, and he claimed to recover a total loss on both policies, the cargo having been forwarded in another vessel, the Persia, at about the same freight as the Diadem would have earned. The defence wa that the ship was unseaworthy, by reason of her having been worm eaten and in a defective state at the commencement of the risks insured against, that the loss was occasioned by that and not by any of the perils insured against, and that in any case the loss was a partial and not a total one.

Baron Cleasby, in summing up, directed the jury that if the ship on leaving Rangoon was wormed so as not to be seaworthy, then, irrespective of the question whether the plaintiff knew of this or was to blame, the verdict should be for the defendants. On the other hand, was the weather such as would operate upon a seaworthy ship, and strain her so as to cause her to make water as described. Was she seaworthy at the commencement of the voyage? If they should be satisfied that the ship was fit to prosecute the voyage with that cargo at this time of the year their verdict would be for the plaintiff.—The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amounts claimed, with interest.

It may be stated that in a similar action by the same plaintiff against the Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Company, tried before Mr. Justice Field in the Queen's Bench Division, the jury found that the Diadem was unseaworthy on leaving Rangoon, so that there are now two contradictory findings on this question.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, FEB. 27.

The first Session of the newly-elected Imperial Parliament at Berlin last Thursday, February 22, was opened by the Emperor in person. The grey monarch—who was accompanied by his son and grandson (also the grandson of the Queen of England), and several other princes of the Royal family, besides the highest Governmental and military dignitaries, Prince Bismark at the head—at his appearance was welcomed by the assembly with three cheers. The Emperor looked very well, and read his speech with a loud and perfectly distinct voice, several times interrupted by the cheers of the Parliament, especially when the Emperor expressed his hopes that the peace of the German nation would not be disturbed by the present Oriental complications, as Germany was less interested in this question than any other European nation. The Imperial Speech did not fail, to some extent, to restore the confidence of our mercantile world, but unfortunately this confidence was not of long duration, and on the following day our exchange again was depressed by a telegram to the effect that the 28th February was the appointed day for the Russian Army to pass the Pruth river. Since that time business has been dull, and very likely will be so for some time to come if not the Oriental disturbances, by one way or the other, at last may come to a decision, which, however, it might turn out, certainly would be more welcome as the present state of things. In the meantime, the labouring classes over almsot the whole continent are suffering severely, the greatest want of occupation is predominant, and pauperism rapidly increasing to such an extent that both the German and the Danish Governments have taken into consideration how to procure work for the many hands that are at present doomed to idleness and misery.

The little town of Hernoesand in Sweden, a very active seaport for the exportation of woods, which last year suffered severely by fire, has again been in flames, on Feb. 19. No less than six blocks of buildings have been totally destroyed, and the Bank is reported to have lost all its papers of value, bills of exchange, &c. The catastrophe was the more disastrous as all the waters were frozen up, and thus no means at hand to subdue the destructive element.

Last Friday our Exchange in the morning was much disturbed by a telegram announcing the stranding of the Hamburgh American Steam Packet Company's steamship Franconia on Cape San Blas, in the vicinity of Aspinwall (Colon). After the experiences made with this company of late, of course nothing but a total loss could be expected, and the accident already had been magnified to this extent, when, fortunately, a few hours later another telegram reported the steamer afloat again, and arrived at Colon.

A telegram of great interest to the North Sea shipping came in this morning, bringing the news that the light-ship stationed on the Borkum Reef had been forced to leave its station and had entered the Weser river yesterday morning. This case is the more disagreeable as all the steamers coming from the westward and bound to Hamburg, Bremen, Tonning, &c., generally make this light-ship, which is a very good means for the vessels to make up a correct position. It is to be hoped that the light-ship will be able to resume its station before any heavy weather comes on, as in that case the want of the vessel might prove fatal to shipping, especially to the vessels that come from abroad without calling at England.

The Norddeutsche Bank, the Anglo-Deutsche Bank, the Wechsler Bank, and the Steamship Company "Kosmos," have published their reports and balance-sheets.

The total business of the Norddeutsche Bank during the past year reached the amount of M.8,308,014,212, against M.8,776,603,058 in 1875, and the directors propose a dividend of 8 per cent., absorbing M.3,600,000 of the net profit of M.3,799,683. The Anglo-Deutsche Bank shows a net profit in its banking department of M.598,206, which totally is absorbed by the ruinous industry-establishment of the company. The Wechsler Bank intends to distribute a dividend at the rate of 8⅛ per cent.

The "Kosmos" line states in its report a net profit of M.42,028, out of which the board intends to distribute, in addition to the dividend of 5 per cent. a super-dividend of 1 per cent. All voyages during the past year have been profitable ones, and the total earnings made by them amount to M.741,308. The steamer Karnak, of this line, wrecked in Smith Channel, December, 1875, has been brought off and repaired, and has now taken its former range between the other steamers of the company.

The ordinary annual meeting of the Anglo-Deutsche Bank, held yesterday, was, as anticipated, a very agitated one. The motion concerning the winding-up of the establishment was not among the items of the order of the day, the board having decided to call the shareholders for an extraordinary meeting to resolve this motion. Nevertheless, several of the shareholders pointed to the balance-sheet as a fictitious one; but, after a long debate, report and balance-sheet were passed.

The "Deutsche Seewarte," domiciling in Hamburg, has issued a very valuable memorandum to the German Parliament stating the extent of the use made by our seafaring population of the advantages offered by this establishment. During the time from July, 1875, to November, 1876, the "Seewarte" handed 292 meteorological journals to 246 sailing vessels and 36 steamers, a far better result than in London, as to the latter establishment are only returned 87 journals a-year. Directly after return of a vessel each instrument has to suffer a thorough investigation in order to correct in accordance to this investigation the obsertions made on the voyage. The number of sextants and other nautical instruments thus investigated during the mentioned period amounts to 75, while 187 barometers, and 444 thermometers have been put in accordance with the normal instruments on the Seewarte. If the captain of a vessel partakes in the work of the officers of the Seewarte concerning the proof of his instruments there is to pay nothing, on the other hand he has to pay a small sum.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, FEB. 28.

Yesterday the Second Chamber of the States General at its sitting took into consideration a very important question connected with our possessions in Java, namely, the police regulations. The question was also discussed last Friday, when Mr. Van Putte made a remarkable speech, in the course of which, while insisting that the natives should be dealt with liberally, he urged that they ought to be "squeezed" to prevent Holland from becoming bankrupt. For many years past a great deal has been done to improve our position with the native population, even at times to the detriment of the interests of Europeans. Some members of the Conservative party feared that the Liberal alterations proposed would lead to a struggle between capital and labour; but there is no fear of any such occurrence, if the European residents use a little tact. Ergo, it was most urgent to abolish the stipulation, which enables the police to intermeddle themselves in the agreements between the masters and the workmen; but at the same time the law ought to contain stipulations about the punishments to be applied by the judge. The result of the debate, though important, was not so satisfactory and positive as could be wished for. The Chamber, however, has concluded that it was desirable that the stipulations about punishments should be altered or abolished. Next Tuesday the members will deliberate about the Judicial Bill, by which the Minister of the Department of Justice wishes to bring about more or less important alterations in the number of our Courts. I need not say that this has caused a storm in the provinces, every town pleading for the desirableness of the maintenance of their respective Courts. The debate upon this Bill will last most certainly some days, so that it will be impossible to go into committee upon the Reform Bill before the second week of March. Thus it will be very difficult to finish with it before the end of May, as Mr. Heemskerk wishes would be the case. On March 23 the members of the Second Chamber will go into recess, and when they meet again of course the School Bill will be the first on the programme. And then the general elections to renew one-half of the Chamber will be too near on hand for any effective Parliamentary labour. I hear that Mr. T. Messchert van Vollenhoven does not wish to be re-elected.

The Conservative paper, het Dagblad, contains an article about the war in Atchin; it complains that we are making no progress at all, and that the army in Java is quite exhausted. Our force is insufficient, and is still enfeebled by sickness. Such a state of things is to be seriously regretted. In the meanwhile the war must be brought to an end. It is impossible to leave Atchin, or to make an appeal to a foreign country. Only one course rests open—a part of the Dutch army must be forwarded to Java, though this is formally forbidden by Article 206 of the Constitution. But this case is so urgent that this Article should be altered. The Liberal papers don't say one word about this article; and perhaps they have good reasons for silence. The London and China Telegraph's article—"The War in Atchin"—was quoted in our papers.

Spinoza literature is the order of the day. On Wednesday last the Dutch Academy of Art and Sciences held their meeting at the Hague in honour of that philosopher. Prince Alexander was present. The President noticed the fact that the Netherlands have the honour of counting Spinoza among its burghers, and have the right of raising a statue to him. He also enlarged upon the tolerance, which, when the wars of religion prevailed, the House of Orange proclaimed and practised in Holland. Mr. Ernest Renan defended the memory of Spinoza against the unworthy attacks which had been made upon him. He considered him the man who, in his time, had the highest idea of God and of liberty. It has pleased his Majesty the King of the Belgians to revoke the appointment of Mr. G. Suyckerbuyck as Vice-Consul of Belgium at Batavia.

On the 1st of April a general congress will be held by the Dutch typographers, in order to deliberate about the means by which they will be able to improve their social position. Their actual wages are too small to provide for the wants of their families. For several years they have tried to improve their salaries in a friendly way, but without success.

THE PRESS IN JAPAN.—The Bibliographie d'Belgique has published a report from the Belgian Secretary of Legation, Baron d'Anethan, stating that there are now published about fifty journals in Japan. They were all commenced about four or five years ago. Of the twenty journals published at Tokio, the most important are the Nichinichi Shimbun, the Hochi Shimbun, the Atebono Shimbun, and the Nisshin nisshin chi Shimbun, which issue respectively 9,500, 3,000, 3,500, and 4,300 copies a day. The subscription varies from 6 to 8 rios (f.30 to f.40) a year. The Jomeouri Shimbun, which is read chiefly by women, has 12,000 subscribers, and costs only 2 rios a year. These journals are all printed on European, chiefly Belgian, paper, and with European presses.

CAPTAIN G. F. HENRY, who has been the P. and O. Company's superintendent at Bombay since 1865, has been thrown from his carriage, and died almost immediately. Captain Henry had been many years in the P. and O. Company's service, and was much esteemed by mercantile and other people at Bombay. He was a brother of the late Sir Thomas Henry, senior magistrate at Bow-street Police-court.

THE TREATY WITH CERTAIN CHIEFS OF "THE NINE STATES."

THE papers and correspondence relating to the final readjustment of our difficulties with the native States of the Malay Peninsula have never yet been presented to Parliament. The only Blue-books we possess break off at a very interesting point in the middle of 1876. Under such circumstances no opinion which we can pronounce on the question can be full and satisfactory; we left daylight behind us in June last year, and like a man who gropes his way through a cavern we can only catch glimpses of distant sunshine from occasional outlets. Such a glimpse —which, however, happens to be a very bright one—is afforded by the agreement entered into between Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS and certain chiefs and representatives of chiefs from "The Nine States" in November last. The full text of this document is before us, and we have also read the remarks made by the Governor of Singapore to the Legislative Council in supporting it, as also the objections put forward by Mr. W. H. READ. We fully concur with the last named experienced authority—experienced not merely in the affairs of the Malay Peninsula but in the very similar difficulties which Sir JAMES BROOKE slowly and successfully surmounted in Borneo—in pronouncing the present agreement one "likely to lead to further complications." We give Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS more credit for acuteness as a statesman than to suppose that he does not personally entertain precisely similar opinions; but Sir WILLIAM has to act according to some lines of policy which, though not fully explained to the public at home, have been laid down by our Colonial-office as the best for present convenience. Plain common sense teaches us the main principles which ought to be kept in sight—the details are of quite a minor importance — in recasting our policy towards all the independent Malay States south of the Siamese boundary line. We do not need to annex, but we should in every instance—and consistently so—act as if we contemplated the ultimate possibility that these petty States will some day, as they one by one disintegrate, fall under our immediate sway. Carefully selected Residents should be maintained in every important State, but the recognition of the separate independent existence of such trumpery little provinces as Gunong Passir under special treaty rights is a course to be avoided. If we had, for example, three tolerably strong States to deal with instead of nine small ones, with their separate semi-independent appurtenances, how much more easy it would be to insist on such things as the arrest of fugitive criminals, how much less correspondence would be saved; and when some day the reversion of a State fell in, like a ripe plum, to the British Crown, in the first place we should get something worth having, a real increase of our power in the Peninsula, and secondly, should not have consequent panic, agitation, and trouble among a number of tiny principalities still clinging to a tottering independence. A breeze may set all the cockle boats in a harbour dancing, and yet leave the full-rigged ships at their anchors unmoved.

The above form one or two of the leading features of a sound Malay policy to which we could largely add, but these will suffice for our present purpose; and we ask our readers to consider whether the new treaty with "certain chiefs of the Nine States" is in the least consistent with any such views. It recognises permanently the exclusive right of sundry small Tuans and Datus to regulate their own appanages according to their own sweet will. Now how are we, without great trouble and expense, to get at an obstructive Datu, or to help him in a squabble with Chinese Immigrant Societies, who might be paralysing all trade and causing endless trouble at Pénang and Singapore by unruliness within their strongholds? All this has happened quite lately at Perak and Larut. Residents, we repeat, should be planted at the important localities, and solidarité among the States rather than the disintegration entailed by the formal recognition of each recalcitrant chief should be our guiding principle. How, for instance, do we get justice done to British subjects in Chiengmai, or Luang Prabang? Not by concluding separate treaties with those States, but by insisting that their subordination to the stronger rule of Siam shall be a reality and not a fiction. When our Government makes agreements with other nations it is supposed to have some regard for the interests of British commerce, and to use some efforts to secure to natives of the United Kingdom the rights and privileges of trading peacefully and securely in the foreigner's dominions; but what does this Convention say:—"We (the Chiefs) promise that peaceful persons, "whether Malays or Chinese, or others, desirous of trading "in our countries, shall have full liberty to do so, and "shall be unmolested." Not a word as to Englishmen; and under the well-known principle of ejusdem generis we doubt whether the expression "or others" could be held to mean anything except Asiatics; it would cover Madrassees, Parsees, or Bengalees, but if Englishmen had been meant also a lawyer would probably tell us that Englishmen would then have been expressly mentioned. Any dispute or difficulty arising among the States which we are unable to settle (a very pregnant proviso, for who is to decide what they are able to settle and what not) we will refer for advice to the Maharajah of Johore.

To the foregoing text Governor JERVOIS in Council has added a gloss that it has been arranged with the Maharajah that any reference so made to his Highness shall be dealt with in concert with the Government of the Straits Settlements. Well, then, an obstructive chief will hereafter make this a pretext for declining the advice, saying that though he promised to consult the Maharajah yet the advice is the advice of the British and not the advice of Johore. Setting that aside, and even admitting what some strongly dispute, that the Maharajah is an admirable man to undertake this new duty, how is he without a military force to secure obedience for his recommendations? Mr. READ is quite right in saying that the Maharajah has thus been placed in a false and an unwise position; the chiefs and people would be far less likely to cause or permit disturbance in future if told that in case of misunderstanding they must appeal direct to the wholesomely-dreaded British Government. A Treaty is a solemn agreement intended, if not to be binding for all time, at any rate to secure a settlement of a very permanent character; to endure for much longer than the life of a middle-aged man. Now, supposing the Maharajah (long be his days in the land) were to die next year, to whom are these restless chiefs then to appeal? To the successor? Who is he, and how far is he a suitable personage to undertake the post of arbitrator? Why, a dissatisfied chief would take quite another view, and say that he certainly only bound himself to refer to the present Maharajah, and that because he happened to know him to be a very superior potentate. A wily Asiatic who wants a pretext is seldom slow in finding one, and here is one ready to hand in store for him, and really a very fair one, too. On the whole, we can only say that in hastily drawing up this short, ill-considered, and vague Treaty, Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS has not acted for the best interests either of the Straits Settlements or of the Malay States; his probable justification is—and really so far as he is concerned it is sufficient—that he has been instructed from home to do something which, without in any way committing our Government, shall serve in appearance, at least, as a sort of substitute for, or sham, settlement.

THE INDIA COUNCIL, AND EASTERN EXCHANGES.

So accustomed has the public of late become to vagaries on the part of the India Council that a steady adherence to a settled policy, even for a couple of weeks together, may be almost looked upon as a phenomenon. It is only upon this principle that we can account for the extreme anger which was shown by some of the newspapers when it was found that the whole amount of the Government bills advertised for tender on the 21st Feb. had been allotted, although the price obtained was nearly 2 per cent. below that previously given. In reality, however, there was no inconsistency in this action, as the process of "breaking the rate," as it is termed, had been gone through a week earlier. At that time no doubt there was reason to complain that the council acted not only inconsistently, but with very short-sighted regard to its own interests, or rather to those of the Indian public. The burdens thrown upon the finances of that country at the present time are heavy enough without being added to by adverse exchange; but this is what the India Council have been doing. Nothing seemed more reasonable in face of the famine requirements than the reduction of their weekly drawings to half the usual amount (or 17½ lakhs only) in the early part of the month; and this, combined with their rejection of tenders below 1s. 10d. on the 2nd and 9th ult., had contributed to strengthen the market, so that they had every prospect by a little consistent firmness of seeing that rate maintained for the rest of the financial year. It was, therefore, a matter of surprise to find, after the tenders of the 16th ult., that 1s. 9⅞d. and 15-16ths had been accepted, and that the small degree of firmness necessary to hold their own had not been exerted. The effect upon the market was most depressing. It was seen that the Government had no minimum, and calculations previously made under the impression that 1s. 10d. might be taken as a fixed basis to work upon were found delusive—these causes combined leading, as we have seen, to a drop of 2 per cent. by the time the next tenders were made; so that the Government was fain to accept, not as before, a trifling fraction under 1s. 10d., but little over 1s. 9½d. The above action on the part of the India Council form but one sample among many of the strange vagaries which it commits in its financial operations, and justifies the regret so often expressed that some means cannot be found for conducting the Government of India which will not have the effect of bringing the Indian Government periodically into the Exchange market with as little benefit to itself as to financial interests generally.

THE JAPAN POST-OFFICE REPORT.

THERE is probably no better indication of the progress of civilisation in any given nation than the efficient administration of its Postal service. We observe, therefore, with very much pleasure the satisfactory character of the Report which has been published in the local papers by Mr. H. MAYESIMA, the Postmaster-General in Japan. Although at present the postal service in that country is still a source of expenditure instead of income to the Government, it is evidently making such progress that we may reasonably look, before many years, to find it in the latter category. The revenue for the year 1876 exceeded the estimate by about $25,000, while the expenditure was within what was provided by about $1,000. The total revenue amounted to $575,201, and the total expenditure to $713,244. This shows, no doubt, a considerable sum to make up, but considering the newness of the service, there is no ground for doubting that this end will be accomplished. The organisation of a reliable and efficient service is evidently thoroughly at the heart of the Postmaster-General, who is fully prepared to set to work in earnest, and to make use of all the hints he can obtain by studying the systems of post-office organisation in force in other countries. At present the system is so far developed that the Japanese Government issues stamps, post-cards, money orders, and have even a savings-bank. They have established a postal agency at Shanghai, and opened communication between it and the leading ports of Japan; and they purpose shortly also establishing stamp and receiving agencies at the other open ports in China. They have also granted to the National Mail Steamship Company a subsidy of $250,000, and a loan of $810,000 to enable it to purchase the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's branch line of steamers, "thus increasing and facilitating communication "between the different ports of Japan and between China "and Japan, and securing it almost entirely to the Japanese "flag." This unquestionably looks like energy, and if the same vigour which has been infused into the service be continued and be combined with due caution and judgment, we have every reason to expect that the Japan postal service will prove a thorough success. Speaking of the postal service between Japan and other countries, Mr. MAYESIMA says that though still restricted they present an agreeable contrast to the entire absence of such relations a few years since. Until very recently all correspondence despatched from, or received in Japan, was entirely under the control of foreign Governments. Now, however, there is a regular exchange of mails between Japan and the United States and other countries via the United States. We trust that this satisfactory commencement will be the prelude to a further extension of Japanese postal arrangements with foreign countries, and that they will prove as successful in every way as is well deserved from the commendable energy which has been infused into them.

NOTICE OF ABANDONMENT.

IN a recent issue we gave the report of a case of special interest to readers in Singapore, Saigon, and Hong Kong, as the facts which gave rise to it arose in those places, but also of much importance to mercantile communities, as containing a warning with reference to the sale of vessels on account of the underwriters, which it is very necessary should be borne in mind. The case in question, KALTENBACH v. MACKENZIE, arose in consequence of the ship Admiral Protet having struck in 1871 near Saigon, and having been sold there, on behalf of the underwriters, by the representatives of the plaintiff's firm. There appears to be little ground to doubt that, taking into account the difficulties of repairing such a vessel there, the agent was justified in selling her, the surveyors having given it as their opinion that the vessel would cost more to repair than her value when the repairs were finished. The lucky Chinaman, however, who purchased her for $1,600, managed to get her slipped along the coast to Singapore, where another enterprising son of Ham bought her for $2,500; and having had her repaired, has since had her engaged in the coasting trade. Upon these facts the underwriters resisted the claim for the amount of the insurance, the grounds of resistance being first that the facts did not justify the abandonment of the ship to them; and secondly that they were not liable, as no notice of abandonment had been given. As already observed, the circumstances seem fairly to justify the abandonment, but the fact that no notice was given to the underwriters is, according to the Chief Justice, fatal. Notice of an appeal has been put in; but upon general grounds, as well as on that of the authority attaching to so definitely expressed an opinion as that given by the Chief Justice, we make little doubt that the judgment already given will be upheld. The two elements necessary to make the underwriters responsible for constructive total loss are that it will not pay to repair the injured vessel, and that notice of abandonment be given to the underwriters. The latter is obviously only a reasonable provision of law to secure bona fides in such cases; and, although the point is of a technical character, we must admit the underwriters in this case were justified in making it; and trust that the prominence with which it brings forward the necessity of giving notice of abandonment in cases of constructive total loss will form a useful warning generally to avoid so serious an error.

JUDICIAL ADMINISTRATION IN CHINA.

A VIEW which was put forward in a pamphlet written over the signature of "Justum," (to which we recently called attention), demands more than a passing notice. It forms one among the many instances which have to be regretted, of the injury which is likely to be done to the Chinese cause by the over-zeal of persons imperfectly informed as to the merits of the questions upon which they undertake to enlighten the public. In the pamphlet in question an apparent miscarriage of justice through a technical difficulty is made the ground for making it appear that justice is badly administered in China, in cases where Chinese have a claim against British subjects—a view which is entirely contrary to the fact, and which does very great injustice to the judges of the Supreme Court and all who have been charged with the task of putting the law into effect in that country. Exterritoriality is an absolute necessity in countries where law is so defectively administered as in China; and in which it would be simply an impossibility to place the subjects of foreign nations at the mercy of the native tribunals—where, to say nothing of bribery, torture is still resorted to as an appropriate means of eliciting evidence. It is extremely unfortunate at a time when the Chinese are willing to come forward to a great extent and to endeavour to establish relations upon a more friendly footing than they have existed on hitherto, for over-zealous advocates to rush in and, by raising difficulties which it is impossible to surmount, make it appear hopeless even to deal with them upon a fair and equitable basis. The most unfortunate element connected with this is, that these advocates generally go very much further than the Chinese themselves; who are sensible enough to recognise the necessity of some difficulties in dealing with foreign nations. At all events, in the matter of exterritoriality, it is known by those who are likely to be good authorities on the subject, that the Chinese officials, though they would of course prefer that the jurisdiction of their countrymen in China should extend, as in other countries, over aliens as well as natives resident in it, are aware that as matters at present stand this is simply an impossibility; and such being the case, it is worse than useless for foreign advocates of Chinese rights to raise the question. The Supreme Court for China and Japan, established under special order in Council with a view to carrying out the exterritorial administration of justice in those countries, has afforded substantial justice to Chinese suitors in all cases which have been brought before it; and this we believe the Chinese are themselves perfectly ready to acknowledge. Even if in some few cases justice has failed, it is not a matter for very great surprise when the "glorious uncertainty of the law" anywhere, and more necessarily under the exceptional circumstances existing in China, is taken into account; and it is therefore extremely unjust as well as extremely unwise to take any one instance where there has been an apparent failure, and to speak of the exception as if it were the rule. We believe that more harm has been done to our relations with China by the intemperate zeal of her advocates than by any other cause; and in such cases as the present those who have the true interests of China at heart must strongly feel the force of the proverb, "Save me from my friends." A discussion of the extraterritorial question would only be the opening up of a very sore point, which it is impossible to enter upon without going counter to the national dignity of the Chinese; and such a discussion is entirely unnecessary, seeing that the Chinese Government have expressed their acquiescence in the existing state of affairs by specially recognising the Supreme Court.

THE CHINESE IN CUBA.

THE report of the Cuba Commission to inquire into the condition of Chinese coolies on the plantations there, which was originally made over two years ago and was reproduced about a year back, has again been dragged before the public in an article in the Saturday Review, where the obvious exaggerations and misstatements in it are treated as "Gospel." In reviewing the second report, issued as far back as July last year, we pointed out that the Commissioners were only six weeks in Cuba, and that the report purports to give the gist of an amount of evidence which it would be completely impossible to take in that space of time. The depositions were avowedly taken in lumps, such as the evidence of CHIEN and 170 others, and of HSU-LU-SHENG and ninety-eight others—and consequently could not have been sifted in any way. This fact is, however, now completely lost sight of, and the article in the Saturday is followed up by a letter in the Globe from Mr. HENRY STUART FAGAN, who, pointing out the severe ill-treatment to which the coolies are subjected, and adding that, "in spite of great obstruction from the Cuban planters "the Commissioners succeeded in taking 1,176 depositions "and received eighty-five petitions signed by 1,660 coolies "(all in six weeks, be it remembered!), urges Mr. GLAD-"STONE to take up this sad case in Parliament." We are not disposed to deny that the unlucky Chinese coolies in Cuba suffer many wrongs upon the plantations; but if anything is calculated to prevent those wrongs ever being redressed it is the grossly and palpably exaggerated account of them given in this report. The sum and substance of this question can be stated in a few words, and we cannot but reiterate what we said when treating the subject on receipt of the official report, that is in July last, namely, that the Macao emigration being swept away, the next stage of reform clearly rests with the Chinese themselves and their authorities, and that "all attempts that may be made abroad will as-"suredly prove useless unless the Chinese devise some means "of preventing men from being deceived into making con-"tracts to serve in countries where they cannot feel sure of "receiving fair treatment and adequate protection."

MR. MEDHURST, H.M. Consul at Shanghai, who has arrived by the present mail, will be succeeded by Mr. MONGAN, at present Consul at Tientsin. Mr. C. A. SINCLAIR will leave England to resume charge of the Consulate at Foochow by the French mail of April 6. The inconsistency in the amount of the emoluments respectively attaching to the British Consulates at Canton and Shanghai, the former being £1,600, and the latter only £1,500, to which we have more than once called attention, again appears in the Civil Service Estimates. The retirement of Mr. MEDHURST offers a good opportunity of adjusting this matter, and, seeing that Shanghai is now of very much more importance than Canton, whatever the latter may have been in the old days, it would be well that the Consul at Shanghai should be made Consul-General, with proportionate pay. This would also be of advantage in giving him his proper status side by side with the representatives of the United States and other countries.

IN the account which the Hon. Mr. GROSVENOR gave at the Association in Aid of the Deaf and Dumb, on Tuesday last, of his recent journey to Yunnan—of which a report appears in another column—he showed his sympathy with, at all events, one of the infirmities of the afflicted assembly. He was dumb as to all connected with the investigation of the circumstances attending Mr. MARGARY'S death, merely saying upon this point:—"What happened "then was unfortunately not in his power to relate, as the "papers containing his report were not yet published by "Government, and were, therefore, not public property." It is certainly high time that his report was published, and we trust that it will not be much longer before it be forthcoming. The account just given does not add much to what is already known concerning his journey, but is interesting as coming from his own lips.

IT has been stated by the Earl of DERBY that the Convention entered into by Sir THOMAS WADE has not yet been ratified. A deputation from the Associated Chambers of Commerce waited upon him on the 27th ult., when Mr. ASHWORTH, one of the gentlemen composing it, asked whether the Treaty had been ratified. Lord DERBY'S reply was that it had not. It was under consideration, and Sir THOMAS WADE had been requested to prepare a memorandum upon the whole subject, giving in full his reasons for every concession he had made. The answer is significant, and is satisfactory as showing that the Government is determined to act with caution and will not be induced to give up any rights already existing under Treaty, without being fully satisfied of the justice or advantage of doing so. The clause which will be most carefully scrutinised is no doubt that relating to the Lekin and other internal taxation.

A FACT reported in the last papers from China is significant as showing the impolicy of—where it can be avoided—accepting monetary compensation from China. It appears that an insurrection in Yunnan took place in May last consequent upon an attempt to levy as much as Tls. 1,000,000 (£300,000) from the inhabitants of the Teng-Yueh district. It has been repeatedly found in similar cases that the local officials take advantage of having to provide a given sum to exact one much larger, and in consequence the odium of the populace is raised against the foreigners who are the cause, however remote, of the injustice.

The American Congress Committee which is investigating the question of Chinese emigration have reported against the continuance of the present system, recommending the President to take measures to secure a modification of the Chinese treaty, confining it strictly to commercial purposes. They recommend that Congress should legislate with a view to restraining the great influx of Asiatics to the United States. The Committee do not believe that the measure will be regarded unfavourably by China; but, whether so or not, they are of opinion that the Pacific coast should be relieved from the terrible scourge.

THE North China Herald states that it understands "the "first of the Consular appointments under the New Con- "vention has been made. Mr. E. C. BABER is going to "Chungking, and is making preparations for his journey." There is evidently some error in this statement, seeing that the Convention is not yet ratified. The exact fact is no doubt that Mr. BABER is to be sent to Chungking in anticipation of the port being opened. We are of course able to send Consular officials to any part of China under passport, and this is most probably what has been done.

WITH reference to the claim made by Spain to Sulu, which has from time to time been noticed in these columns as questionable, and the assertion of which recently caused some strong diplomatic action to be taken by Germany, we have reason to believe that a decision will very shortly be arrived at by our Government on the question at issue. The trade of Sulu is of some importance to British merchants, and the arbitrary action of the Spanish Government should have been checked by our Government in a decided manner at the outset.

OUR Amsterdam correspondent draws attention to an important article in the Dagblad, in which the writer urges that the termination of the protracted war in Atchin is of so much importance that a Bill should be passed through the Chambers to enable the Government to depart upon this occasion from the ordinary constitutional rule which forbids the despatch of any part of the regular army to a foreign country, and to send a detachment of troops to bring the hostilities to an end.

THE presentations at the Levée held by the PRINCE of WALES on the 26th ult. included his Excellency J. POPE-HENNESSY, the new Governor of Hong Kong, and Commander PARR, R.N., promoted for his services with the Arctic Expedition, and appointed to the Audacious, flagship of the China Squadron. The Chinese Envoy with his Secretaries and Attachés were among those present in the diplomatic circle.

IN the estimates for the Civil Service, detailed in another column, for the year ending March, 1877, appears an item of "£10,400 for the Yunnan Mission, to be repaid by the Chinese Government." Costs generally follow the verdict, but we trust in this case the verdict will follow the costs.

THE Members of the Anti-Opium Society have had an interview with Sir THOS. WADE, to lay before him their views with respect to the manner in which the question of the Opium duties is treated in the Chefoo Convention, and with respect to our Opium policy in China generally.

WE understand that in consequence of the uncertain aspect of the Eastern question and its bearing upon Russia the Russian Steam Navigation Company have decided not to despatch any steamers this season to or from China and Odessa.

DISQUIETING rumours have been prevalent during the week of further disturbances in Japan. It will be observed from our Stock and Share List that a fall has taken place in Japan Loans—probably to some extent in consequence.

THE Messageries Maritimes intend to despatch the Volga from London, as an extra steamer on the 31st inst., to Yokohama, calling at the intermediate ports in the Straits and China.

WE understand that tenders have been invited by the Directors of the P. and O. Company for the construction of steamers of 3,500 tons, with a speed of fifteen knots.

ADMIRAL POLO DE BERNABE has been appointed to take command of a Spanish squadron to cruise in the China and Celebes Seas, and to visit the Sulu Archipelago.

THE CIVIL SERVICE ESTIMATES—CHINA, JAPAN, AND THE FAR EAST.

That portion of the Civil Service Estimates for the financial year ending March, 1878, which specially refers to the Far East, commences with the Diplomatic Service, under which head we find votes of £6,000 for Her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary in China, of £8,00 for the Secretary of Legation, of £940 for the Chinese Secretary, of £1,000 for the two Second Secretaries (one at £600, one at £400, per annum), of £200 for the Chaplain and of £500 for outfits, and travelling and incidental expenses, giving a grand total of £9,440, against £9,420 in the last estimates. The salary of the official holding the office of Chinese Secretary is £20 above that for last year—in accordance with the regulation which prescribes that he shall receive an annual increase of £20 up to £1,000. We may here state that a sum of £17,300, being one-third of the estimated net expenditure upon the Diplomatic and Consular Services in China, is contributed by the Indian Government and paid into the Exchequer. Another estimated source of revenue is comprised in the Fines, Fees, and other casual receipts connected with the Consular Service, which are calculated at £8,500 for China, Japan, and Siam, these figures being the same as in the preceding Estimates. As regards Japan, the figures present totals of £4,000 for the Minister, £800 for the Secretary of Legation, and £840 for the Japanese Secretary. These amounts differ in no respect from those for the past year, except as regards the Japanese Secretary, whose salary rises £20 annually up to £900. The salaries of the assistants, &c., are included under one total for all Legations. We come next to the Consular Services, which, as regards China, figure for the following amounts :—

Canton	£1,600	Ningpo	£900
Shanghai	1,500	Amoy	900
Foochow	1,300	Chefoo	800
Hankow	1,000	Swatow	800
Tientsin	900	Taiwan	800
Newchwang	900

The total is £11,400, which is the same as last year. The total required for Vice-Consuls is £4,200, which is also the same as in the last Estimates, the details being Shanghai, Kiukiang, and Whampoa, each £750, Canton, £700, Pagoda Island, Foochow, £750, (£150 per annum being granted in addition to salary to the present holder of the post), and Taku £500. The remaining charges for the China Consular Service may be thus summed up :—Assistants £6,900—namely, six first class at £400, a like number of second-class at £350, and eight third-class at £300 each, there being no change under this head. The amount required for Interpreters is also the same, £5,500, viz., one first-class at £700, three second-class at £600, and six third-class at £500. Writers and Linguists figure for £2,835, against £2,841, in the last Estimates a decrease of £6. Student Interpreters for £3,150 and Teachers for Student Interpreters for £443. Passing on we find an estimated amount required for "Wages and allowances to Gaolers, Constables, Watchmen, Boatmen, Porters, Coolies, and others employed in public services," of £4,570, a decrease of £37 on the last estimate, which was £4,607. There are also items under this head of £200 as allowance to the Assessor of the Mixed Court at Shanghai, in consideration of his salary being below £700 per annum ; of £200 as an extra allowance to the Consul at Tientsin, and £100 as allowance to the officer in charge at Tamsui, these amounts being the same as in the preceding Estimates. There are also charged in this section of the Estimates the subjoined amounts, under the head of "Mission and Superintendency :"—Assistant Chinese Secretary, £600 ; Assistant and Accountant, £500—an increase of £20, the salary of this official rising £20 annually until it attains £500—and Surgeon £700. This last item shows an increase of £100 upon the Estimate for 1876-77 a special allowance of £100 being granted to the officer holding the post on account of his being in possession of a knowledge of the Chinese language.

This section of the Estimates concludes with a number of items which are termed "Incidental expenses." These are headed by the Consular-office expenses, viz., Canton and Shanghai, £248 each, a decrease of £34 ; Swatow, Amoy, Foochow, Ningpo, Hankow, and Tientsin, £90 each, a decrease of £36 ; Newchwang, Chefoo, Kiukiang, and Taiwan, £68 each, a decrease of £3 ; Pagoda Island, Whampoa, Tamsui, and Taku (Vice-Consulates), £36 each, a decrease of £2 10s. ; the total being £1,452, against £1,548, showing a decrease of £96. Then follow estimates for Legation Guards and Escorts at Peking, £598, and their horses and clothing, £632 (decrease £50) ; outfit and travelling expenses for Consular Officers and Student Interpreters, £2,600; printing and stationery, £300; postages and telegrams, £1,500 (increase £295); allowances for purchase of coal, £275 (decrease £17); Consular Prison Expenses, £530 (decrease £30); Medical attendance, £1,450 (increase £150); relief of distressed British subjects, £25 (decrease £50); and other incidental expenses, £750 (decrease £95). Except where otherwise stated, these amounts are the same as those which appeared in the Estimates for 1876—7.

The estimated cost of "Salaries, Allowances, and Wages" for the Japan Consular Service presents a total of £13,203, an increase of £122, the total for the past year having been £13,081. The amount required for Consuls is £3,600, the same amount as in the last estimates. This is divided as follows:—Hiogo £1,000, Nagasaki £900, Hakodadi £800, Kanagawa £900. The Vice-Consulate at Yedo is set down at £600, and those at Yedo and Ne-e-gata for corresponding amounts, the total charge for Vice-Consulates being, as for last year, £1,800. The remaining charges on account of the Japan Service are as follows:—Assistant Japanese Secretary, £600; Medical officer, £250; First-class Assistants, one at £500, three at £400, total £1,700; Second-class Assistants, four at £300, total £1,200; Interpreter's Allowances to Assistants, £500; Student Interpreters, £800; Writers and Linguists, £543 (decrease £4); Gaolers, Constables, &c., £2,210 (increase £126.) We then arrive at the "Incidental Expenses, which include the following items:—Pay of Legation Escort, £722, and their horses, clothing, &c., £398; allowances to Consular Officials and Student Interpreters for outfit and travelling, £925; printing and stationery, £130 (increase £20); postages and telegrams, £400 (increase £155); allowances for office expenses, £587 (decrease £37); prison expenses, £300 (increase £50); medical attendance, £250; relief of distressed British subjects, £75 (increase £50), and Incidental expenses, £430 (decrease £26). These amounts are the same as taken in the last Estimates, unless it is otherwise stated.

The estimate for the Supreme Court of China and Japan presents the same total as in the last Estimates, viz., £8,126. The charges under this head exhibit no variation, being as follows:—Judge, £3,500; Deputy Judge, £1,200; Law Secretary, £750; Law Clerk, £750; Chief Clerk, £350; Clerk for Civil causes, £400; Criminal Clerk and Assistant Clerk, each £306; Chief Usher, £260; Chief Constable, £164; Messengers and Coolies, £200. There are also items of £375 for outfits and travelling expenses, £60 for printing and stationery, £50 for postages and telegrams, £40 for prison expenses, and £120 for incidental expenses.

The special expenditure set down for the Consular Establishment in Siam presents the following items:—Agent and Consul-general, £1,600; Vice-Consul, £500; First Assistant, £400; Second Assistant, £350; Medical Attendant, £300; one Student Interpreter, £200; Writers, £59; and Gaolers, Constables, &c., £417. The total amounts to £3,826, showing no alteration from the last estimates. Other items referring to the Siam Consular establishment are:—Outfit and travelling expenses, £250; printing and stationery, £10; postage and telegrams, £50; prison expenses, £100; and incidental expenses, £250. No alteration from the estimates for 1876-77 is shown by these items, except as regards printing and stationery, which are charged £10 less, and incidental expenses, which figure at a reduction of £50.

The differences existing between the present and the last Estimates in the expenditure upon the Consular Services in China may be readily appreciated from the following recapitulation of the figures of which we have given the details above:—Salaries, Allowances, and Wages are charged £40,298, against £40,221, an increase of £77. Legation Guards, £1,230, against £1,280, a decrease of £50; Postages and Telegrams, £1,500, against £1,205, an increase of £295; Prison Expenses, £530, against £560, a decrease of £30; Medical Attendants, £1,450, against £1,300, an increase of £150; relief of distressed British subjects, £25, against £75, a decrease of £50, and incidental expenses £2,212, against £2,420, a decrease of £208. The only items which figure for the same amounts as in the last Estimates are the charges of £2,600 for outfits and travelling expenses, and of £300 for printing and stationery. The figures which relate to Japan and Siam—which in the last Estimates were for the first time separated from those referring to China, and which include the charges for the Supreme Court for China and Japan—are as follows:—Salaries, Allowances, and Wages, £24,155, against £24,033, an increase of £122; Postages and Telegrams, £560, against £345, an increase of £155; Prison Expenses, £440, against £390, an increase of £50; Relief of Distressed British subjects, £75, against £25, an increase of £50; and Incidental Expenses, £1,287, against £1,380, a decrease of £93. The items which exhibit no alteration are those of £1,120 for Legation Guards, £1,550 for Outfits and Travelling Expenses, £200 for Printing and Stationery, and £250 for medical attendance.

Other places in the Far East, the charges for which are not included in the total given above, figure for the following sums:—Manila Consul, £1,100; Allowance for Rent, Office Expenses, &c., £500; Vice-Consulate at Ilo Ilo, for Rent, &c., £100; Batavia Consul, £200; Borneo Consul-General, £300; Allowance £250 (increase £50). There is no sum allowed for a paid Consul at Saigon, but an amount of £400 appears as an allowance for office expenses, &c., the same as last year.

The sums required this year on account of Consular buildings in China and Japan amount to £19,001; being for new buildings and alterations, £7,745 (against £11,748); rents of Legation and Consular buildings in Japan, £1,756 (against £1,371); ditto in China, £2,342 (against £2,339); allowances for house rent to officers of the Supreme Court at Shanghai, and to the Linguist at Whampoa, £1,157, against £1,545; repairs and contingencies, £3,000; and salaries and office and travelling expenses, £3,000. The total is £7,202 less than the estimate for 1876-77, which was £26,203.

Included in these Estimates there is an account of the pensions and the superannuation allowances which are granted to retired officials who have served at home and abroad. Amongst these we find the subjoined grants for services in the Far East:—Sir R. G. Macdonell, Governor of Hong Kong, £1,000; Sir Rutherford Alcock, British Minister in China, £1,550; G. A. Trotter, Clerk to the Chief Justice at Hong Kong, £65; H. W. Parr, Harbour-Master at Labuan, £50; the Rev. M. B. Johnston, Secretary and Superintending Registrar in China, £600; Ying-Ta-Sing, Messenger at Shanghai, £10.

Monetary and Commercial.

In the Produce Markets, although the political situation is regarded as more favourable business continues in an unsatisfactory position, transactions in almost every article having been extremely limited. Tea is still being forced off at auction at irregular prices. The public sales of Silk have gone off at a general decline in values. Coffee has sustained a further fall. The quarterly sales of Cinnamon have been marked by a general decline of 1d. to 3d. per lb. Sugar has slightly improved, and transactions to some extent in Penang and China are recorded. No business has been done in Camphor, Galls, Hemp, Japan Wax or Sago. Other articles are without material alteration.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week was 3,368,397 lbs., which, compared with 3,386,436 lbs. of the preceding week, shows a reduction of about ½ per cent. Of the above total, 2,102,484 lbs. was for home consumption, 666,075 lbs. was removed coastwise, 440,504 lbs. was exported, 156,285 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 3,049 lbs. was for ships' stores. For the same period the sum of £52,562 was received as duty. In the previous week £54,719 was received in this way, so that there is a falling off between the two totals of £2,157, or something under 4 per cent. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week:—Coffee, 521,775 lbs.; cocoa, 148,534 lbs.; tobacco, 396,833 lbs.; cigars, 18,144 lbs.; wine, 176,757 gallons; brandy, 31,688 gallons; and rum, 35,193 gallons.

The Council drafts on India have been allotted at about ½ per cent. above the price obtained last week. In all 17½ lacs were offered, and on Calcutta £133,000 (nominal) was sold at an average of 1s. 9.64d; on Bombay £41,000 (nominal), and on Madras £1,000 (nominal) at an average of 1s. 9⅝d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 9⅝d. for bills, and 1s. 9 11-16d. for telegraphic transfers will receive in full; on Bombay at 1s. 9⅝d. for telegraphic transfer about 20 per cent., and above in full.

In the Silver market very considerable sales have been effected at 56d., and the quotation is now 56⅛d. per oz. standard, buyers. Mexican dollars have been disposed of at 56¼d. per oz., being a considerable reduction from the rates recently current.

At the meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce a resolution was passed that memorials be sent to the First Lord of Her Majesty's Treasury, and to the Secretaries of State for India and Foreign Affairs, calling the attention of the Government to the very unsatisfactory position of the long-pending project of a direct land route for commerce between Rangoon and Kiang-Hung, on the Upper Kamboja River, south-west frontier of China, which route Her Majesty's Government directed to be surveyed by successive despatches to the Government of India, dated so long back as the 29th of September, 1866, and the 7th of February, 1867, in the dry season of which year the first moiety of the route—249 miles—was consequently surveyed, a very satisfactory report thereof, with map and sections, being presented to Parliament in print in 1868, on the motion of Sir T. Bazley, M.P. for Manchester. A resolution was also passed, urging upon the Ministry the necessity of the interests of trade, commerce, and agriculture being placed in charge of a separate department of the Government, presided over by a Cabinet Minister, instead of being under the Foreign-office as at present.

Lord Derby has received a deputation from the Associated Chambers of Commerce, the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, and others, on the subject of the Anglo-French Commercial Treaty. Mr. Whitwell, M.P., introduced the deputation, and Mr. Jacob Behrens, Mr. James Ashworth, Mr. Benjamin Armitage, and other gentlemen, explained the object of the deputation, the main purpose of which was to ask the Foreign-office to urge upon the French Government the retention of the ad valorem in preference to specific duties. Lord Derby said he understood the ground upon which the deputation argued the question was that we in this country, being the principal producers of cheap and comparatively bulky goods, were sure to be called upon to pay more than our share if any other duty than that of ad valorem is adopted. That was a strong and a clear ground to take, and the Government would not fail to do justice to the arguments. They had repeatedly mde representations in favour of the ad valorem principle, and would continue to do so.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Market Résumé says :—There is little cheering to report in the aspect of our market ; privately, business generally has been greatly restricted, and to effect sales importers have had to make considerable concessions as regards price. The chief feature to note has been the large quantity of teas forced off at public auction ; nearly three-fourths of the Congou cleared consisted of Red-leafs, and the trade being now much over supplied with these descriptions quotations have touched an extremely low point. Home consumption shows a falling-off as compared with same period last year, attributable, doubtless, to the general dulness of business throughout the country; on the other hand, the export figures exhibit a slight improvement. Congou: — Black-leafs: Sound to good common, stocks heavy; prices must be quoted fully ½d. per lb. lower; better kinds up to 1s. 2d. without animation. Good medium to fine and finest, transactions comparatively limited. Red Leafs: Common kinds have been in large supply, and prices are now lower than for some considerable time past, and quite 1d. per lb. under those ruling at this time last year; medium and fine Kaisows and Ching-wos, little doing. Scented Teas: Capers and Pekoes have not been greatly in demand, and prices have receded about 1d. per lb. Greens: Good to fine lines continue to attract attention both in Moyune and Ping Suey kinds, but without improvement in relative values. Indian Teas continue to sell freely, quotations unchanged, with the exception of Broken Pekoes, which command full prices. Public sales since the 2nd ult. comprise a total of 95,065 packages.

Digitized by Google

Quotations:—Congou: Black and Red Siftings and leafy Tea, 6d. to 7½d. Black Leaf: Low to good common, 7¾d. to 8½d.; fair to good medium, 9d. to 1s. 4d.; fine and finest 1s. 5d. to 2s. Red Leafs: Low to good common, 7d. to 8½d.; fair to good, 9d. to 1s. 2d.; fine and finest 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. Paklings: Common kinds, 9½d. to 1s.; fine and finest, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d. Amoy: Good common, 8d. to 9½d.; fair to fine, 10d. to 1s. 4d. Tayshans:—Common, 8d.; fair, 8½d. to 1s.; good to fine, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d. Souchong: Low to good common, 8½d. to 10d.; fair to medium, 11d. to 1s. 4d.; fine and finest, 1s. 6d. to 2s. Oolong: Common to good, 11d. to 1s. 2d.; fair to fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 8d.; fine and finest, 1s. 9d. to 2s. 6d.; supply excessive; prices downward. Scented Capers: Low, 11½d. to 1s.; common to good 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 6d.; finest, 1s. 7d. to 2s. nominal. Scented Orange Pekoe:—Low, 11d. to 1s.; common to good, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. Greens: Gunpowder, 9d. to 3s. 8d. for finest; imperial, 7d. to 1s. 8d.; Hyson, 6d. to 3s. 6d. for finest, and Young Hyson, 7d. up to 1s. 10d.

SILK.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says:—The periodical Public Sales are concluded. The result is much as might have been anticipated from the previous long continued depression of trade and the large quantity thus forced upon the market—a heavy cost to the sellers—but this good effect will have resulted: holders and particularly throwsters will have been relieved of a heavy weight, and manufacturers will have had the opportunity to replenish their stocks, which, speaking generally from their long cessation of purchases, must have been reduced to a low point, upon very moderate terms, thus furnishing as it were a fresh starting point and a fair prospect of doing some good. The Canton raw silk sold very irregularly, but generally at prices showing a reduction of probably 10 per cent., and in some cases 15 per cent. In China silk the fall had been more decidedly anticipated by the pressure from the Continental markets. The general market has been completely absorbed by the public sales. The deliveries are very unfavourable, marking that the mills are going short time.

CINNAMON.

The quarterly public sales held on the 26th ult. presented a total of 3,058 bales Ceylon, against 3,377 bales in November, and 2,560 in February, 1876. The sales commenced flatly, and only a small part sold; but as they proceeded holders met the market freely, there was more disposition to buy, and the bulk found buyers, viz., about 2,500 bales. Prices show an almost general decline of 2d. to 3d. per lb. from the last auctions in November for good to fine, and 1d. to 2d. for thirds and fourths, but previous rates for superior. Subjoined is the result in detail:—

637 bales	First sort, good to fine at	2/5 to	2/9
	superior (a few bales)	2/10	3/7
	ordinary to medium	1/9	2/4
1,312	Second sort, fine to superior	2/1	2/5
	medium to good	1/9	2/
	ordinary	1/6	1/9
806	Third sort, fine and superior	1/11	2/
	middling to good	1/7	1/10
	low and ordinary	1/2	1/6
303	Fourth sort, good to fine	1/5	1/7
	ordinary to medium	1/1	1/4

Since the sales about 150 bales have been sold, second sort at 1s. 10d., third at 1s. 8d. per lb. The next quarterly sales are fixed for May 28.

At the sales 1,672 bags Ceylon Chips met a good demand, and about 1,300 bags found buyers at rather dearer rates, ordinary coarse at 3½d. to 4d., medium to good at 4½d. to 5½d., fine at 6½d. to 7d., clippings, &c., at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9½d.; 38 boxes broken quill sold at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d. per lb.

COFFEE.—The large arrivals of Ceylon have continued to exercise a depressing influence, and prices have continually given way, until a total reduction of about 7s. was established for Plantation, making a total fall of 15s. to 16s. from the highest point in January; pale kinds, however, declined only 3s. to 4s. At the close an improved demand has appeared at the large public sales of Plantation, and a recovery of about 1s. has been established. Middling closes at 105s. to 106s., against 111s. to 113s. a fortnight ago, and 120s. to 121s. at the highest point in January. In Native only small sales have been made at 84s. Prices close as follows:—Plantation triage at 79s. to 92s., common grey to coloury small at 95s. 6d. to 100s. 6d., low middling grey kinds at 101s. to 104s., middling at 104s. 6d., to 106s. 6d., good middling to fine middling bright coloury at 107s. to 110s., good to fine bold at 111s. to 119s., one cask at 122s., pea-berry at 111s. 6d. to 116s. 6d.; Native Ceylon, fine ordinary at 84s. to 85s., bold 89s., pea-berry at 90s. to 91s. 6d., small at 75s. 6d. The sales of other East India have included 700 bags Singapore, Pari Pari at 74s., good pale at 82s., fine bold brownish at 91s., pale Bonthyne at 80s., fine ditto at 86s. 6d.

COTTON.—Owing to unexpectedly heavy receipts at the United States ports a depressed tone has prevailed, and prices of American have gradually declined, until a total reduction of about ⅝d. was established, but with an improved demand at the close a slight recovery has taken place. In East India kinds sales have been restricted, prices being in most instances ¼d. lower, Tinnivelly being quoted 5¼d. to 6d., good fair to good; Western Madras 5¼d. to 5½d., fully fair to good; Coconada 5⅝d. good fair. For arrival, Tinnivelly 5⅝d. October sailing, good fair.

COCOANUT OIL.—The market has been without animation. Cochin is quoted £41 10s. to £41, Ceylon in pipes £37.

GAMBIER.—Only a limited demand prevails either on the spot or for arrival; in the latter position 50 tons December sailing have been sold at 20s. 9d., 100 tons February-March shipment, at 21s. ex-ship all faults, and 100 tons February-March shipment at 20s. 7½d. ex-ship all faults. On the spot 150 bales have been sold at 21s. 3d., and six bags cubes bought in at 32s. per cwt.

GUM COPAL.—228 cases 430 bags Manila were bought in, blocky and soft dark at 15s. to 22s.

GUM DAMAR.—86 cases Singapore bought in at 77s. 6d. to 80s., 7 cases good pale Batavian sold at 75s. to 76s.

Privately there is still little demand, and sales have been very small. White: The market is steady, with small private sales; none have been offered by auction. For arrival 25 tons February-March shipment have been sold at 7d.

PLUMBAGO.—At auction of 254 barrels Ceylon, about 70 barrels sold, dullish bold to good bright small, and extra bold lump at 12s. 6d. to 16s. 6d., fair chips 10s.

SUGAR.—Within the past few days an improved tone has been exhibited; prices of all kinds have advanced about 6d. per cwt., and an upward tendency is still manifested. The following are the week's sales of East Indian descriptions. On the 23rd ult. on the spot 200 tons brown China sold at 19s. 9d. On the 27th in auction 481 bags European Penang sold, ordinary to good brown at 21s. to 23s. 6d.; 1,272 bags brown China (Hong Kong) were bought in at 21s. to 21s. 6d. MANCHESTER GOODS.

The slightly improved tone of the Liverpool Cotton Market early in the week relieved the depression to a little extent, but gave no impetus to the demand. There has again been an exceedingly quiet market, and the limited business that has taken place has been done at irregular prices for both Yarns and Goods. Values of the latter are perhaps less affected by the absence of inquiry than the former.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

AN AUSTRALIAN CLIPPER MISSING.—On the 6th of August last the Great Queensland, a magnificent vessel, owned by Messrs. Taylor and Co., of London, left the Thames for Melbourne with thirty-five passengers, a crew of thirty-five hands, and a general cargo comprising fifty tons of brimstone, a few dozen hogsheads of saltpetre, a couple of tons of patent gunpowder, some packages of cartridges, a large quantity of spirits in cask, two hundred tons of pig iron, and from fifty to one hundred tons of pebble gunpowder. Six days after she left London the Great Queensland was spoken off the coast of Cornwall, having just completed her passage down the Channel. Since that day she has never been spoken, seen, or heard of. Six months have elapsed, but no news of her has reached Lloyd's A life-buoy with her name on it was picked up some weeks ago off Fowey Harbour, in Cornwall, and a second buoy, entangled in some fragments of wreck, was found off the Lizard. The underwriters, it is reported, have paid the insurance, and the vessel has been written off on the books of Lloyd's as a total loss. The owners have applied to the Admiralty for a search of all rocks and islands in the ship's course, with the hope of finding some of her crew and passengers. It is to be feared, however, that any such quest will prove fruitless. There is only too much reason to believe that, through some unforeseen accident, the cargo in the hull of the Great Queensland exploded, and that she went bodily to the bottom.

TERRIBLE SUFFERINGS AT SEA.—The British and African mail steamer Gambia, which arrived in the Mersey on the 24th ult., had among her passengers a young man, twenty years of age, named James M'Linden, the sole survivor of the crew, fourteen in number, of the Belfast barque Maria, which left Doboy, a Georgian port, in November last for Dublin, with a cargo of timber. A few days after leaving Doboy the vessel was caught in a succession of terrible squalls, her boats were washed away, and she became waterlogged. An American ship, the City of Montreal, it was stated, saw the vessel, but rendered no assistance, and an Italian barque, which also came near, could give no aid, owing to the state of the weather. The captain, named Greyson, and several of the crew died of starvation, the stores having been exhausted. The survivors cut the throats and opened the heads of some of the dead men, and drank the blood and ate the brains. The bodies were then thrown into the sea. On January 9 the E. Macdonald, an American vessel, hove in sight, and her crew took the boatswain and M'Linden from the wreck. The boatswain died four hours after, but M'Linden, although he was in a terrible condition, and his body so swollen that his clothes had to be cut off, soon regained health and strength. He was landed at Goree, on the West African coast, and then taken to Madeira, where he embarked on board the Gembia.

THE INVERERNE.—The following are the names of the survivors of the ship Invererne, reported as having foundered on Jan. 1, off the West Coast of Sumbawa (Sunda Islands), on her voyage from Java for the Channel:—Thomas Harding, John Campbell, John Duffey, Walter Page, Arthur Abraham, Robert Barley, John Grey, and John Macgowan. The captain and eight sailors were last seen in the lifeboat, which was water logged. With reference to this statement the owner writes —"The two lifeboats on board the Invererne were both specially fitted with copper tubes, in the manner required by the Emigration Commissioners. So long as these tubes were uninjured the boats would float, even if otherwise considerably damaged, and therefore we have still a hope, although it may be only a faint one, that the captain and missing men may have been picked up by some vessel at sea, or been landed on some of the neighbouring islands."

ATTEMPTED POISONING ON BOARD THE WYLO.—At the Thames Police-court, on the 24th ult., Lewis Twyman, a black man, formerly steward on board the ship Wylo, was charged with attempting to poison Alfred Langlois, second mate of the same ship. The Corona, commanded by Captain Strachan, had arrived in the Thames with the prisoner, who had been handed over to his custody at Manila by the British Consul there. The evidence stated that on the voyage out the second officer and the prisoner had a quarrel in consequence of the mate reporting him for being drunk, and the prisoner subsequently placed in the mate's tea a quantity of sulphate of lead. The accused was remanded until the arrival home of the Wylo.

REPORTED PURCHASE OF A CLYDE SHIPBUILDING YARD BY THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT.—It is reported that the German Government have come, or are on the eve of coming, to an arrangement with a firm of Clyde shipbuilders for the purchase of their shipbuilding yard at Govan. The German Government, it is said, have for some time been on the outlook for a place at which to conduct shipbuilding operations, and they have fixed on this yard because the plant and everything else connected with it will be suitable for the work which it is proposed to carry on. The purchase price for the yard, plant, &c., is stated to amount to between £200,000 and £250,000.

SHIPS REPORTED FOR SURVEY.—A Parliamentary Return has been issued "of all vessels ordered to be surveyed by the Board of Trade or its officers from the 5th August, 1873, to the 30th September, 1876." From this return it appears that the number of vessels reported for alleged defects in hull, equipments, or machinery was 879; of these twenty-seven were found seaworthy, 840 were found unseaworthy, and the survey of the remaining twelve is pending. The number reported for alleged overloading or improper loading was 108; of these two were found seaworthy, and 106 unseaworthy.

LOADING AND DISCHARGING FACILITIES.—A very creditable amount of energy was shown by the London and St. Katharine Dock Company in discharging Messrs. Gellatly, Hankey, and Sewell's steamer Eldorado, on her last arrival at London from Calcutta, Madras, and Colombo. She entered the Victoria Dock on the afternoon of the 13th ult., and put out 3,500 tons in thirty hours. The loading of the steamer for the same ports with 3,000 tons of cargo occupied only five days, and the Eldorado left the dock on the morning of the 23rd ult. on her return voyage.

DETENTION OF A SHIP.—A charge brought against the crew of the brig No Name, for having refused to do work on board that vessel on the 20th ult., when in a storm, has been investigated at the Cardiff Police-court. The surveyor reported that the oakum in the seams of the vessel had perished, the calking was defective, and the cargo of gunpowder, Manchester goods, &c., was improperly stowed. Under all the circumstances, the surveyor considered the vessel to be unseaworthy. The accused seamen were discharged, and the vessel is detained by the Board of Trade.

A NEW dock, situated at the mouth of the River Avon, and called Avonmouth Dock, was formally opened on the 24th ult. by the Mayor of Bristol, in the presence of many thousand persons. The dock was built by a limited liability company, and the works have been nine years in progress. It has cost altogether £600,000, and is 1,400 feet long by 500 feet wide, having a clear area of 16 acres, and a minimum depth of 26 feet.

THE Clyde-built and Greenock-owned ships Golden Fleece and Argonaut arrived in the Downs on the 26th ult., after a very close race from Calcutta. The ships left the outport together, and have arrived in ninety-six and ninety-seven days respectively. They were built by Messrs. Barclay, Curle, and Co., Glasgow, and are owned in Greenock by Messrs. A. and J. H. Carmichel and Co. This is the Argonaut's first voyage.

AT Jarrow-on-Tyne six iron steamships of various sizes, and three gunboats for the Government, are finished, and part are ready for sea. At South Shields three large iron vessels are in hand, and several iron tug steamboats are nearly completed. The tug-building branch of trade is very active at South Shields, and likely to be so for some time.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE TO AUSTRALIA.—The Pacific Steam Navigation Company have arranged to place a certain number of their large full-powered steamers in the trade between London and Australia. The steamers are capable of making the passage in forty days.

The Nederland Company's Royal Mail steamship Prins Hendrik, Captain M. C. Braat, sailed from Southampton on the 27th ult. for Naples, Port Said, Batavia, Samarang, Sourabaya, &c., taking out the Dutch mails, 55 passengers, 145 Dutch troops, and a large general cargo.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The accounts of the famine in China continue of a harrowing character. At Tientsin the number of the deaths among the unfortunate refugees is estimated at about a fourth of those who reach the city. Two missionary gentlemen have set out for the interior to afford relief. Mr. Baber, of H.B.M.'s Consular Service, left on the 22nd January for Chungking (one of the ports on the Upper Yangtaze, to be opened under the new Convention). He was accompanied by Lieut. Gill, who, it is understood, intends staying some time in Szechuen. The Chinese officials seem to be keeping good faith with regard to posting the Yunnan proclamation. A gentleman who has recently travelled between Hangchow and Ningpo states that he saw it posted "not only in the walled cities, but in almost all the important towns and villages on the way." The Peking Gazette contains a memorial ordering an investigation to be made into the circumstances with reference to the outrage reported in Szechuen in November last, when it was stated that a number of people who had assembled to protest against the excessive exactions demanded from them were attacked by a body of troops, who killed many of them and carried off women and girls by way of booty. It, of course, remains to be seen how far the people who "assembled to protest" partook of the nature of a mob on the point of or actually rioting. There are a great many ways of assembling and protesting which might justify strong opposition on the part of the authorities.

From Japan we have nothing very definite with regard to the rebellion. At the date of departure of this mail there were, however, some symptoms of discontent, and a variety of disturbing and sinister rumours. The details of the fire at Yokohama on the 14th Jan. are given, together with an estimate of the interest insured in the various offices, which amounts to about $168,000. The Japanese Government have hit upon a comparatively simple mode of curtailing expenditure to meet the reduction in the land-tax, by sending away a large number of their officials, and laying heavy imposts on the salaries of the remainder. The measure, as may be readily imagined, is loudly complained of. The new paper, the Tokio Times, is evidently prepared to go all lengths in pro-Japanese views, It takes up the defence of Sir Charles Dilke's recent article. and declares that "his mistakes are trivial," and that he ought to have "strolled over to Kensington-gardens with his manuscript or his proof-sheets, and submitted them to the inspection of some clever attachés of the Japanese Legation." This is no doubt an infallible mode of being right –from the Japanese point of view. On the exterritoriality question this new oracle is still more outspoken, holding that "it is nothing but the hesitation of the Japanese Government in acting upon a truth they know to be indisputable that retards a common understanding of the broad fact that the laws of this Empire are, as they ought to be, binding upon all persons who live within its limits." Quite so, and a part of those laws is that foreigners are exempt from them. From Hong Kong the most interesting item of news is that the repairs to the Praya are to be commenced without delay. The building society scheme has been again discussed. H.E. Sir Arthur Kennedy has distributed the prizes to the native scholars at the Government Central Schools.

From the Straits the question of the final settlement and government of the Native States is still the subject of discussion, and pending such settlement nothing is undertaken to develop the commercial resources of the country. The present situation is described as most delicate, even critical, and it will require intimate knowledge, much judgment, and great watchfulness for some time to come to prevent untoward events, which may happen at any time. The proposed visit of Sir William Jervois to Australia has been discussed, but nothing of a definite nature had been communicated. No meetings of the Legislative Council are reported.

Sir William Gregory, Governor of Ceylon, left Galle in the P. and O. steamer Tanjore for Australia, on three months' leave. Mr. Colvill Barclay, Auditor-General of Ceylon, has retired from the Colonial Service, and the Auditor-General at Singapore, Mr. C. J. Irving, is talked of in Ceylon as his successor.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 23rd January, and we have advices by the Pacific Mail Company's steamer City of Tokio, via San Francisco, to the 22nd January. The French mail from London, Dec. 1, was received on the 20th January.

The anticipated visit of the Mikado to Kioto has been postponed. The reason is not stated, and the postponement appears to have been unexpected, as the Dowager Empress left for that place, by land, on the 11th Jan., and Prince Arisugawa-no-Miya and many members of the Imperial household by the mail steamer on the 17th.

Nothing very definite is stated in the present papers with reference to the rebellion. Flying rumours were going round as to the unsettled state of the Kagoshima Ken, but little news of an authentic character has been obtained.

Great reductions have been made in the Government departments in order to meet the loss of revenue consequent upon the reduction of the land tax. Our Yokohama Correspondent (whose letter is subjoined) gives a humourous and clear history of this rather severe measure. The Japan Herald, referring to it, states that "officials of the different offices are generally dismissed en masse and the majority are then re-appointed to a rank one step lower than before. Still a vast number of officials, especially of the lower classes, who can least afford it, have been entirely dismissed, and there is no doubt that much misery must be caused thereby. The total amount of the saving caused by these reductions is about $7,000,000. The dismissals are either altogether too sweeping, or far too many officials have heretofore been employed.

Details are brought by the present mail of the extensive fire which took place on the 13th January, and of which telegraphic advice had been sent to Hong Kong and Shanghai. The Japan Mail gives the following account of this disastrous occurrence :—

At half-past one on Saturday night (Jan. 13), smoke was observed to issue from the house on lot No. 59, the lower story of which is occupied by Messrs. Kelly and Co. and Mr. Geffeney, and the upper story by the Chamber of Commerce. An alarm was immediately given, and the bell of the Roman Catholic Chapel at once summoned assistance. When the engines arrived on the spot it was found that the fire had obtained a complete hold on the building where it had originated, and was spreading to the adjoining one, in the occupation of Messrs. Stillfried and Co., the photographers. This it soon became apparent was doomed, so efforts were directed to endeavour to save Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s store, and to prevent the fire extending in the opposite direction to lot No. 28, and across the street to the Chartered Mercantile Bank, and the building formerly occupied by the Deutsch Bank. The heat was so intense that at one time great fears were entertained for all these buildings, and more than once Messrs. Wetmore and Co.'s house at No. 28 was on fire, but fortunately the flames were prevented from taking a hold on that building or extending across the road. By this time sailors from the Modeste and Japanese men-of-war in the harbour were landed, and rendered most efficient service in salving property, and doing all that was possible to prevent the fire spreading. No efforts, however, could save Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s; the windows of the upper story of the store and the office soon caught fire, and quickly spread to all parts of the building, while the bake-house and outhouses rapidly caught fire, and were destroyed. All the books, papers, &c., belonging to the firm were saved, and much of the stock, which was carried to lot No. 9. The new fire-well at the Roman Catholic Chapel was found to be of great service, as from it the principal supply of water was obtained, while a section of hose was led down to the sea for a further supply. About three o'clock Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s large building was one mass of flame, and as the interior of the building was consumed the stone walls at the sides and back fell with a crash, but the front wall was left standing by itself—a source of danger to all who had occasion to pass,—while every now and then an explosion—whether of gunpowder, spirits, or kerosene oil is uncertain—would take place. The large two-storied godown at the rear of the store next caught fire, and as it was impossible to bring the engines to bear on it, the fire had its own way unchecked, but was fortunately prevented from spreading beyond this building, and by half-past four all serious apprehensions of it extending further happily ceased. At one time great fears were entertained that Messrs. Ahrens and Co.'s premises on lot No. 29 would catch fire; and Messrs. Reiss and Co.'s buildings on lot No. 30 were also in danger, and it was found advisable to remove the books of the firm to a place of safety. Fortunately, a judicious use of water, and the employment of coolies to extinguish the flakes of fire which were flying about, averted this danger, and the direction of the wind prevented the flames communicating to the row of new buildings on lot No. 60. At the Chartered Mercantile Bank a small private engine was brought to bear on the dangerous wooden eaves of that building, except at such time when the inexperience of those handling the hose led them to play on the crowd in the street, and a stream of water was now and then directed on the blistered front of the old Deutsche Bank. The front wall of Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s store did not fall until after six o'clock, and although the fire might have been considered as then subdued, it was yet necessary that the engines should continue to play on the mass of fire which was still raging beneath the debris of the fallen buildings. Indeed, this was done all yesterday, and even now the fire is not entirely extinguished.

All the buildings which were destroyed were insured, as was also Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s stock, and the property of the Chamber of Commerce, other sufferers by the fire, and the total amount of the loss cannot be under $200,000.

The Herald gives the subjoined as the sums lost by the different offices, "as nearly as it can ascertain." There is, of course, some salvage, but it is feared but a very small percentage of the losses :—

China Fire...	$45,000
Phœnix	40,000
Staffordshire	25,000
North British	20,000
Scottish Imperial	19,000
Manchester	10,000

From the above-named paper we summarise the following :—

On Sunday, Jan. 14., a fire broke out in a bath-house in Isecho, Tobe, a place situated in a hollow about one hundred yards to the left of the main road over Noge-hill. The small hamlet which was threatened was composed of thatch and shingle-roofed houses, which easily caught, and burned so fiercely that at first it seemed as if the whole area would be consumed, and some sixty houses were destroyed before the flames could be subdued.

The second mate of the American barque Stonewall Jackson has been ordered to be sent home for trial on a charge of abusing members of the crew and trying to raise a mutiny during the voyage out.

The funeral of the late Commander C. W. Jones, R.N., Director of the Naval College at Tokio, took place on the 17th inst., as announced, at Yokohama. The funeral procession having been formed, the band of the Imperial Marines played the melancholy strains of the "Dead March in Saul." They were followed by the coffin on a gun-carriage, which was dragged by the non-commissioned officers and men of the Naval Mission. At the cemetery the coffin was met by the Rev. A. C. Shaw, of Tokio, who performed the burial service over the grave, after which three volleys of musketry were fired, and the procession was then re-formed and marched back. Deceased, who was only thirty-four years of age, succeeded Captain Douglass in the direction of the College about one year ago. He was much and deservedly esteemed both by his friends and also by the pupils and others under his charge.

The first examination under the new pilotage regulations has been held, when several pilots passed, and there will therefore in future be no excuse for captains of vessels taking uncertificated pilots.

The import market continues dull, and transactions are but small. The recent telegrams received from Europe announcing the probability of a war have depressed the silk market, and, in view of the little inquiry, prices have receded. In tea, settlements are but small, and prices are firmer.

The Tokio Times gives the return of the receipts of the Tokio and Yokohama Railway for the week ending Jan. 7, which were $6,642.41, against, for the corresponding week last year, $7,091.26. It also states that the State opening of the section of railway between Kioto and Osaka was to take place early in February, under the immediate auspices of the Mikado. Invitations to join in the ceremony had been issued to the foreign Ministers.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

YOKOHAMA, JAN. 22.

The P. and O. mail boat Malacca, with the regular English mail, and the Pacific mail steamer City of Tokio both leave at about daylight to-morrow morning.

Another of those startling reforms which would be impossible anywhere else but in Japan has just been effected by a stroke of the pen of Mr. Lanjo Saneyoshi. The expenditure of the empire has been reduced by eight million dollars, or one-half of what it has been heretofore. Changes of the most complete nature have been made in the Government offices. Offices have been entirely abolished, officials dismissed, the salaries of those remaining reduced and rendered liable to an income-tax heavy in proportion to the amount of emolument received. The Finance Minister's scheme is a very simple one—far too simple to be followed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Those officers who receive high salaries, say, three hundred yen a month and upwards, pay the Government one-fifth. How would our own heads of departments like to pay an income-tax of four shillings in the pound? Officials receiving salaries of two hundred and eighty yen pay a tax of one-tenth. Officials of lower rank with salaries down to eighty yen are taxed at one-twentieth, and the worst paid are exempt, apparently, from income-tax altogether. So it has fallen to the lot of an Eastern Government to lay down the extraordinary proposition in political economy that those who can best afford it shall contribute most towards the expenses of the State, a notion so heterodox as to provoke horror and amazement in civilised financiers.

The Mikado will probably leave to-morrow for Kioto, where the Empress now is. An Exhibition, which foreigners are specially invited to attend, is to be held there in the hundred days following the 15th March. The Emperor will open the Kioto-Kobe Railway in person. Sir Harry Parkes and most of the other foreign Ministers accompany his Majesty to Kobe.

Retired Commander C. W. Jones, R.N., director of the Imperial Naval College at Tokio, died of paralysis at his residence on the 15th inst. The deceased officer, who was only thirty-four years of age, is much regretted, especially by his pupils. One hundred and twenty-five of these cadets, under the command of Lieut. Baillie and Chief Engineer F. W. Sutton, R.N., as well as a large concourse of officers from the men-of-war, native officials, civil and military, and "foreign residents," attended the funeral in the Yokohama Cemetery, where a firing party from H.M.S. Modeste rendered the last honours to their compatriot.

The insurance offices have had little to do of late but to pocket premiums. Now I am sorry to say they will have to perform a reverse operation. On the early morning of Sunday, the 14th inst., a small bookseller's shop on Lot No. 59 in the main street was found to be on fire. Before the engines had arrived the flames had obtained such thorough hold that it was evident that the destruction of the entire block was inevitable. Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co.'s large business premises and entire stock were destroyed. The goods alone were insured in the home offices for $105,000, and the loss on the premises is covered by insurance here. The establishment of Baron Stillfried, the well known Austrian photographic artist, whose charming pictures have rendered Japanese life and scenery familiar to so many, was, I much regret to say, burnt to a cinder. By his own exertions and that of some of his friends, however, the greater part of his negatives were preserved, and the actual money loss he has sustained will fall on the insurance offices.

OSAKA.

The correspondent of the Hiogo News reports that a large fire broke out on Friday, Jan. 12. The scene was that ill-fated locality, the Dotombori again, but this time much further west than the great fires of a year ago, being in the vicinity of the Ebisu bashi, and so some distance from the newly re-built theatres. It was stated that the houses destroyed, variously estimated at from thirty to sixty in number, were mostly small ones.

The Dog-collar Ordinance appears likely to become a dead letter, so far as foreigners are concerned. Only one unlucky wight had, so far as was known, bought a collar, and that was stolen three days afterwards, the collarless dog being left on his hands. Whether the Fu in such a case would give the license another collar gratis is not known.

The Osaka Nippo has the following :—

It is reported that the people of a village twenty cho distant from the branch of the Hiroshima Government office at Fukoyama assembled for two or three days, lighting large torches at night. The people of Nagawa, Kumano, Sannon and other villages, two or three ri distant from the same place, are refusing to pay the expenses of the schools and the Ken taxes, &c., and the Kucho and Kocho are in great trouble ; some of them have petitioned to be relieved of their offices.

The returns of the Osaka police office during December give the following curious miscellany of crimes and quasi-crimes :—Burglaries with arms, 16 ; persons attacked by highwaymen, 9 ; killed, 21 ; wounded, 19 ; sum of the money stolen, yen 300.47 ; armed robbers, 9 ; unarmed ditto, 4 ; attacked by a pickpocket, 1 ; sum of the money stolen, yen 2,052.15 ; grain stolen, koku 30.89 ; articles of clothing stolen, 3,739 ; other articles, 8,618 ; stolen domestic animals, 15 ; secret thieves arrested, 23 ; prisoners forwarded to other authorities, 247 ; petitioners, 1,256 ; persons who fell down on the roads, 5 ; afflicted with the prevailing disease, 55 ; died of the same, 6 ; committed suicide with a sword or knife, 3 ; ditto by hanging, 2 ; drowned, 7 ; wounded, 28 ; intoxicated, 39 ; violent, 4 ; lost articles, 426 ; lost money, yen 315.75 ; fires, 9 ; lost and strayed cattle and horses, 9 ; shipwrecks, 26 ; killed by accident, 3 ; hard labourers escaped from prison, 4 ; gamblers, 34 ; minor criminals, 8 ; secret prostitutes, 12 ; agents for ditto, 16.

HIOGO.

The Hiogo News gives a description of the Imperial carriage made at the railway works there for the use of his Imperial Majesty, the Mikado, on the occasion of the forthcoming State opening of the line hence to Kioto. The under frame is a combination of teak and iron, the "head stock caps" being really very handsome ornaments in bronze, hand carved, with flowers in relief in electro plated silver, the frame as a whole being painted in carmine. The bottom of the body is painted in the same tint, the upper part being salmon colour, and the whole length is twenty-four feet, divided into four compartments. The principal one is twelve feet by six and a half, the others being an apartment for attendants, an ante-chamber and a withdrawing-room, hot and cold water being supplied to the washhand basin from a tank on the roof. The body of the carriage is of teak, all hand painted and richly picked out with gold, with the Mikado's arms on the central panels ; the window frames are of rosewood. A carving of chrysanthemum leaves forms the moulding round the top, and the border underneath is a representation of the kiri, in gold. The door handles are all richly carved in silver, the raised parts in gold, having been expressly made at Kioto for this purpose, as is the case also with all the interior silken decorations : all crockery—which is in white and gold. The roof of the carriage is double, or perhaps, to speak more correctly, we should say trelle, as the "roof sticks" are covered on the inside. The panels of the interior doors which make communication between the compartments are in silk, painted and embroidered, the lining of the carriage sky blue silk, and the furniture black walnut and dark blue silk rep ; a lace border runs round everywhere, in blue, silver and gold, the piping being blue and gold.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

The North China Daily News correspondent writes on Jan. 2 :—

Our winter is passing very quietly so far. Not even the ordinary amount of Chinese robberies are reported to us. This is, I think, because of the night-patrol instituted by Governor Li last autumn. At least I can attribute it to no other cause ; for the influx of so many strangers as the famine has driven into Tientsin would, one would suppose, increase the tendency to such misdemeanours. On the other hand, these poor villagers are generally the most honest of the Chinese people.

I have heard that the average ratio of deaths among these poor, who came in half famished and in rags, is one-fourth, but I am not able to verify the statement. I want to get some approximate estimate of the numbers who have come, but find it difficult to get anything reliable. All that I can find is, that people "not a few" receive gruel at the soup kitchens daily, which I can verify by the numbers running about the streets with a "tag" around their necks and an earthen dish under one arm. But that is not very definite for statistical purposes. The Rev. Mr. Hodge, and Mr. Moulls, of the Taku Customs, left for the Shantung field of mission operations, which is also one of the famine sections, last week, with some $400 to use among the poor people.

KUKIANG.

The water is reported to have been lower in the river than it has been known to be for ten years past. The port is described as having presented a very busy aspect, in consequence of the number of steamers that have been working here together.

Writing upon the sale of the S.S.N. Company's steamers to the Chinese the correspondent of the Herald says :—

"It is only natural to expect that the Chinese flag would absorb the preponderance of its own internal carrying trade, but it seems to us that no time can be more opportune than the present for a greater display of the British flag on the river. For the past two years it has enjoyed the largest share of the river steamer tonnage ; and assuming that the American river tonnage will now be transferred to the Chinese flag, to which may be added the tonnage represented by the old and new river boats of the C.M.S.N. Company now employed, there would still be a large margin left for other flags, and at a time when several hundred miles more of river have been opened with ports of call on the way, which will act as feeders to the line."

The bund has been faced with stone throughout its entire length, which adds much to its stability and appearance. A Russian firm is laying the foundation for large premises, so that it does not seem that the port is likely to be abandoned yet a while.

NANKING.

The Sinpao says there is an active demand at Nanking for Martini-Henry rifles. The Viceroy has done away with the old archery practice, and substituted rifle-shooting—for proficiency in which good prizes are apparently offered. The competitors buy their own weapons, and, finding their old muskets and jingals have no chance against Martini-Henrys, those who have hitherto been handicapped with the former are endeavouring to put themselves on an equality with their rivals.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 26th January ; the P. and O. mail from London Dec. 8 was received on the 25th Jan.

The Chinese Emperor has in the South-park, near Peking, a peculiar breed of deer called the Elaphurus Davidiarius. This singular animal is only known to exist in the South-park of Peking. It escaped the notice of Cibot and other Jesuits. Abbé David was the first to describe it, and it bears his name. Specimens have been presented on various occasions to the French Minister at Peking, to the English Minister, and to the German Minister, the last in the early part of the present year. Those presented to Sir R. Alcock for his Sovereign died, with the exception of two, which were saved by being fed under Mr. Swinhoe's direction with elm twigs, in addition to other food. They were in 1870 in good condition at the Regent's-park Zoological Gardens. The country people near the park are fond of eating this species of deer. When the Emperor Hien-feng fled to Jehol, in 1860, some of them thought they might steal these animals from the park with impunity. Thirteen persons were captured and beheaded for the thefts then committed.

Money is being subscribed in Peking and Tientsin to relieve the starving poor in Shantung, now suffering from a barren year. They are eating roots and leaves of trees. The Rev. W. N. Hall has appealed for help to the foreign community.

The news brought from this port by the present mail is not of special importance, and the papers are filled up mainly with the discussion of topics of general interest. The election of members for the French Municipal Council was concluded on the 24th January, resulting in the return of the following gentlemen, viz.:—Messrs. Vinay, Louvier and Millot, French members ; and Hennequin and H. De C. Forbes, Foreign members. Messrs. Lang, Rice, and Voisin, whose term of office has not expired, complete the Council.

The election of officers of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society has taken place. Mr. T. W. Kingsmill is chosen as President, and Messrs. C. W. Goodwin and Forbes as Vice Presidents.

The North China Herald gives the following items of general news :—

At the Supreme Court, before C. W. Goodwin, Esq., and a jury William Edwards was tried on the charge of feloniously attempting to steal four wooden boxes from the treasure-room of the steamer Hupeh, on the night of the 10th December last. The facts of the case are well known. Rosquist's evidence of the prisoner's identification was stronger than at the preliminary examination, and he was not subjected to cross-examination by the prisoner, who was found guilty by the jury. His Lordship expressed his approval of the verdict, and sentenced prisoner to twelve months' imprisonment, and ordered him to be deported in default of his finding sureties, at the expiration of his sentence, for his future good behaviour.

Three fires, but fortunately not of an extenssive character have occurred. The first was at Messrs. Kelly and Co.'s tobacco store, whence smoke was seen to be proceeding ; but it was put out by a couple of extincteurs ; the other was in a native constable's watch-box near the old Hong Kew Dock, and was put out by a few buckets of water ; but the next morning the unfortunate watchman was found dead and horribly burnt inside the box. Another alarm of fire took place in the block of Chinese buildings known as Ne-pa-doo, in the Honan-road ; it was put out after one native house had been destroyed and the two adjoining much damaged.

A rumour got afloat that lekin was to be levied on British, and remitted on German owned, opium. The above-named paper, however, says that no credit is to be attached to it, adding, that any such action would be a gross breach of Art. LIV. of the English Treaty, and would necessitate the immediate removal of the lekin office from the Settlement.

The Sinpao says certain mandarins are thinking of purchasing dredging-machines, to hasten the work of clearing the waterways of this province, It would be the most sensible outlay of money of which they have been guilty for some time. Anticipating the result of their work, and of a prospective snow-fall, the Sinpao says, "the fields will be filled with labourers, traders will be able to travel to and fro, the people will warble from sheer contentment, and everybody will benefit from the bounteous care of the Government-"

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 1st February ; the P. and O. mail from London, Dec. 22, arrived out on the 31st January.

The scheme for the repair of the Praya has been matured. It involves an expenditure of some $200,000. The works will be commenced immediately after China New Year—Feb. 13. The question of setting on foot a building society, which was some time ago discussed, has been again brought forward, and appears to have elicited some interest. On the 18th January an adjourned meeting of those interested in the scheme took place, Mr. Wilson in the chair, when a motion by Mr. Coughtrie that Messrs. G. Sharp, H. L. Noronha, Chun Ayin, the Chairman, and Mr. Welsh, should form a provisional committee to investigate the chances of success of the proposed society, and, if it is deemed advisable, to organise it, was carried nem. con.

At the meetings of the shareholders in the Hong Kong, Canton, and Macao Steamboat Company and the Hong Kong Hotel Company the reports summarised in our last were passed nem. con.

The case of Browne v. Alabor has been brought to a conclusion, after a very lengthened hearing. The jury were unanimous in disallowing the counter claim of the defendants. As to the plaintiffs' claim, the item of $4,027.12 was allowed by 6 to 1 ; the item of $60.80, also by 6 to 1 ; the item of $7,500—the bargain money paid– disallowed by 4 to 3 ; of the amount for the bags charged at $720, $53.4 was allowed by 6 to 1 ; making, in all, $4,591.92 in favour of the plaintiffs. Interest was granted at the rate of 8 per cent. from the 12th May, 1874, the date of the plaintiff's draft, which was dishonoured by the defendants.

From the China Mail we condense the subjoined :—

The Government sale of the old Market at Sai-ying-poon by public auction the other day realised $9,300, together with the building thereon.

His Excellency the Governor has recognised provisionally, and until further notice, Baron von Soden as in charge of his Imperial Russian Majesty's Consulate at this port, vice Mr. John Heard, resigned. The Baron has also been recognised as Acting Consul for his Imperial Germanic Majesty during the absence of Mr. J. F. Cordes.

Lieut. Farmer (28th Regiment) was injured by a fall from his horse at Little Hong Kong. The wound occasioned is a severe one, owing to the jagged nature of the rocks on which Mr. Farmer was thrown.

The Annie Gray (Captain Moore) struck on a ledge of rocks, on the night of the 19th January, while trying to enter Chefoo Harbour, and there is very little chance of saving the vessel or any of the cargo.

A curious native conjuring trick has attracted some attention. It is called the "Speaking Head," which appears in a basin on the table. The spectators may ask it any questions, and it answers accordingly. The "Head" speaks several languages, and simply astonishes, at all events, the Chinese visitors. Large crowds of Chinese are attracted to the place, and it is needless to say that the adventurous promoters of the exhibition derive a good income. The deception is no doubt produced by the aid of a mirror, in the same manner as the "cabinet trick" is performed.

H.E. Sir Arthur Kennedy, in distributing the prizes to the scholars at the Government Central School, spoke in high terms of the efficiency of the institution, and noticed as a proof of its usefulness that no less than twenty-three scholars from it had been engaged in a batch for the Foochow Arsenal.

FOOCHOW.

The races have gone off satisfactorily. The Herald says :—"We have to record the very best and—from a racing point of view—most successful meeting in the annals of the Fohkien Race Club. Better contested fields have never been seen at the Tartar Camp. This was predicted by those conversant with such matters,—in view of the brilliant programme drawn up by the stewards, and all entertained a thoroughly justifiable hope that the different events would attract a keen competition. The racing extended over a period of three days—5th, 6th, and 8th inst.—exclusive of the usual 'off day.' On the second day the course was visited by the Fantai and several other native officials, all of whom were invited to the usual public tiffin at the Kwang Ting. The Fantai, who is a Manchu by birth, appeared to take a great interest in the day's racing, and distributed a number of curiously shaped silver medals to the successful jockeys. Racing honours were, all things considered, fairly divided."

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

MANILA.

The value of exports from Manila, Cebu, and Ilo Ilo during 1876 amount to nineteen millions of dollars. The number of vessels from the high seas that entered the port of Manila last year was 258 according to the Comercio. Their nationalities were as follow: Spanish 104, British 86, American 36, German 17, French 10, Norwegian 3, Dutch 1, and Italian 1. Of the total number 95 were steam vessels.

The Comercio announces that a great fire has laid in ashes Laoag, the chief town of Ilocos Norte, 3,000 houses having been consumed by the flames, and thousands of families, finding themselves without shelter, in the streets; the Government was assisting these unfortunates with money. Another fire at San Fernando de Pampanga, which broke out in the dwelling of a Chinaman who was smoking opium at the time, consumed about 120 houses.

From further details of the hurricane which raged in the Philippines in November last, it appears that in the district of Bohol alone there perished, or were destroyed, 93 persons, 185 head of cattle, and 76 horses, 7 Government houses, 19 Courts of Justice, 22 churches, 19 convents, 64 schools, 38 bridges, 135 manufactories of wood, 48 storehouses, 435 plank houses, 1,533 houses of attap and rattan, 41 boats and 7 prahus. Other districts suffered more or less severely.

A new daily journal, La Oceania Espanola, is now being published at Manila, the first number of which was issued on the 1st ult. It appears to be very respectably got up both in material and general arrangement.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 8th February; the French mail from London Dec. 29th was received on the 31st January, and the following P. and O. mail of Jan. 5 arrived out on the 7th February. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

Everything has been quiet in the Malay States during the fortnight, and favourable reports continue to be received of the revenues, the general administration of affairs, and the progress of trade. Confidence, however, has not, and will not be, restored until the Perak Government has been finally settled. With every allowance for the difficulties as to the Sultanship of this State, the hesitation and delay of the Home Government in coming to a decision on this point are doing a great deal of harm, and the mischief is aggravated by the strict reticence enjoined and maintained in the matter, which is misunderstood and gives rise to all sorts of rumours in no way complimentary to the repute or dignity of the British Government. It is much to be desired that this delicate matter should be decided without much longer delay.

The news comes from Australia that Sir Hercules Robinson, Governor of New South Wales, has telegraphed to the Secretary of State on behalf of all the Australian Colonies to depute an officer of Engineers, of rank, to advise upon the fortification of their ports and harbours, and the Melbourne press state that Sir William Jervois is the officer whom the colonists, from his rank and great special experience in defence works, desire to undertake the mission.

The Supreme Court has been endeavouring to overtake the Civil business of the Settlement prior to the departure of the solitary Judge in the Straits for Penang.

The E. and A. Mail Co.'s steamer Somerset arrived with dates from Sydney 12, and other Australian ports, on the 29th January, and was despatched on the return voyage to Australia with the London mails of the 5th January. News has been received here of the total wreck of the same Company's steamer Singapore on a sunken reef off one of the Cumberland group of islands on the 2nd, while on a voyage from Hong Kong to Sydney. No particulars have been received but that the passengers and crew have been saved.

The Chinese portion of the community appear to have accepted the establishment of Chinese Post-offices without any idea of further open opposition. It is said, however, that the Government offices will continue to be opposed by private Post-offices, and that endeavours are being made to get the Mandarins of Amoy, and Swatow, &c., to obstruct the distribution of letters by the Government postmasters in these ports. The reports of Mr. Pickering, Chinese Interpreter, and of Superintendent Maxwell upon the riot of December last make it clear that the disturbance was the work of the Towkays engaged in the business of the transmission of letters and remittances between the Straits and China. They thought that a riot would force Government to give up the idea of regular Post-offices. Secret instead of open opposition will probably be continued for some time, but the cheapness, accuracy, and despatch of the Government Post-office will, no doubt, be soon properly appreciated and availed of.

The 6th Feb., the anniversary of the foundation of the Settlement, was observed as a general holiday by the Government offices, but mail work interfered with its observance by the banks and mercantile offices. The Telegraph Dramatic Club gave a theatrical entertainment on the evening of the 5th. There was a large attendance, and the performance was very successful. There have been several cricket matches on the Esplanade during the fortnight between the military and naval officers at present here and the members of the S.C.C.

The Orontes, troopship, left for Mauritius and the Cape on the 25th January; the Himalaya, troopship, arrived here on Friday, the 2nd February.

The harbour has been enlivened by the presence of the German corvette Veneta, at present on a cruise in the China seas, and the American frigate Tennessee. Both, according to the China papers, are on their way to Australian waters.

The Chinese New Year falls this year on Tuesday, the 13th February, and the usual cracker-firing will begin at six P.M. on Monday, the 12th, and last, within specified hours, till eleven P.M. of Tuesday, the 27th.

A correspondent of the Straits Times announces the seizure of the Sultana (British) by the Spaniards off Sooloo—and the Governor of Labuan was requested to interpose.

The U. S. steam frigate Tennessee, Captain Young, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral William Reynolds, commander-in-chief of the American Squadron in China and Japan, anchored in the roads from Bangkok.

The Straits steamer Sharpshooter was sold at Penang for the sum of $16,000, and she will run between that port and Atchin.

The steamer Bangkok, which conveyed the Siamese Embassy to Calcutta, to attend the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, has returned to this port. The Embassy landed at Quedah, and will proceed overland to Bangkok.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Business in imports has been generally quiet. The higher prices telegraphed from Manchester have caused holders to show some firmness for Yarns, but dealers have not responded, although at the close there is a slightly better inquiry for 16/24. Shirtings are entirely devoid of any animation, and with stocks accumulating, very low prices have to be taken in order to effect sales. A few small transactions in Drills, Prints and Lawns are recorded, and Velvets have been sold to a fair extent at about previous quotations. Turkey Reds are very difficult of sale, and Taffachelass keeps quite nominal. In Woollens, sales of Black Lustres have been made at lower rates, and Italian Cloth has kept fairly saleable. Mousselines are, however, quieter again. Metals are very quiet.

HIOGO.—No improvement has taken place in the position of the market. Cottons—Grey Shirtings: Deliveries have been limited to 5,450 pieces; the dealers have shown some inclination to purchase, but holders generally refuse to sell at quotations. Turkey Red Cambrics and Black Velvets are entirely neglected. Some descriptions of Chintz have found buyers, and Black Sateens are saleable at former rates. Worsteds and Woollens: Black Lastings are lower. Black Orleans are almost unsaleable. Plain Mousselines de Laine are nominally unchanged, but sales cannot be made except at a further concession. A parcel of superior Printed Goods has been placed at higher rates. Black Cloth has been sold at low prices. Iron: The market is again weaker.

SHANGHAI.—Cottons: There had been but a moderate amount of business in Piece Goods; rates, however, had been well maintained, and in some instances were higher. Grey Shirtings of 6 lbs. weight were stronger for the lower grades; 7 lbs. quiet at unchanged prices. 8¼ lbs. common not in much request; medium sold in considerable quantities at auction, and some marks lower in value. Good 8¼ lbs. Shirtings strong and advanced somewhat in price. 9 lbs. no sales. 9-12 to 10 lbs. unchanged and quiet. In White Shirtings, business moderate and chiefly speculative. Prices firm at previous quotations. American Drills, Jeans, and Sheetings, no sales. English Drills firmer with a good inquiry. English Jeans in small stock and firm, but sales not large. English Sheetings, no transactions. Dutch Drills, strong and in moderate demand. Dutch Jeans, neglected. T-Cloths: In 6 lbs. common goods business small, 7 lbs. common rather firmer; 6 lbs. Mexicans no business, 7 lbs. best quality dearer and in some enquiry, 8 lbs. strong at a slight advance. Handkerchiefs, unchanged. Dyed and Fancy Cottons had not attracted much attention. Woollens: Spanish Stripes had been sold at public auction at rather lower rates. Medium and Habit Cloths: Quiet with small sales. English Camlets:

Sales at auction showed a stronger market. Long Ells in moderate demand at last quotations. Lastings, quiet. Crape Lastings and Lustres, no business. Figured Orleans, small business. Plain Orleans, prices unchanged but without sales.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write on the 17th January:—Business in Manchester Goods during the past week has been but small, and mainly confined to the satisfaction of the requirements of local traders. Tentative bids have been made for larger parcels in the anticipation of an advance in rates when the spring demand sets in; but the prices offered have been for the most part far too low to tempt holders, in the face of a strong market at Shanghai, and higher prices in Manchester. We are again unable to give quotations, as in the absence of anything like a steady demand, rates have ruled very irregular.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Yarns: The market has been rather more active for all kinds, and Nos. 16 to 24 English Yarns have been freely bought at a slight advance in value; Bombay Yarns and Nos. 28 to 32 and 38 to 42 English, however, have not been freely taken, owing to the firmness of importers, who are demanding a considerable advance, Piece Goods: Under the influence of a fair enquiry for the Pakhoi market and a speculative demand in anticipation of an improved enquiry after the turn of the Chinese New Year, larger purchases have been made than during any fortnight for several months back. Prices of 7 lb. and 8.4 lb. Grey Shirtings are quoted 2½ to 5 cents per piece dearer, and T-Cloths and Drills are a shade firmer, but White Shirtings and other articles have not noticeably altered in value. Woollens: Small transactions have taken place in most fabrics, but prices have not specially changed and there is nothing of particular importance to report. Metals: Lead has been fairly bought, but the market is weak as there are still sellers for future delivery at low rates. The demand for Tin Plates has been pretty generally supplied, and dealers will not pay former rates. Quicksilver is lower and the market closes with a downword tendency. Yellow Metal is weak, as some importers are anxious to find buyers to arrive at reduced figures. Coals: The arrivals have been 2,550 tons of Australian and 1,300 tons of Japan; and the sales have been 1,540 tons of Australian at $9.25 per ton to arrive. Quotations are nominally unchanged, but at the moment the market is very quiet for all kinds and no business is being done.

CANTON.—The business in lead had been of the most trifling description; prices were nominally the same as last quoted, mixed brands $8.80 to $8.85 per picul; Hole chop and W.B. $8.85 to $8.90 per picul. Quicksilver: Prices had declined to $67.75 to $68 per picul.

MANILA.—Plain staples had been freely offered by importers, and the tendency of the market had been in favour of buyers. Coloured Goods had been very firmly held, and values of them were practically higher.

PENANG.—The market continued quiet, the demand being limited, while the principal importers still continued to insist on cash transactions, which restricted business.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—A moderate business has been transacted, the demand being principally for low grade Teas. A few parcels of "fine have been settled at rates varying from $24 to $30, but "finest and choice" goods continue in very spare supply. Arrivals have been limited, probably not exceeding 1,400 piculs, and stocks are very small; settlements for the period amount to 2,300 piculs, mostly under "medium" grades.

HIOGO.—The principal feature of interest has been a continued demand for the lowest descriptions of leaf, and settlements for the period under review are reported as 3,700 piculs, making purchases to date 54,300 piculs, against 53,300 piculs for the same time last season. Stocks are estimated at 3,500 piculs.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There has been a good deal of competition among buyers to secure the most desirable low cost Teas for price; this had had the effect of strengthening the market, and holders at the close declined offers which they would willingly have accepted a fortnight before. Settlements comprised:—3,148 chests Oonam, at Tls. 11 to 12; 1,721 chests Ningchow, at Tls. 13.25 to 17.50; 1,451 chests Oopack, at Tls. 13.25 to 20; 575 chests Oanfa, at Tls. 13.50 to 14; 98 chests Hohow, at Tls. 14.25; total, 6,993 chests. Stock, 20,758 chests. Green: Business had been on a larger scale than for some time past, the chief demand being for common Fychows and local-packed Teas at, or under, Tls. 20 per picul. Fine Moyunes had not been so much inquired for, but a slight decline on asking prices would lead to more business in this class of Tea, as offers had been made for nearly all the most desirable parcels. Pingsueys had been taken for the English market at rather high rates, and only a few good chops remained unsold. Settlements:—1,431 half-chests Teenkai, fine to finest, Tls. 30 to 31; 432 Teenkai (fine lines), Tls. 49 to 57; 2,941 Moyune, fine to finest, Tls. 28.50 to 31; 792 Moyune, medium to fine, Tls. 23.50 to 25; 427 Moyune (fine lines), Tls. 41; 4,327 Fychow, medium, Tls. 18 to 24; 130 Fychow (fine lines), Tls. 36; 474 Taeping, Tls. 21; 3,666 Pingsuey, Tls. 17.50 to 35.50; 2,972 Local packed, Tls. 16.50 to 23.50; total, 17,592 half-chests. The stock consisted of 73,470 half-chests Country Tea, 4,486 half-chests Pingsuey, and 600 half-chests Local-packed.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Business has been rather restricted owing to the smallness of stocks and the intervention of New Year holidays. Further reported settlements of Congou reach 11,492 chests, mostly costing under Tls. 13.8 on board, and maintaining previous quotations. Nearly 16,000 half-chests of Low to Fair Common Saayunes are included in the above, for which the prices are said to be from Tls. 12.3 to 13.55 on board for large lots secured by two buyers for England. The stock of Congou nominally left on offer is 11,067 chests, but it is currently reported that one house has just taken about 8,000 chests, of which particulars have yet to transpire; the quantity actually on the market is now, we believe, barely in excess of 3,000 chests. Further additions to stock have been 4,480 chests, making supply so far 739,000 chests. The total for the season is probably now reached, but in any case we do not look for over 740,000 chests. Only 88 chests of Souchong and 73 chests of Flowery Pekoes have been taken, while Ooloongs have been neglected. Stocks are 1,065 half-chests Ooloongs, 185 chests Souchong, and none of Flowery Pekoes or Scented Teas.

FORMOSA.—The season had closed.

AMOY.—Amoy Oolong: The remaining stock on offer had been cleared off, with the exception of a parcel of 550 half-chests of mixed and spurious tea which would probably be shipped on native account. The total receipts for the season had been 109,871 half-chests. Formosa Oolongs: Some further small lots had been received from Tamsui, which, with the previous unsold stock had been settled at an advance of $1 to $2 per picul. Taking each half-chest at 39 lbs. net, the total supply for the season stood at 203,600 half-chests. Amoy Congous: About 5,000 half-chests had been taken during the interval at $14.25 to $15.50 short, being a decline of about $2 upon former rates. The German barque Fidelio is reported to have been chartered at £2 15s. per ton.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—A very quiet tone has prevailed, and we anticipate but a trivial business during the remainder of the season, and until the arrival of the new crop. Congous: Our market has again been without a single transaction. From Macao a few shipments have been made, and the stock of desirable Teas is now nearly exhausted. Scented Teas: We have to report a very small business; settlements during the past fortnight have been confined to Capers of common grade, and our stock of this class is now reduced to a very insignificant compass; the purchases recorded amount to 2,300 boxes, at Tls. 15 to 18, and show rather better value than previously. Capers of better quality have not been sought after, the prices asked for them being much above the present value on the home market. In Pekoes no transactions have taken place. Canton Greens: A few small parcels have been settled, but particulars have not transpired.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had fallen off considerably, and the advance lately quoted had been entirely lost. Telegraphs from home being very discouraging buyers showed no disposition to operate, and quotations were almost nominal. Settlements from 1st July to date, 18,950 bales; against corresponding period, season 1875-6, 10,400 bales; 1874-5, 7,500 bales; 1873-4, 9,900 bales. Stock, 2,000 bales, against 800 bales last season. Silkworm Eggs: According to the returns of the several steamship companies, the total exports for the season 1876-77 had been 1,025,000 cards.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—Amongst the purchases for the M.M. s.s. Meikong, which sailed on Jan. 19, were K. F. S. Beautiful Woman No. 2 at Tls. 535, common Tsatlee at Tls. 470, some Kahing Taysaams and 9 × 12 moss at Tls. 350 to 390 and Tls. 310 to 330, and 150 bales of re-reels at Tls. 500 to 530, besides consignment on native account. With unfavourable reports of the home markets and a rising exchange here, buyers generally have been holding aloof this week. Coarse Silks have met with some little inquiry at Tls. 280 for fair market skeins, and Tls. 290 to 340 for 9 × 12 moss and Kahings, whilst re-reels have been taken to the extent of 300 bales at Tls. 500 to 530 for fair middling cargo, and Tls. 570 for chop re-reeled Hainings; in Tsatlees a few bales were settled after the last mail at Tls. 470 for common, and a purchase is reported of Yakee chop No. 3 at Tls. 575. The nearer we get to the settlement at China New-year the more anxious holders appear to clear out their goods at a reduction in price, and within the last day or so it has been possible to buy market Tsatlees at Tls. 20 to 25 per picul decline. Taking the shipments on Chinese account, settlements for the past fortnight are about 1,800 bales; export figures are gradually assuming more moderate dimensions compared with the last season or two, and with the exception of small lots of yellow Silk arrivals at this port have all but ceased. The unsold stock is estimated at 17,300 bales.

CANTON.—The article had not been dealt in, and a resumption of business was not expected till after the native holidays. The bulk of the stock was in the hands of a few dealers, who bought at prices a long way in excess of those now current, and they were reluctant to sacrifice at current rates; how long they will be able to maintain their position remains to be seen.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HONG KONG.—There had been less inquiry for Camphor, and the reported sales amounted to only 300 piculs; purchases could be made at easier rates, as holders were ready to make concessions in order to realise before the China New Year. Formosa was quoted $17.50 per picul packed. Gamboge had commanded $49 per picul for good quality, Vermilion at $33 per case.

MACAO.—Little or no change had taken place in the market, and stocks of drugs were pretty firmly held. Of Aniseed Oil the supply on offer was about 240 piculs, held for $196 per picul. Holders of Cassia Oil were asking $100 and buyers were offering $97.50 per picul. Aniseed Stars were steady at $22.50, as reports were coming in of only a small supply on the way to market.

MANILA.—The market for all descriptions of Sugar was weaker. Hemp was dull, and in little demand at the prices asked by holders. There had been transactions at $5.75 to 5.62½ per picul, £23 13s. 5d. to £23 4s. 4d. according to quality, but a good deal of superior was held for $6 per picul (£24 11s. 6d.). Coffee had advanced to $21.50 per picul (£80 19s. 7d.) for small lots. About 2,000 piculs of the new crop had already arrived. Indigo: The new crop only amounted to about 800 cases, the greater part of it having been lost through drought. About 200 cases old crop had changed hands at $32 to $34 per quintal. M. O. P. Shells: No arrivals. Gum: A parcel of 400 piculs, saved from a stranded coaster, had arrived, and $4.50 per picul, cleaned, had been refuseed for it, the holder asking $5. Sapanwood: Current $1.37½ per picul and picked $1.50 per picul.

CANTON.—Cassia Lignea was quoted at $11.70 to 11.90 in mats, $12 to 12.20 in boxes; sales nil; stock 6,000 piculs. Cassia Buds, $17.75 to 18; sales nil; stock 50 piculs. Star Aniseed, $23.75 to 24. Rhubarb, No. 2, $90 to 100. Allum, $2.20 to 2.30 per picul. Camphor, $19.50 to 19.75 packed. Matting, Manhing's Fine contract White, 4/4, 10¼ cents, 5/4; 12¼ cents, 6/4, 15 cents per yard. PARIS, MARCH 4.—According to a Russian Agency telegram, the Japanese troops have encountered the insurgents at Kagosima, near Kumamoto, and captured four vessels.

PARIS, MARCH 5.—A telegram received here to-day from Japan confirms yesterday's news via Russia of the capture of four steamers from the Satsuma insurgents near Rumamuto, and adds that the other provinces are quiet. The rebels had probably seized these steamers in the harbour of Kagosima, whence they set out to besiege Rumamoto, an important fortified town with a garrison of 3,000 men, near which they were defeated by the Mikado's troops.

MISSION WORK IN CHINA.

THE past year will long be remembered in many parts of China as one of zeal and encouraging progress in the Mission field. The principal and most hopeful feature in connection with the Mission of the Church of England is the addition to the native clergy of no less than eight catechists who had proved themselves qualified for the Diaconate. Of these four were ordained at Ningpo by Bishop RUSSELL, and four at Foochow by Bishop BURDON, who writes that during a three weeks' tour of the principal Mission stations in the Fukhien district he confirmed about 500 persons and baptised 200, including about thirty children. St. Paul's College at Hong Kong has again resumed its original purpose as a training college for Mission clergy, and its students have recently been added to by six English students who have gone out with the Rev. E. DAVYS, the vicar of an English parish whom ill health has compelled for a time to resort to a warmer climate, and who has undertaken the instruction of the students for some months. Such an example is worthy of imitation, as it cannot fail to create an interest in the Church's foreign missions, not only in the heart of the vicar himself but of the parishioners, to whom he will be able to explain from personal observation the claims, the needs, and the results of the Missionary's work in a heathen land. Towards the support of the various schemes in connection with St. Paul's College the Bishop has received during the past two years about $1,300, and earnestly appeals for further help. A picture of Trinity Church at Shanghai, which has recently been made the Cathedral of the Bishop of North China, appears in the last issue of the Illustrated London News.

WE have to record the death of Mons. DE BOURBOULON, who was for some time the Representative of France in Macao, in the early days, and who was the first Minister for that country at Peking, after the ratification of the Tientsin Treaty in 1860, when the Ministers of Foreign nations were first admitted to the capital.

The s.s. Hibernia left Bombay on the 11th inst. with the deep sea portion of the Penang and Rangoon cable, the shore end of which was laid by the s.s. Kangaroo. The line will probably be completed by the end of the month. The Eastern Telegraph Company's cable from Aden to Bombay is now completed throughout.

Literature.

A Ride to Khiva. By FREDERICK BURNABY, Capt. Royal Horse Guards.—London: Cassell, Petter and Galpin.—This is a very interesting account of a ride to Khiva, accomplished by the author, and will be found to convey much information upon the Russian trade in Central Asia and the Russo-Indian question. In the opinion of the author of this work, who has evidently studied the subject carefully, Russia from her present position has not the power of even threatening British India; but he adds that she has the power of threatening points which, should she be permitted to annex them, would form a splendid basis for operations against Hindostan. "Merve, Balk, and Kashgar would make magnificent étapes. The former locality is richer than any of the most fertile corn-growing countries in European Russia. Merve is close to Herat, and should the Afghans join with Russia, a direct advance might be made upon India through the Bolan Pass. If Kashgar were permitted to fall into the Czar's possession, we should lose our prestige with the Mohammedans in Central Asia, whilst the occupation of Kashgar would prove a disagreeable thorn in our side, and give rise to endless intrigues." Captain Burnaby's book is written in an extremely pleasing and thoughtful style, and will be perused with pleasure by all interested in Asiatic subjects.

The Opium Question. By the Rev. A. E. MOULE, of Ningpo.—This pamphlet, which is circulated by the Anti-Opium Society, deals at considerable length with the opium trade, and the questions which have arisen in connection with it. As a means of bringing the traffic to an end, he proposes following a suggestion of Mr. Macdonald, the increase year by year of the export duty on the drug, which would cause it in the course of a moderate time to reach a point at which it would no longer be saleable in China. If, Mr. Moule holds, native opium is grown unchecked in China, and the Indian drug is thus raised in price, the Indian drug must soon be out of the market altogether. If, on the other hand, the Chinese Government is both willing and able to concert plans for combined action, and if stringent prohibitory edicts against native growth and native use of opium are issued and enforced, the foreign drug will also be at a discount. The plague may last a generation before it is eradicated; but this period is, he trusts, unnecessarily long for the extinction of this great blot on England's honour. The experiment as to how far a rise in price of the foreign drug will hasten the adoption of the native in preference, will, he adds, possibly receive an early trial, for all the Government monopoly districts have been in peril from the drought, save the small portions irrigated by canals.

The Geographical Magazine for March continues Mr. Venukof's topographical surveys in Asiatic Russia. In Wesleyan Missionary Notices for March the Rev. A. W. Nightingale, of Wu-chang, gives a brief account of a journey which he has recently made up the River Han to Siang-yang Fu, an important town some 400 miles above Hankow. About half-way, he tells us, the character of the river undergoes a complete change; instead of being a narrow river, not much wider than the Thames at Richmond, it widens out, and in many places is two miles broad. In summer, when the water is high, he says it must be a noble stream, and capable of allowing the largest steamers to travel upon its waters. During the last 200 miles of his journey Mr. Nightingale saw only two large towns of importance, both a mile or so distant from the river. One of these, he says, "had only once been visited by foreigners, and that years ago," but in this assertion we think he is mistaken. On the left bank of the Han, opposite to Siang-yang, is Fan-tsing, where the traveller found "a fine business-like street, having shops equal to those at Hankow." Though an unwalled town, it is one of the chief commercial marts of the empire, and "thither flock travellers and merchants from all parts of Northern China."

The Academy states that on the completion of the publication of the scientific results of the Austrian "Novara Expedition," the Commission of the Royal Academy of Science, at Vienna, appointed to superintend this work, has newly issued an index of the whole series of volumes, and a short review of their labours in the form of a letter to the Emperor of Austria. This scientific voyage round the world was carried out, it may be remembered, between April 1857, and August 1859, the route chosen having been very nearly the same as part of that followed in later years by the Challenger. The scientific commission of the Novara, besides the officers under Commodore von Wullerstorf-Urbair, consisted of Dr. Karl Scherzer for ethnography, Dr. F. Hochstetter for geology, Dr. E. Schwarz (died 1862) and J. Jelinek for botany, Georg Frauenfeld (died 1873) and Johann Zelebor (died 1869) for zoology, and the artist Joseph Selleny (died 1875). It was not till 1863 that it was decided that the scientific material should be worked out at Government expense; this is now complete in a magnificent series of twenty-two volumes.

The Bulletin de la Société de Geographie for January contains a well-written article on British India from the pen of Mr. Paul Vidal Lablache. Speaking of the famines he says:—"The old countries of India are afflicted by a special evil, which is by no means the smallest care of their Governors—excess of population. Famines and a chronic state of economical pressure are the consequences of this phenomenon. It seems also to be mixed up with religious ideas or with fears deeply rooted in the Indian mind. Will it be seen manifesting itself one day in the portions of the country of which the development has commenced?"

Mr. C. T. Newton, of the British Museum, left for Athens on the 10th inst., to inspect the antiquities discovered by Dr. Schliemann at Mycenæ, which have been deposited in the Greek capital.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Archæological Institute on March 2, Sir S. Scott, V.P., in the chair, the recent death of the late Mr. Talbot Bury was mentioned, one of the oldest members of the Society, and a résumé of his labours given. The reply of Sir James Hannen to the memorial addressed to him by Lord Talbot de Malahide on the part of the Institute was read. The period for the inspection of wills will be extended from 1700 to 1760 for purely literary purposes. A fine collection of Oriental armour was exhibited by Mr. Henderson.

At the Society of Antiquaries on March 1, F. Ouvry, Esq., president, in the chair, the President called attention to a Bill now before the House of Lords to authorise the destruction of certain papers in the Record-office declared to be worthless, and a resolution was passed suggesting to the Council the need of great caution in exercising this authorisation, as it was extremely difficult to decide that a given document was not, or might not hereafter prove to be, of genealogical or historical value.

At the Psychological Society on March 1, Mr. Serjeant Cox, president, in the chair, Professor Plumptre read a paper on "The Psychology of the Voice." In pursuance of a new regulation that debates on papers read should be taken at the next meeting, the adjourned discussion was had upon the President's paper "On Sleep and Dream." Professor Ferrier's discoveries of the functions of the brain were described.

At the Philological Society on March 2, H. Sweet, Esq., President, in the chair, Mr. A. J. Ellis, V.P., read a paper "On the Comparative Phonology of the English Dialects," explaining his attempts, by collecting examples and versions of one comparative specimen from living dialectal speakers, during the last four years, to form "phonetic districts," which adopted the same system of pronunciation within certain limits.

At the Linnean Society, on March 1, Prof. Allman, President, in the chair, the embryo of Dyospyros embryopteris, Pers., upon the fruit of which species Gaertner founded his genus Embryopteris, was exhibited by Mr. W. P. Hiern. He explained how that the immature fruit was gathered in India for the sake of the tannin contained, and hence the probability of Gaertner's having been misled as to the true structure of the seed and imperfect embryo, which Mr. Hiern now correctly describes.

SPAIN AND SOOLOO.

The Madrid correspondent of the Standard writes:—Last autumn the British and German Governments again put forward their claim for the restitution of the vessels and for the liberty of trade with Sooloo in future. Count Hutzfeld, the German Minister, in presence of the new outrage on the Minna, spoke with renewed vigour, and got fresh instructions to be sent out to the Naval Department in the Philippines. The matter stands now at a dead calm, because official correspondence is expected from Manila, and a new governor-general has been sent out in the person of General Moriones. This able and energetic officer, who alone of the Spanish commanders displayed energy against the Carlist rising before the Restoration, has accepted the post vacated by Malcampo. Most people in Madrid think that the Ministry sent Moriones to the East to get him out of the way, as he was suspected of entertaining more liberal views than most of the generals of the army, and he was known to be popular with the officers and with the rank and file. He has taken out with him many of the men who fought at his side during the civil war, and his instructions were to give more liberty to the foreign commerce, on condition that no contraband of war should be sold to the Moors of Sooloo. It will be very difficult to get from the Spanish Government any formal recognition of the freedom of trade in territories which are de facto independent, because in all international conflicts on such issues their policy is that of using delays and vague promises to gain time, and to leave the questions unsolved as long as possible. The new Minister of Foreign Affairs, Don Manuel Silvela, has assured the British and the German Ministers that he will give his attention to their claims.

Twenty-five years ago the late Sir James Brooke brought forward statistics to justify his amazing assertion that fifty thousand pirates yearly cruised about the island of Borneo alone. After concisely summing up the loss of life and property, which threatened to drive trade off those seas, he asked if "any means" could be thought too strong which would put a stop to such horrors. The Rajah never imagined a system such as the Spaniards have been trying for three years past, one effect of which was shown in the last letter of our Madrid Correspondent. By attacks well considered, and carried through with temperate vigour, the English and the Dutch have almost cleared their Eastern realms of piracy, without incurring special odium from the vanquished. But Spain, using force vastly greater, at a cost of life on both sides far beyond what was needful, has not only aroused a fanatic hatred that approaches madness, and has not only got herself into difficulties in Europe, but has conspicuously failed in the attempt. Her grand attack on Sugh, with an armada of vessels and 1,700 troops, brought but a barren success, and destroyed the power through which "the Moors" might have been brought into peaceful habits. The Sulus, Lanmun, Balignini, and other rovers have almost abandoned their voyages westward to sweep round the Spanish colonies. Four years ago it was seriously urged upon the Government of Manila that letters of marque should be granted to "contra-pirates," who would meet the Sooloos on their own terms, and would rival them in the profitable trade of murder and slave-catching. This proposition was rejected; but next year a resolution of the superior marine authority was inserted in the Diario de Manila scarcely less atrocious. It decreed that every vessel found upon the sea sailing from Sooloo or Tawi-Tawi should be captured; that if those on board could prove themselves and their prau to belong to another island—a thing impossible—they should be conveyed thither; but if they could not make such proof the vessel should be destroyed and the crew transported to the northern province, there to labour for life upon public works. This fate was ordained for peaceable traders, fishermen, and travellers. If any arms should be discovered on board—and no one dares sail the Eastern Sea unarmed—the crew were to be delivered up to the military Courts for trial. The Diario de Manila explained that these measures which it mildly characterised as "severe," were intended to "compel an untamable and seafaring race to live by agricultural labour"—on the public works. At the same time a blockade was declared. A general outcry arose in foreign settlements—from China to the Straits Settlement—at such a monstrous decree; but it does not appear to have been repealed or abandoned. The letter of our correspondent shows that the blockade is still in force, whilst we hear continually of pirate outrages. Trade is almost stopped, to the great loss of our colony at Labuan; but the rovers, who are as brave and as reckless of death as a Northern Berserk in the old times, steal out to carry on their horrible business. The island of Jolo—or Jolo, as the Spaniards call it—can scarcely be reckoned amongst those included in the blockade. It lies far to the east of the Sooloo Archipelago, between Celebes and New Guinea. That pirates from thence should now be causing alarm is a proof that the unreasonable measures of Spain have done harm and not good. Mr. Spencer St. John only makes one passing allusion to them in his catalogue of pirates, observing that they are "not formidable." The fiercer and more civilised ruffians from the East have doubtless gathered there. At present they are called "daring pirates" in Manila, and they resist ships of war. If the policy of Spain were not now, as always, above or below the arguments of reason, such a consequence of her proceedings might be expected to make her review them. But it is intolerable that the commerce of England and Germany should be stopped for an indefinite time by a blockade which only aggravates the mischief that it pretends to remedy. When not engaged in robbery and outrage the islanders are very eager for trade—an inclination which gives hope for them. English and German vessels cruise about the Archipelago without danger or hindrance, except from the Spaniards, who are resolved to turn these Malays into agriculturists" or exterminate them. Cases like that of the Minna, twice captured and condemned by the Manila courts, are frequent; and what injustice natives suffer one can only guess. Piracy must be crushed, but not by inhuman means, nor by suppressing lawful avocations. If it be asked why Spaniards have failed where English and Dutch have succeeded—why such hatred was felt against the former, even before late events, while the vengeance of the latter has scarcely left a soreness—the answer would be that the Spanish policy is marked by studied insult to the native chiefs, pretensions of sovereignty as groundless as futile, denial of quarter in war, and forced conversion of women and children captured.

CIVIL SERVICE.—Colonial Office.—Dr. V. Skipton Gouldsbury, C.M.G., has been appointed Administrator of the Gambia. India-office.—Mr. Whitley Stokes, barrister-at-law, Doctor of Laws, C.S.I., has been appointed an ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-General of India. The East Indies.—The Hon. R. A. Dalyell has been nominated an additional member of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General; Mr. H. S. Barnes, Bengal C.S., has been appointed private secretary to the Hon. Sir J. Strachey, K.C.S.I., financial member of the Governor-General's Council; Mr. T. J. C. Plowden, C.S., Inspector-General of Police, Assam, to officiate as under-secretary to the Government of India in the foreign department; Lieutenant C. W. Ravenshaw, to officiate as boundary settlement officer and ex officio assistant to the political agent, Bhopal, from the date of assuming charge, vice Captain Dalrymple; Lieutenant E. L. Durand to Manipur; Mr. J. Harrison, assistant-collector of Customs and assistant conservator of the port of Chittagong, vice Mr. J. Pearson, deceased; the Hon. J. G. Coleman has been re-appointed an additional member of the Council of Fort St. George, for making resolutions only; Mr. J. H. Garstin, collector of South Arcot, has been appointed an additional secretary to the Madras Government in the Revenue Department, as a temporary measure; Mr. F. H. Herbert, assistant to the collector and magistrate of the district of South Canara, magistrate of the second class; the Rev. D. W. Kidd to act as chaplain of Vizagapatam, and to hold charge of the chaplaincy of Vizianagram; Mr. G. Druitt to act as senior Assistant-Judge and sessions Judge of Poonah for the detached station of Sholapur, and a joint sessions Judge at Sholapur, for the disposal of such cases as shall be made over to him for trial; Mr. W. Ramsay, collector and magistrate of the district of Tanna, and political agent, Tanna, vice the Hon. E. W. Ravenscroft, C.S.I., appointed chief secretary to the Bombay Government.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—A special meeting of the Royal Geographical Society was held in the theatre of the London University, which was crowded by the fellows, to consider a motion, of which notice had been given by Sir Mordaunt Wells, that a committee should be appointed to investigate the circumstances under which tickets had been issued to so large a number of visitors for the meeting held at St. James's Hall to meet the members of the Arctic Expedition. Sir Mordaunt Wells moved the resolution, which was seconded by the Rev. Mr. Whichelow. Sir M. Wells urged that some 400 to 500 seats had been reserved, and that one of the most distinguished fellows, the Rev. Dr. Moffatt, had been unable to obtain admission till, after a strong representation had been sent in, he was at last admitted to the orchestra. Several fellows with their wives had had to leave the hall. The council admitted that 403 seats in all had been reserved, of which 148 were in the body of the hall. Lord Aberdare moved an amendment—"That a committee of ten fellows be appointed, five of whom should be named by the council, to consider the past working of the rules, and to report such alterations as they should recommend." He urged Sir Mordaunt Wells, who represented the views of a strong body of the fellows, to accept the amendment, which was nearly to the same effect as his motion, as the council would resign should the motion be carried. The amendment was put and carried by a majority, after having been seconded by Mr. Calvert, Q.C., and the following were appointed members of the committee:—Sir Mordaunt Wells, Sir Alexander Armstrong, Mr. Galton, and Sir George Balfour.

THE LATE DUKE KUNG.—Dr. R. K. Douglas has written a letter to The Times with reference to the death of Duke Kung, reported by the last China papers. He states that according to the genealogical tree which hangs root upwards in the temple of Confucius at Kiofu Heen, the ducal representative of the family in the year 1784 was the seventy-first in lineal descent from Confucius. As the Duke of that day was then past middle age, and as the late Duke was but twenty-eight at the time of his death, this latter was probably the seventy-fourth in lineal descent from his great ancestor. The genealogical tree mentioned above traces the pedigree of the family back from Confucius (B.C. 551-478) to the Emperor (Hwangte), who is said to have lived about 2637 B.C., but if we only accept the record it gives us of the successors to the sage we have the history of a family in which there has not been wanting an heir to keep up the tradition of the house for seventy-four generations. By a special decree the reigning Duke is an independent nobleman of the Empire, and ranks next to the Imperial family. The late Duke was of a weakly constitution, short in stature, and slightly deformed.

SOUTHAMPTON SHIPBUILDING.—The operation of supplying new engines and boilers to the P. and O. Company's steamer Hindostan is now being carried out at the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Summers and Day, at Northam, near Southampton. The internal economy of the steamer is also undergoing a thorough reorganisation at the hands of the same firm, the alterations including the fitting of a new poop deck which will add considerably to the accommodation for passengers. This work which is approaching completion is giving employment to a large number of artificers. Messrs. Summers and Day have numerous other contracts on hand, including the construction of several steamer yachts and the lengthening of the well-known Wynans Cigar-ship, to which a considerable section is being added amidships. This somewhat difficult operation has been successfully carried out by the firm in the case of several large vessels, including the P. and O. steamer Syria.

NEW BROOMS IN EGYPT.—In a notice upon Egypt, in a recent issue, attention was called to the manner in which the English officials installed there perform their duties The following from a correspondent of the Standard is interesting, as showing the uncompromising way in which regulations are at times carried out by them:—"I hear that only the other day the new controller of the railways refused to allow a special train to be sent to convey the Khediv'es stud to Cairo, unless the cost was prepaid. If it be true, as stated, that the same official is preparing a heavy bill against his Highness for similar services which are still unpaid for, and that the Eastern Telegraph Company also figure as creditors of his to the amount of £10,000, it cannot be said that General Marriott's precaution was altogether needless."

MILITARY COLONIAL EXPENDITURE.—A Parliamentary paper issued from the War-office states that the amount included in the Army Estimates for 1877-78 for military purposes in the colonies is £1,769,057, against £1,765,432 last year. The probable repayments as colonial contributions in aid of military expenditure are:—The Cape, £10,000; Natal, £3,500; Mauritius, £27,000; Hong Kong, £20,000; Ceylon, £121,000; Straits Settlements, £50,'50; Malta, £5,000. Total, £236,650. The net military expenditure in the colonies is therefore estimated at £1,532,407.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.—As will be seen by an announcement in our Advertising columns, subscriptions are invited for the Missionary School at Blackheath. This admirable institution was founded in 1856, the stone being laid by the Earl of Shaftesbury. It provides an excellent education for the sons of missionaries at the low price of £18 per annum, and is worthy in every way of support. We doubt not that the present appeal will be liberally responded to. Subscriptions paid to the agents of this paper will be forwarded to the Treasurer.

ON the 9th inst. a meeting of the working classes was held, under the presidency of Alderman Sir John Lawrence, M.P., with reference to the proposed India and Colonial Museum. Messrs. H. Broadhurst, Chessen, Campin, Paterson, and others took part in the proceedings. A resolution was passed approving the scheme, but suggesting that the Museum should be on the Victoria Embankment, so as to be accessible to the working classes; and not, as proposed, at South Kensington.

MR. A. A. HACHISAKA, a Japanese gentleman, who styles himself Prince of Awa, has been elected a member of the Athenæum Club. Some opposition was manifested to his election, but was overcome in the end.

The new steamer Loudoun Castle arrived at Singapore on the 10th inst., having made the run from Suez in seventeen days twenty-one hours mean time.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, MARCH 6.

The great election battle which was fought a third time at our neighbouring city, Altona, on the 1st of March, had called forth still more excitement, if possible, even here at Hamburg, than the second election day, on the 15th February. The exertions, of course, were enormous on both sides, and notwithstanding the Socialists having brought their last man into the field, and that even women agitated to the utmost on their side, still the Liberal party wrought the palm of victory out of their hands and secured a surplus of over 1,400 votes to their candidate, thus at last breaking down what the Socialists called their principal bulwark in North-western Germany. The member elected is Professor Karsten, at Kiel, a very experienced and learned man, who, in his political opinions, holds to that party which is called the "Fortschritts Partei," which already has had many a good struggle with the Imperial Government for developing more and more the liberty of the people as far as it is compatible with the welfare of the State. The exasperation with the Socialists in consequence is at its height, and their leaders intend to protest against this election; but no doubt such a protest will be rejected by the Imperial Parliament, as the election has been carried out in a perfectly lawful manner.

The Deutsche Naut. Verein (German Nautical Society) has finished its congress at Berlin. Amongst others a resolution has been passed to hand a petition to the Imperial Government, to the effect that the latter may use all its influence with the Government of England, that aragraphs 11, 12, 13, and 24 of the English Merchant Shipping Act f 1876 may be abolished as far as they concern German vessels. Whether the Imperial Government will comply with this petition, and if so whether the English Government will give a hearing to the demands of the German captains and owners, time will show; but certain it is that the overhasty Shipping Act of 1876 has called forth so much disappointment amongst all the North-European nations that its effects certainly will not fail, sooner or later, to make themselves perceptible in one way or another.

In regard to agriculture and the coming harvest the worst that could be feared has actually occurred; after the mild weather ever since the end of December, and after the fresh verdure had already commenced to come out on plants and trees, last week an unexpected hard frost set in, which, especially in the southern parts of Germany, has been rigorous and of very disastrous effects.

The Internationale Molkerei Ausstellung (International Dairy Exhibition) was opened on Wednesday, the 28th of February, for five days, and the attendance has been a very considerable one since the beginning.

The St. Pauli Credit Bank, an establishment of considerable interest for numerous captains of vessels on the China coast, distributes for the past year a dividend of 9 per cent.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Speculative demand has been in suspense during the past week, and transactions have therefore been of only limited extent. Money remains very abundant.

RICE.—Of raw quality arrived 8,740 bags Siam per Metis, which had already changed owners afloat.

TEA quiet, and without transactions of importance.

COTTON did not demand any attention, and of first-hand parcels no sales have transpired.

SPICES.—Mace is quoted m.5 to 5.50; Nutmegs, m.5.60 to 6.20 per kilo. Cloves are firmly maintained; Zanzibar quality at m.1.40 to 1.43. per 50 kilo.; Pepper is not so much inquired for as of late; Singapore quality m.40 to 41; Penang m.36¼ to 37 per 50 kilo. Exchange, London, 3 months, 20.32 to 20.33.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MARCH 8.

The Members of the Second Chamber are involved in a debate about the Judicial Bills. The discussions bear such a local character that it is of no use to peruse them. The general elections being near at hand the Members do all they can to please their electors and to promote the interests of their respective districts.

It is asserted that the Committee's Report on the Lower Class Instruction Bill will be published with a very short delay. I need not add that the public is most anxious to know the tenour of that document. If this on dit is quite true then it becomes possible that this Bill will be brought in for discussion soon after the Easter recess. There seems, however, to be a very trifling chance that the Reform Bill will be discussed in this sitting; it would be, indeed, to regret if this happened. It is most urgent that our electoral system should be altered.

Mr. D. de Clercq, secretary of the Dutch Trading Company, has forwarded to his Majesty a demand for his dismissal.

The leading Conservative paper het Dagblad, speaking about the Atchin article (London and China Express), concludes that this proves that public opinion in England and in the English colonies is by no means averse to interference in our affairs with Sumatra. That island, the paper says, is since the treaty was entered into with England the rat-trap in which our colonial authority could easily be caught, because that treaty has widely opened the door for such an interference, which necessarily must hurt our interests.

COMMERCIAL.

Rather a lull prevailed in our markets for Colonial Produce; there is not the least desire for speculative undertakings. A regular demand prevails for providing in the direct wants, and in consequence thereof the second hands stock is nearly exhausted. It thus is not impossible that soon a revival in the trade will take place. The Money Market remained unaltered, and any sum can be obtained at the rate of 2½ per cent.

COFFEE without demand, whilst prices declined, so that good ordinary Java is now quoted at 51½ to 52 cents. At the closing of the market there was some revival, so that a few lots of private import changed hands. The Trading Company delivered in February 58,064 bales; this cipher is very respectable.

TEA without particulars. From Foo-chow-foo arrived a cargo ex Glenlyon, consisting of 640/4 and 4,318/12 chests. They will be brought into the market early in April. In this month will be sold by private tender and in auction 25,655/4 790/3 and 1,493/12 chests Java.

RAW SUGAR rather dull. Refiners decline to operate. The nominal prices are f.2½ to f.2 under January; holders, however, refuse these biddings, because the statistic is favourable for them, so that they are waiting for improved prices.

RICE much calmer. A lot of 12,681 piculs Kandanghauer and Indramajoe ex Melusina was sold to Hamburg. The arrivals are important. Cleaned met with a regular demand.

SPICES dull; no particulars are to report. A trifling demand prevailed for Nutmegs and Mace. The quotations are nominal.

JAVA TOBACCO.—At Rotterdam was sold by private tender a lot of about 3,000 bs. (1875 crop), consisting of several headmarks. The prices which were obtained ruled between 19½c. and 42¾. About 700 bs. Scrubs were also sold, and the quality being very fine high prices were paid for them. The stock includes 1,837 bs. Rio Grande, 205 bs. Manila, 2,445 bs. Java, 3,466 bs. Sumatra, and 3,000 bs. E.I.

COTTON very dull, in consequence of the reports from abroad.

CASSIA VERA.—151 bs. were sold at prices that did not transpire.

RATTANS.—150 piculs ex Holland changed hands, and likewise 1,600 piculs, which are floating.

TIN.—The market remained unaltered; 1,200 slabs Billiton were sold at f.42, whilst Banca is quoted at f.43, but without business.

INDIGO.—Only a trifling demand prevailed; about 100 chests were sold at unaltered prices.

HIDES.—A very lively business prevailed in this article; several important lots were sold at firm but secret prices.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—Cochin is to be had at f.24½, Ceylon at f.22½.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—March 2, at Ymuiden, from Samarang, Mary Edy; 3, at Brouwershaven, from Banjoewangie, Johanna Maria; 4, at Ymuiden, from Probolingo, Aardenburg; 6, at Brouwershaven, from Batavia, Kosmopoliet III., Liberaal.

DEPARTURES.—None.

The London & China Telegraph.

LONDON: MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1877.

TAKING the accounts given in the latest Japan papers in conjunction with the last telegrams, we are able to form a somewhat more accurate idea of the recent disturbances in that country. Unfortunately, however, it is still impossible to estimate, with an approach to certainty, what the extent of the revolt may prove ultimately to be; but the best opinion, as we pointed out recently, inclines to the belief that the disturbances are not likely to prove of a very serious character. Troubles among so powerful a body of men as the Satzuma clan cannot, it is certain, be looked upon lightly. Their power is undoubted; and if they were led on by their chiefs against the Government, there is no question the matter would assume a serious aspect. From the telegrams, however, it is not clear how far this has been, or is likely to be the case; but at all events one thing appears to be certain, namely, that the present Government is strong enough to hold its own against any opposition that is likely to arise, even taking the worst view of the future. The telegrams which have been received, though somewhat meagre, all go to confirm this opinion; and we can scarcely understand, therefore, the degree to which it appears the disturbances have, according to private telegraphic advices, interfered with trade. No doubt the natives of Japan have but too good reason to fear any form of rebellion or insurrection; and doubtless, like most Asiatics, are liable to be greatly scared by a well-known and formidable name. The strength of the existing Government, too, is, in all likelihood, much underestimated by them; and consequently they may be even more apprehensive than outsiders, who can appreciate more accurately the changes in the nature of the Government, the increased centralisation, and improved protection which have been brought into play since the new order of things was introduced. There seems, in reality, no ground to apprehend that the present revolt will extend. The Government in Japan has been a little too much inclined to make its power felt, and has introduced unpopular measures, which have caused discontent. But they have, with commendable prudence, set about removing the most pressing of popular grievances—over taxation; and at the same time, according to the last accounts, have been able completely to hold their own against the insurgents. There is, therefore, every reason to hope that the difficulties which have arisen will not be of long duration.

THE revised Order in Council for the Supreme Court of China and Japan, which we mentioned some time back as being in hand, is, we learn, receiving its finishing touches at the Foreign-office, and may be expected to be issued very shortly. It will be necessary to obtain the approval of Parliament to it, which will cause a further delay, after it has passed through its alterations at the Foreign-office. The appointment of a Judge to the Supreme Court will stand over until the new Order has been passed. We trust that the alterations will not be of a too extensive character, as the original Order in Council, although it undoubtedly requires modification in some points, was upon the whole admirably adapted to the requirements of such Courts as those of China and Japan. Any attempt to introduce an elaborate Code would in all likelihood have only the effect of causing the procedure to become overlaid with needless and obstructive technicality. The long and tedious arguments which wasted the time of the Courts here immediately after the Judicature Act was introduced form a warning as to what is likely to occur in China and Japan if an elaborate Code should take the place of the present short but well-considered Order in Council.

WE understand that during the absence of Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS from the Straits Settlements the government is to be administered by Col. MCLEOD, at present commanding the troops. While we have pleasure in congratulating Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS on the honour which is conferred upon him on being selected to proceed to Australia to advise on the defensive arrangements of the Colonies, we cannot but regret that he should be removed, even though temporarily, from the sphere of his labours. This principle of borrowing Governors for special objects is obviously to be deprecated; and it curiously happens that the Straits Settlements afford a warning of the disasters likely to be produced by its being acted upon. Sir ANDREW CLARKE, formerly Governor there, after he had taken great pains to adjust the troubles in the Malay States, was suddenly withdrawn to take a post in India, and there is too much reason to believe that the outbreak which arose shortly after was attributable to a great extent to this fact.

MR. POPE HENNESSY, the Governor designate of Hong Kong, was presented on the 3rd inst. with the freedom of the City of Cork. He was complimented upon his conduct in Barbadoes and for the success with which he had come through a trying ordeal. He said that there never was a community, where the masses were more deliberately oppressed than in Barbadoes. We may state that we have ascertained upon reliable authority that, notwithstanding the adverse criticism which was showered upon Mr. HENNESSY in the above matter, the real facts of the case are such as show that very strong pressure was brought against him by the Planters, who feared that the measure of confederation which he proposed would interfere with their interests by raising the price of labour, through doing away with the effects of a local enactment which forbade the engagement of labourers in Barbadoes to work in the neighbouring islands.

SIR JAMES LONGDEN, the newly-appointed Governor of Ceylon, is expected to arrive from his present post in the West Indies about the 25th inst., and will probably proceed the following month to relieve Sir W. H. GREGORY. Sir JAMES LONGDEN has been in Government service since 1844, when he was appointed Clerk at the Falkland Islands, and was acting Colonial Secretary there in 1845; had that appointment confirmed in 1857; was President of the Virgin Islands in 1861; Lieutenant-Governor of Dominica in 1865; Lieutenant-Governor of Honduras in 1867; Governor of Trinidad in 1870, and Governor of British Guiana in 1874.

WE give in another column an interesting account sent by the correspondent of the Standard of the view which is taken in Madrid of the Sooloo question, with regard to which, as recently stated, our Government is on the point of coming to a decision. It is, as the Standard's correspondent points out, only too true that the Spanish Government, in cases like the present, is in the habit of using delays to gain time; and it is high time that our Government should insist upon some settlement of the question being arrived at. We notice that our contemporary has made use of the present occasion to urge upon the consideration of the public and the Government the abuses of Spanish rule, or, rather, misrule, in the Sooloo seas, to which we have so frequently called attention.

THE Chinese Envoys, accompanied by Dr. MACARTNEY, English Secretary of Legation, were among those present at the State dinner given at the Foreign-office on the 7th inst. by the Earl and Countess of DERBY. They proceeded on the 10th inst. to Brighton, where they were entertained by Mr. ASHBURY, M.P., and visited the Aquarium; and in the evening were present at the Pavilion Dome, where Mr. ASHBURY addressed over 3,000 persons on his recent tour round the world. He took occasion to speak in very courteous terms of the Chinese Legation in London, which he trusted would lead to an extension of amicable relations between England and China.

WE are glad that a question as to our position with reference to the Suez Canal has been asked in the House of Commons, and trust that the attention which has been thus called to the subject will lead to some improvement in the navigation, which a correspondent recently pointed out is very defective. The influence of the British Government should be exerted in this direction. We observe by a telegram from Cairo that the Canal Company have arranged with the Khedive to complete the canal connecting Cairo and Ismailia.

ACCORDING to the San Francisco papers, a proposal was made at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Feb. 16 to petition Congress to grant the same amount of subsidy to the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company as is granted to the Pacific Mail Company. It being, however, objected that it was useless to subsidise an English line, a resolution was passed to memorialise Congress to provide a semi-monthly mail between San Francisco, China and Japan.

AT the meeting of the Geographical Society, to be held this evening, Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK, President, in the chair, two papers will be read on Formosa, by HERBERT J. ALLEN, and T. L. BULLOCK, of the Consular Service.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

THE directors of the P. and O. Company have accepted the tender of Messrs. CAIRD and Co., of Greenock, for a screw steamer of the following description, and it is calculated that she will attain a high rate of speed :—Length, 400 feet; breadth, 42 feet; gross register (estimated), 4,200 tons; engines of 700-horse power nominal. She will have accommodation for upwards of two hundred passengers, and a large cargo capacity. The construction of this new vessel may doubtless be taken as an indication that the directors are already preparing for the new mail contract, which will have to be entered into on the expiration of the present one, namely, in 1880. Although the vessels now in the service perform the contracts with regularity and satisfaction, it is most probable that a higher rate of speed will be demanded by the Government; and it is wise, therefore, that the company should be prepared for such a contingency. Of late it is true that some newly-built steamers of other Indian lines have accomplished the voyage in as short a time as the P. and O. Company, and have offered good passenger accommodation; but they have not been found in general discipline and working in any way equal to the P. and O. One great point against them is the risk which passengers run in case of anything going wrong, when they have either to find their way on in another vessel, or to proceed in their steamer in its damaged state. Thus, although the public, which is always open to try new things, has given its support to some extent to new lines, there is distinct indication that this trial has proved on the whole unsatisfactory, and that the majority who have made it are glad to come back to the old Company. We are of opinion that the Chairman will have a better account to give at the next meeting with respect to the passenger traffic, as there is no doubt that it is impossible upon the whole to find better accommodation at sea than is provided by the P. and O. boats. It is the custom of travellers, and more especially of British travellers, to have their grumble wherever they go, and however they are accommodated. One person finds fault in one direction, another in another, and the sum total of these objections would seem sufficiently formidable to cause friendly hints to be given, as they often have been, at the meetings of shareholders. But it is never to be overlooked that the one passenger out of a hundred who is discontented takes good care to make himself heard, while the ninety-nine who are thoroughly satisfied with everything on board look upon the first-class accommodation as a matter of course, say nothing with regard to it, but travel by P. and O. when next they have occasion to move to or from the Far East. Notwithstanding a great deal of what we may term "fugitive" grumbling, there is no doubt that opinion among those connected with the East is as favourable now as ever it was to the Company who started the "Overland Route."

THE SALE OF THE S.S.N. COMPANY'S STEAMERS.

WE may certainly congratulate the shareholders of the S.S.N. Company upon having got rid of a fleet of obsolete and, to say the least, somewhat worn-out steamers and other property at an enormously high figure. The able managers have shown the astuteness usually attributed to their nation in the manner in which they have engineered the sale; and all who are concerned have undoubtedly come out of their speculations in "Boats" in a very happy manner. As usual, when the Chinese commence to take by themselves any of the progressive steps which are so constantly advocated, the cry is raised that their competition will completely destroy all chance of trade on the part of foreigners. The China papers seem convinced that the sale of the S.S.N. Company's fleet portends the end of all traffic for foreign steamers on the Yangtsze, and the North China Herald laments that the Ministers will not take up, as a subject for diplomatic remonstrance, the evasion of the Treaty stipulations of which the Chinese Government is guilty in subsidising the China Merchant Company. Apart, however, from the fact that it would seem rather ungracious to quarrel with the Chinese Government for aiding a native company to put a bumping sum into the pockets of the shareholders in a foreign company, and that there is little or nothing in the Treaty which would warrant such action, we think the effect of the change is generally much overestimated. It is to be remembered that for years past the S.S.N. Company has been well-known to have depended for its success to a great extent upon the special support which it obtained among certain large Chinese traders, and the change therefore is to this extent one rather of name than of fact. The S.S.N. Company have had the largest portion of the Yangtsze trade, but have not had it all; and a company conducted by Chinese will hardly be likely to fare much better. It is true that in China the support of the strong native guilds is of very great importance; but this support will not necessarily go with the Government; and we may reasonably expect to see that it will be extended to those steamers which offer cheaper freights. This a well organised foreign company would unquestionably be able to do; and we fully expect to find that the Holt's line will continue to run in active competition with the China Merchant's, if, indeed, it be not further extended in its working. It was thought that this same company would be able to clear foreign competitors off the coast; but up to the present they have certainly not gone very far towards doing so, and the likelihood is, notwithstanding the temporary scare, that the same state of things will be found on the river. The immense advantage, which a foreign Company enjoys over a Chinese one in the purchase and management of its vessels must of necessity tell; and it will take a great deal of subsidising and the like indirect support from the Government to enable a native company to hold its own against it. It may be that in the course of years the internal traffic as well as the internal trade in China is destined to fall into the hands of the Chinese; but as yet that time is afar off, and there is no necessity to fear that, notwithstanding native competition, Europeans will still be able to hold their own in a branch of business so essentially foreign as that of running steamers.

FAMINES IN CHINA.

NOTHING can more clearly demonstrate the urgent necessity for the development of the enormous resources of the Chinese Empire than the sad famines which from time to time take place, and of which the news brought by the last mail affords us a striking and painful example. Thouands upon thousands of people have been plunged into helpless misery and starvation by the partial failure of the rice crops, in a country which, were its commercial and productive capabilities, but half developed, would be at all times rich enough to tide over any such disaster without more serious consequences than a temporary pressure. Those who are disposed to form an ideal of China and of the life of the Chinese, and to look upon the country as blessed with an easy system where life is free from the pressure so much felt in countries more advanced in civilisation, must have their views rudely shaken when such disasters as that which has just occurred take place. Under the apparently peaceful and contented life of the ordinary Chinaman lies one of grinding poverty and anxiety; and the want of State combination and organisation, and, above all, of the means of turning the resources of the country to their best account, become conspicuously and painfully apparent. It is no exaggeration to say that China may be rolling in material prosperity in one province and starving in another—the means of intercommunication being so defective that the supplies cannot be transported, so that any sudden disaster, such as a flood, or the unexpected failure of the crops, is felt with intense and appalling severity. A highly developed state of trade and of mechanical improvements have undoubtedly their disadvantages as well as their advantages. They make ordinary life harder; food generally dearer; the necessity for steady unremitting toil more pressing; but while they do this they spread the incalculable blessing of relief from the extreme effects of sudden and unexpected disaster, and enable the States in which they are found to tide over difficulties which would otherwise overwhelm them. In no country in the world does political disorganisation follow more quickly upon a want of food among the masses than in China; and upon this ground, if upon no other, the official classes ought to welcome foreign improvements as a means of relieving them of a danger of which they have too good reason to be in constant dread. Rebellions in China have repeatedly been brought about by the actual wants of the district in which have originated; and of this the governing classes are so well aware that they are always anxious to supply food to the people in order to keep them quiet. It is therefore most deeply to be regretted that they cannot be brought to see where the true remedy for the state of things they so much dread is to be found. Improved intercommunication by railways, greater facilities for inland trade, which would tend to equalise prices and to make the spread of produce more even throughout the empire, would take off the edge of such famines as the one which is now causing the poor in the north of China to flock homeless and foodless to the cities to keep themselves alive; those who can, by begging, those who cannot, by crime. The mineral resources of China if developed by means of foreign appliances are almost unlimited; and there can be no question that were the masses made to depend upon their development instead of relying almost alone upon the agricultural products, they would without difficulty be able to tide over a failure in their crops; and with the products of their industry in other directions lay in stores of grain from other countries. This is the real lesson which China should learn from the repeated famines which she suffers. They are actually needless, as their effects could be mitigated to such an extent by a wiser system of commerce and the admission of mechanical improvements in the way of railways, machinery for manufactures and the development of the mines, that the country could face with ease troubles which now almost overwhelm. It is to be hoped that those who have the welfare of China at heart will seize the opportunity of impressing this fact upon such officials as they may come in contact with. The more enlightened among the Chinese authorities are beginning dimly to perceive that there is after all something worthy their attention in foreign civilisation; and assuredly no more useful lesson could be impressed upon them than the obvious one which is above indicated. The Government should be told by those to whom they give their confidence, and to whose advice they will listen, that they will do more wisely to make use of their funds in developing the country than in laying out millions on external defences, which would prove useless to them if they should ever really come into collision with any of the leading foreign nations. By developing the resources of the country they would at once be taking steps which would benefit the people and be shaping their course towards a peaceful instead of a warlike solution of the question of intercourse with foreign countries. Assuredly by this time China ought to know that the former line of action is the only one in which they can hope to be successful.

TRADE BETWEEN INDIA AND CHINA.

THE remarks which Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK made at the meeting of the Society of Arts on the 2nd instant, with reference to the concessions obtained by Sir THOMAS WADE as to the establishment of a trade route between India and China are of great interest, as there can be no doubt that his opinion will have considerable weight in official quarters. Sir RUTHERFORD was much more progressive in the ideas which he expressed on this occasion than he is ordinarily, and it is satisfactory to find one who is generally so averse to any undue desire to push our interests forward, recognising the fact that the time has come when we should take steps to make good the footing of our trade in Central Asia; and acknowledging that the concession which has been obtained by Sir THOS. WADE is one of a very important character. The walls of obstruction have been broken down, and in Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK'S opinion it will only remain for Sir THOS. WADE "to ask the Chinese to allow us to carry out the same "principle which enabled Russia to trade along the frontier, "and they cannot refuse us." This is undoubtedly true; and we trust that sufficient firmness will be exerted to make the concessions which have been granted really effectual. The great danger is that the Chinese may attempt to evade them; and while pretending to grant all that is demanded really throw obstructions in the way. Against this, no doubt, Sir THOS. WADE will be upon his guard, but probably nothing in the Convention will depend more for its practical value upon the manner in which it is carried out than the provisions with reference to the new trade route, and the explanations upon this point in the promised memorandum from Sir THOS. WADE will be specially interesting, and will call for careful attention.

TAXATION IN SAIGON.

A COMPLAINT is made by the Saigon Independent that the Colony is much overburdened by the taxes which are laid upon it by the Home Government; and especially that it should have been saddled with the expenses attending the occupation of Tonquin. In this, it can hardly be denied, the Colony has grounds for some discontent, as, although it was most directly interested in the measure in question, it undoubtedly seems hard that a young and not over prosperous Settlement should be saddled with the cost of expeditions of this character. We have something similar in our own Colonies in the military contributions, which have long been the subject of just though unavailing complaint; but even these have a better raison d'être in one very important respect, namely, that troops are at least sent to the Colonies paying the money, nominally for their protection. The trade of Saigon is not sufficiently flourishing to admit of its having heavy burdens laid upon it; and we trust that the French Government will pay some attention to the complaints which have been made, and will endeavour to give their station in the Far East a fair chance. A tendency to overburden young places has been the chief cause of the failure of Continental nations to establish successful Colonies, and France owes her inability to do so, at least, in part, to this mistake. The manner in which the Home country should look for benefit from her Colonies is by increase of trade; and it is a very great error to overburden new places with taxes which will have the effect of crippling them and so preventing their attaining to the development which will cause them to become a source of real and lasting strength to the mother country.

INDIAN VERSUS CHINA TEAS.

At a late meeting of the Indian Section of the Society of Arts a paper of which a brief summary was given at the time, was read by Mr. A. Burrell, in which he traced the history of the cultivation of Tea in India from its earliest introduction to the present time. As far back as 1780 Colonel Kid, a gentleman who devoted attention to the subject, grew tea-plants received from Canton in his garden at Calcutta, and reported favourably upon them; and successive experiments were made showing that the plant could thrive in our East India possessions down to 1830, when a Committee of both Houses of Parliament sat to examine affairs connected with China, in regard to the policy to be adopted towards the old East India Company, whose charter was expiring. The question of tea was discussed in connection with the China trade, and they took some notice, though not much, of its possible cultivation in India. Later on, namely, in 1834, the East India Company sanctioned proceedings calculated to promote the growth of tea in India, the result being the setting on foot of an experimental establishment in Assam, for the purpose of cultivating and manufacturing tea — the produce thus obtained being favourably reported upon by the London brokers in 1836. This was the origin of the "Assam Tea Company," to whom the Government of India in 1840 ceded the greater part of the Tea plantations which they had set on foot, and withdrew from the enterprise. Mr. Burrell goes on to give a very valuable detailed history of the progress of the culture; after which he gives some figures, showing the wonderful development during the last fifteen years of the consumption of India Teas in this country, from which it appears that from 1¼ million lbs. in 1861 it has risen up to 27 million lbs. in 1876, and is anticipated to be 32 million lbs., or about one-fourth of the total consumption of tea throughout the kingdom this year. The India Teas have always commanded the best prices in the market, and of late large quantities of cheap sweet teas have been imported from China to mix with the stronger and more pungent growths from India. Mr. Burrell concludes with some general remarks upon the benefits which will be derived from cheap Teas, with which most of our readers will concur. He notes it, however, as a melancholy fact, we find the most execrable tea out of a London coffee-house supplied at the teetotal hotels, where, being an article in special demand, it is usually kept on tap, steaming and boiling, to the utter destruction of all its good qualities. Could his feeble voice reach Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the great apostle of the cause, he would urge on him that our Indian tea deserves the patronage of his ardent votaries, and that they should treat it justly and considerately.

OUR POSITION IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I have read with much interest the letter inserted in your issue of the 5th inst., signed "Another D.," whom I, although without his permission, claim as an associate with regard to the question of relations between the Chinese and the European nations, as suggested by your article entitled "Chinese Labour in England."

The only difference between us is, that "Another D." argues

from a purely European point of view, while I consider the subject in the abstract only; thus his "opening-up of China" is a one-sided arrangement, based upon extra-territorial jurisdiction, while the "opening-up," to which I have taken the liberty to refer, is a state of affairs which can only be brought about by the gradual assimilation of the Chinese to the European standard of civilisation, a state of affairs which would do away with the necessity for extra-territoriality.

The fact of individuals other than Chinese being able to compete in China with the natives of the soil, by accepting the conditions of the country, was not brought forward by me in order to show our relations in the most favourable light, but simply for the purpose of showing the inconsistency of the popular comprehension of these relations.

"Another D." mentions as an instance of the difficulties under which foreigners labour, that the construction of railways is prohibited in China. The prohibition I suspect does not refer to railways as such, but to a thorough European institution, which cannot be introduced into China without the assistance of Europeans, who, while residing in the country, are totally independent of its laws and usages. If the Chinese were our equals in civilisation, in manners and customs, as they are in diplomatic intercourse, the matter would be entirely changed, they would hail with pleasure any scheme likely to advance the prosperity of their country, and individuals would not be slow in profiting by it.

When mentioning extra-territoriality I did not—"Another D.' will allow me to point out—say or imply that the arrangements is our fault. He asserts that it is the fault of the Chinese themselves, and I do not entirely disagree with him. The Chinese are to blame for not taking kindly to European institutions, just as an Englishman is to blame when he, at the age of eighteen, for instance, makes up his mind to belong to a certain political party, simply because his ancestors belonged to that political party, and follows that party blindly, whatever the changes which may take place in the world and in himself before he is gathered to his fathers.

Although I do not pretend to admire the Chinese I cannot help taking their part when the people of the present day are blamed for that which is in fact the result of a lack of progressiveness in the previous generations. It is very sad that the Celestials of yore have not gone ahead as we think they ought to have done; but it is hardly fair to blame the Celestials of to-day for not taking giant strides, considering that their ancestors have been nearly stationary, and that the worship of ancestors is one of their principal religious tenets.

The above remarks refer to the people as a whole. Allow me, in conclusion, to add a few words respecting the Chinese Government in its relations to the populace, suggested by "Another D.'s" letter. Radical reforms must be the reflex of the wishes of the people, otherwise they are mere despotic measures. If they are not the offspring of co-operation between the Chinese Government and the people they cannot be productive of good. Now, in the present state of the Chinese Empire the relations between the populace and the authorities simply amount to this. If the latter have their own way the people are in a state of thraldom; when the former reign supreme anarchy and confusion cannot be avoided. In short, the relations are of such a nature that they cannot be measured by a standard supplied by our civilisation, and it is only, I think, by the gradual influence from without that they can be materially changed.

I shall be glad if "Another D." will continue to ventilate a subject which cannot fail to interest some of your readers, and I remain, apologising for the length of my letter, D.

THE "COURT NEWSMAN."

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Cannot the Court Newsman get some assistance so as to avoid the ridiculous mistakes which are made whenever the name of one of the Celestial dignities is given? In the report of the Drawing Room on Friday in The Times I find Liu-Tah-Jen given as Liu-*tar*jen. I am not over sensitive about tones and particles, but cockneyism at Court seems really dreadful.—Yours faithfully, SEAOU.

THE LAST TEA SEASON.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The Tea season now ending, like many previous, has again resulted in loss to importers. It is argued tea cannot be produced at the prices ruling for a long time past, but the enormous import for 1876-7, which will be little short of 200,000,000 lbs., must surely disprove this notion, and the supply will very likely be exceeded in 1877-8, having increased steadily from 70,000,000, season 1858-9, to the present wonderful figures. Though the import continues to be carried on to the impoverishment of merchants the other branches of the trade are flourishing to a surprising degree, so it would seem those controlling the buying at the shipping ports must be deluded by the tactics of the astute Chinese, or cannot, or will not, realise the true normal condition of the London market, and the certain disastrous results through high cost and consequent over-supplies. The condition of the Russian Tea Trade it is to be hoped will also induce buyers to give up paying the fancy prices which have helped to mislead. It cannot be denied that for years past prices have been from 10 per cent. to 30 per cent. too high, more than ever apparent of late, owing to the poor stuff of the bulk, especially from Foochow, once the favourite district. The speculative or gambling element also continues rampant, a few firms embarking in gigantic risks, either with the hope of retrieving previous losses, or to monopolise the trade; this necessitates hurried purchases, which the Chinese naturally are not slow to avail of to the full advantage. The high freight that has itself crept in of late is quite a new feature, though a great item to shippers who virtually pay the Canal dues, to say nothing of flooding the market, thus reducing the value of their shipments. Lastly, the number of buyers who now go to and fro to China, when they leave England take no heed of events causing the unsatisfactory trading, but relapse into the fallacy that an exceptional condition rules, and tea is too cheap, whereas increasing production, and the marked superiority of Indian tea makes it imperative that an altered system of buying must commence to prevent further disastrous losses.—I am, &c.,

London, March 7, 1877. MINCING-LANE.

Monetary and Commercial.

The losses on Congous have—as will be seen by a correspondent's letter in this Paper—been the subject of some comment among the Tea trade. They have been roughly estimated at something like 20 per cent. The likelihood, however, is that this estimate is in many cases exaggerated, as a reference to prices in Foochow, at least, will show that the cost of many of the present parcels was not very greatly over their selling price. If, however, these low prices should have the effect of diminishing the supply of low grade Teas by 5,000,000 or 10,000,000 lbs. next season, a much improved range of prices might reasonably be anticipated. Nothing but such a diminution of supply can ameliorate the present deplorable depression.

We regret to announce that Mr. H. G. Erichsen has found it necessary to file a petition for liquidation; but we understand that the Great Northern Telegraph Company, for which he was agent, will not be affected by the failure.

A prospectus has been issued of the Oriental Coffee Company, with a capital of £100,000, of which one-half is to be now issued in shares of £10 each, and of this £20,000 has been subscribed privately by the directors, &c. The object is to purchase suitable ground for coffee cultivation, and as a commencement 2,100 acres of forest land, about seventy miles from Calicut, have been secured for £8,000, payable in shares, and the clearing of a portion of this is now being proceeded with.

The report of the directors of the International Bank of Hamburg and London states the net profit for the year 1876 at £23,247, after providing for all charges and doubtful and bad debts. The profits of 1875—£44,353—were all retained against a claim which the bank had against the Deutsche Brazilienische Bank. This claim has been finally settled in a manner that will leave the bank with a loss of £25,700, or 30 per cent. of the original amount due. Deducting this from the profits of 1875, and adding the balance to the profits of 1876, there is a total sum of £41,900 available for distribution, out of which the directors recommend a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. This will take £35,100; £5,000 is to be added to reserve, and £1,800 carried forward.

The traffic receipts of the Eastern Extension Australasia and China Telegraph Company (Limited), for the month of February, 1877, amounted to £19,645, and to £19,027 for the corresponding period of 1876.

The report of the Alliance British and Foreign Life and Fire Assurance Company for the past year states that in the life department 323 new policies were issued, insuring £229,337. The life income of the year was £143,343, and, after paying all claims, the surplus left was £32,334, which, added to the insurance fund, raised it to £1,002,566. In the fire department the year's income was £272,151, and, after payment of all claims, &c., there was a surplus left of £121,057, of which £55,000 has been applied to payment of a dividend and bonu equal to 10 per cent. on the share capital, and £66,057 is added to the fire insurance fund, making it £351,359.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week was 3,167,428 lbs., which was 84,840 lbs. less than was taken out of bond during the corresponding week of 1876. The falling off was chiefly in the quantity taken for home consumption; for the sum received as duty was £2,803 3s. 6d. less than was taken during the corresponding week of last year. The tea duty paid in London last week was £52,806 11s. 6d.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of February amounted to f.320,000, against f. 303,180 last year. The total traffic receipts from the 1st of January to the 28th of February amounted to f.636,565, against f.578,432 last year.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The market during the past week has been fairly active, owing to large sales without reserve, chiefly of common to fair Red-leaf, the bulk of which is said to be on Chinese account. It is to be hoped such is the case, as at the prices realised, namely, 7¼d. to 9d. per lb., the cost, including a £3 steamer freight, leaves heavy losses on these low quotations, and the feeling is general that they must sink yet lower should further supplies be forced off. Dealers are fully supplied with common Teas, and though there was a little speculation for a few days it died out when the last telegram from China gave the export to Feb. 28th at 162,000,000 lbs. In medium to fine Congou prices rule steady at, however, much under import cost, and some severe losses must result to those not fortunate enough to sell earlier in the season, not perhaps having courage to take the first loss teas on arrival. In the late series of public sales there were several parcels of Oolong, which sold at a further reduction, and looking at the superior quality of this season's yield and the present low prices we may reasonably expect some rally, as the imports are now finished for this season. Scented Teas have been sold at lower prices at the late auctions. Greens are in full supply from recent arrivals via the Cape. The sales for the week ending the 7th inst. amount to 20,252 packages, which were offered, 18,852 being "without reserve." The Teas were assorted as follows:—Congou, 13,818 packages; Souchong, 990; Oolong, 1,279; S.O. Pekoe, 941; Scented Caper, 1,871; Gunpowder, 403; Hyson, 444; Y. Hyson, 369, &c. The Congous consisted chiefly of the lower grades of Red and Black leaf; these sold somewhat irregularly, but in many cases show a decline on last week's rates; common to fair Red-leaf sold at 6¾d. to 9d.; common Black-leaf, 7¼d. to 8d.; fair, 10d. to 11½d.; common to fair Souchong brought 7½d. to 11¾d. per lb.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular states:—Our market remains in the same depressed state so long noted. The continued pressure to sell common Teas at auction, without reserve, keeps the private market very quiet; and although the prices for good Teas are fairly maintained, the amount of business is very small. At auction, the prices for common Teas were rather irregular, occasionally showing a slight decline on those of the previous week. Scented Teas: Common Canton Capers have sold from 11½d. to 1s. per lb., being fully ½d. per lb. lower. At auction, some parcels of good quality only realised 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. per lb., showing fully 1d. per lb. reduction. Orange Pekoes: The Macao kinds have been steady. Long-leaf kinds, about 1s. 2d. per lb., have been inquired for. At sale fair sold from 1s. 1¾d. to 1s. 2d., and good from 1s. 3½d. to 1s. 5½d. per lb. Foochow kinds, both of Caper and Orange Pekoe, show no alteration. The Stock in the United Kingdom on the 28th Feb. was estimated at 104,251,000 lbs., against 100,561,000 lbs. last year, and the quantity afloat (advices by letter) at 3,406,000 lbs., against 4,482,000 lbs. of China Tea, and 3,455,000 lbs., against 2,115,000 lbs. of India Tea.

Messrs. Thompson report:—The business has been almost entirely confined to public sales "without reserve," which have consisted chiefly of common to fair grades of Congou, the bulk being Foochow kinds, which have sold at gradually receding rates. Medium and fine have not been pressed, but importers are anxious to close their interest even in these grades. Green Teas have been forced off in considerable quantities. Prices are generally ½d. to 1d. lower for common to fair grades of Congou—at auction, occasionally, showing a much heavier decline. Souchongs and Oolongs, 1d. to 2d. Scented Teas, ½d. to 1d. Green Teas, Fine Gunpowders, and Hysons, 2d. per lb. lower.

The Circular of Messrs. Lloyd and Cheshire states:—The Tea market still continues very depressed; sales by private contract being difficult to effect, importers have had recourse to public sale "without reserve," the quanity thus offered being larger than for some time past; the bulk of the teas has consisted of Common Black and Red Leaf kinds, of which class our market is over-stocked; prices in consequence have been forced down to an extremely low range; common Black Leaf sells from 7¼d. to 8d. per lb., and the grades worth 2d. to 3d. per lb. more, relatively, only realise 8½d. to 9½d.

SILK.

The Circular of Messrs. Waithman and Co. states:—The Silk market is passing through a trying ordeal, and the reaction from the high prices ruling in the autumn certainly appears extreme. The utmost depression prevailed during the whole of the past month, and the prices obtained at the public sales must have entailed a heavy loss upon the sellers. A very considerable quantity of thrown Silk, however, was sold, and as the mills have so largely decreased their production there seems some probability of this article becoming scarce should any revival of demand arise for the manufactured goods. In China Raw Silk the stocks have been increased to the extent of about 2,000 bales by the purchases from Lyons, but the deliveries show a decrease upon those of January.

Messrs. Arles Dufour and Co. in their Lyons Circular report a fall since the 10th ult. of from 3 to 6 francs, both in European and Asiatic sorts. It is attributed by them to political causes, the reduction of work in Lyons and exaggerated statements made by the Radical Deputy for the city, which lead to apprehensions of a crisis, in consequence of which numerous orders from the United States were cancelled by telegram.

Messrs. D. O'Donoghue and Co., of New York, in their Circular state that business has been very unsatisfactory and prices unsettled and lagging. This is attributed mainly to the unsettled state of political matters in Europe. The qualities of Chinas on hand are pronounced as very inferior to last season, and finest and best grades are firmly held.

Messrs. B. Richardson and Son, of New York, state that most of the late arrivals had been on Chinese account, and some parcels were of Silk, and concessions had to be made on them.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The market for export Yarns seems to have taken a turn towards more activity, as there has been a considerable business done for China at prices a trifle below the spinners' highest quotations, as some large buyers have been in the market, believing it has reached the lowest point to be expected for some time. The Cloth market has been quiet and very flat. There is no movement in any class of goods. The accounts from China are unfavourable. Prices have been so little tested that no change can be made in them. Best 8¼ lbs. are nominal, 9s. 1½d.

THE NEW STEAMER GLENEAGLES.

This magnificent vessel, commanded by Captain McBain, which left London on the 11th inst. for the Straits and China, was built and engined by the London and Glasgow Engineering and Iron Shipbuilding Company (Limited), for Messrs. McGregor, Gow, and Co., and is the latest addition to their well-known Glen line of China steamers. Her length is 367 feet 6 inches, breadth 37 feet 2 inches, depth 26 feet 6 inches, with a gross tonnage of 2,801 tons. Her boilers are the largest and heaviest made in Scotland, weighing 60 tons each, exclusive of superheater, equal to an additional 10 tons. She is supplied with all improvements in her engines, with Messrs. Weir's feed-heating apparatus, and with a patent hydracrometer. The vessel is steered by steam, and has Messrs. Napier Brothers' patent windlass and steering gear; she also has Sir W. Thomson's patent steering compass, and patent sounding machine, which can be used in 30 fathoms, with the vessel going at 14 knots, it having been tested on the passage round from Glasgow to London, when soundings were obtained as above stated, which proved perfectly correct. She has 4 hatchways, with 5 steam winches, and is masted for taking in or discharging cargo weighing up to 36 tons; she is manned by a crew of 60 all told, has accommodation for 30 passengers, and is fitted with all the modern improvements. During the run from the Clyde to London she averaged 13¼ knots, with her engines working slowly—but taking flood and ebb, one with the other, she made 16¼ statute miles; her engines, working on trial, indicated 2,600-horse power. On the 5th inst. a luncheon was provided by the owners. Amongst those present were Major and Mrs. Forester, Mr. Barclay, M.P., Miss Farren, Mr. John Toole, Mr. James, Mr. Duplat Taylor, Mr. C. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. McGregor, Capt. and Mrs. McBain, Capt. and Mrs. Hutton, Mr. R. Brown. There was a grand display of flags from stem to stern of the steamer, which was very attractive. It is expected that the vessel will make the passage to Hong Kong in less than forty days.

THE CLYDE SHIPBUILDING TRADE.

The number of vessels and the aggregate amount of tonnage put into the water during the past month compare very unfavourably with either the preceding month or the corresponding period last year. There was launched during the month in the upper district of the Clyde, which embraces Govan, Partick, Dalmuir, Renfrew, and Dumbarton, 10 vessels, representing an aggregate tonnage of 6,678 tons, or an average of 668 tons. Of these, 6 were steamers and 4 sailing vessels. Though not perhaps so prominently brought out this month as in previous ones, it is, nevertheless, very evident how largely the sailing vessels exceed the steamers in number. The prevailing remark is "few steam orders going," and there can be little doubt that a slow but steady re-action has set in in favour of sailing vessels. In the Govan district the month does not bulk largely as regards launches. Messrs. John Elder and Co. put nothing into the water, though, of course, they are very busy, and will continue so for a long time to come. With H.M.S. Nelson and the six Government steel corvettes, not to mention numerous merchant steamers, their hands are pretty well filled, and they have recently contracted with the Flushing and Queensborough Steamship Company to supply two large steamers. Messrs. R. Napier and Son are busily engaged with H.M.S. Northampton and other vessels. Messrs. Dobie and Co. launched yesterday the Firth of Tay, an iron sailing vessel of 850 tons, which is intended for Messrs. James Spencer and Co., Glasgow. Messrs. Alexander Stephen and Sons launched the Lurline, an iron sailing barque of about 800 tons. This vessel is intended for the Calcutta and New Zealand trade. In Partick and district the month has been a busy one, and prospects are decidedly brighter. Messrs. David and William Henderson launched the Zeta, an iron sailing barque of about 650 tons. The Zeta has been built to the order of the Swansea Merchant Shipowners' Company. Messrs. T. Wingate and Co. launched a steam dredging machine of 144 tons capacity for the Town Council of Campbeltown, and they likewise launched a screw steam hopper barge of 600 tons capacity for the Cork Harbour Commissioners. Messrs. Wingate and Co. are engaged on a number of dredgers for the Dutch Government. Messrs. Aitken and Mansel put into the water the Discoverer, a screw steamship of about 2,150 tons. The Discoverer, which has been built to the order of Messrs. Thomas and Jas. Thomson, Liverpool, is the first of two sister vessels building for the same owners, and will be added to their Liverpool and Calcutta fleet. Messrs. William Swan and Son launched an iron screw-steamer named Lora for the coasting trade of Messrs. J. and J. Macfarlane. The Lora is about 110 tons register.

In Dumbarton the prospects are a shade brighter than when we last reported, and one or two fresh orders were secured during the month. Messrs. William Denny and Brothers received an order for a steamer, which makes their present number of vessels on hand five. Messrs. M'Kellar and Co. launched the Gem, an iron-screw steamer of about 55 tons, for the coasting trade of Mr. William Robertson, Glasgow. Messrs. A. M'Millan and Sons put into the water the Yarra Yarra, an iron sailing ship of 1,340 tons, built to the order of Messrs. Wm. Crackie and Co., of Liverpool, and intended for that firm's Australian and Eastern trades. The Yarra Yarra is expected to prove a very fast sailer. Mr. Thomas Muir launched a steam screw yacht of about 43 tons B.M., built to the order of Messrs. William Denny and Brothers.

In Greenock and Port Glasgow nothing of particular importance has occurred since the last report. The following are the details:—Greenock, Messrs. R. Steele and Co., a screw steamer of about 700 tons, named the Melrose, to the order of Messrs. Donald Currie and Co., for trading at the Cape; Messrs. Caird and Co., a screw steamer of 1,286 tons, named the Tambora, for the Netherlands India Steam Navigation Company, for the West Indian trade; Mr. J. E. Scott, a barquentine of 500 tons, named the Gipsy Queen, for Messrs. Lewis Potter and Co., Glasgow. In Port Glasgow, Messrs. Henry Murray and Co., an awning-decked screw steamer, 190½ feet long, 27 feet broad, and 21 feet deep in the hold, fitted with engines of 107-horse power, still for sale; Messrs. Russell and Co., a barque of 1,065 tons, named the Sciriol Wyn, for Captain Pritchard, of Anglesea; Messrs. Murdoch and Murray, a hopper barge for the Clyde Navigation Trust, 150 feet long, 20 feet broad, 12 feet deep, and capable of carrying 500 tons of dredged material. The following is a note of the contracts received since last report:—Greenock: Messrs. Caird and Co., a large screw steamer for the Netherlands Steam Navigation Company, and a river steamer in room of the wrecked Lady Gertrude; Messrs. Scott and Co., two large steamers of about 1,000 tons each for a Shanghai firm. Mr. J. E. Scott is said to have received an order for a steamer of about 2,500 tons. Port Glasgow: Messrs. William Hamilton and Co., two large steamers, and a steam yacht of 180 tons.

AMERICAN SHIPBUILDING.—Returns of shipbuilding tonnage in Maine for the year 1876, made from official sources, show the total value of tonnage built, estimating the cost at $50 per ton, to be $3,678,667. The largest amount of tonnage built has been in the Bath district, and the smallest amount in the Saco district. The Bath district also shows the largest increase, and the Bangor district the largest decrease. The total amount of tonnage built in the State in 1876 was 73,573 34-100, a decrease of 1,487 11-100 as compared with 1875, when the total amount of tonnage was 75,060 45-100, and a decrease of 48,975 40-100 as compared with 1874, when the total amount of tonnage built was 122,548 74-100. The aggregate number of vessels built in 1876 was 138, embracing 31 ships, 22 barks, 4 barkentines, and the remainder smaller vessels. In 1875 there were built 152 vessels, embracing 20 ships, 19 barks, 8 barkentines, and the remainder smaller vessels. In 1874 there were built 253 vessels, embracing 31 ships, 36 barks, 11 barkentines, and the remainder smaller vessels. The prospects are that a larger amount of tonnage will be built the present year than last year.

IMPORTANT BOARD OF TRADE ACTION.—On the 2nd inst. defences were lodged in the action raised in Greenock Sheriff Court at the instance of the Board of Trade against Captain Lindemann, of the Netherlands Steam Navigation Company, to recover £14 9s., being the expense incurred last year in providing five stokers with a passage home from Port Said, where they had been discharged from the vessel Patocah, and left, it is alleged, without any means of support. The defence is that the men signed an agreement before the Dutch Consul to go to Java, by which they became subject to the Dutch law, which ruled the contract, that the men were disobedient and disorderly, and that the dismissal was duly legal.

SHIPPING CASUALTIES.—The direction of the Bureau Veritas has published the following statistics of maritime disasters reported during the month of January, 1877, concerning all flags:—Sailing vessels reported lost—76 English, 26 American, 23 German, 23 Norwegian, 16 French, 10 Danish, 6 Swedish, 6 Greek, 5 Austrian, 5 Italian, 5 Dutch, 4 Portuguese, 3 Spanish, 3 Russian, and 1 Turkish, 43 of which the nationality is unknown; total, 255. In this number are included 4 vessels reported missing. Steamers lost—11 English, 2 American, 1 Danish, 1 German, and 1 Swedish, 2 of which the nationality is unknown; total, 18.

A QUICK VOYAGE.—The iron clipper ship Star of Greece, 1,227 tons register, Captain William J. Shaw, owned by Messrs. J. P. Corry and Co., Belfast and London, has just completed her voyage from the Downs to Calcutta and back in the unprecedentedly short period of 5 months 24 days and 21 hours. Shipowners in this trade have long considered the accomplishment of the "round" within six months as possible, but by no means probable.

THE following are the P. and O. steamers now in the Victoria Docks:—Gwalior, Khedive, Thibet, Baroda, Delhi, and Nubia; the three last named are laid up. The Indus, which left London on the 4th inst., takes the China mail of the 8th from Southampton; the Gwalior, the Bombay mail of the 15th; the Khedive, the China mail of the 22nd; and the Thibet will follow with the Bombay mail of the 29th inst. The Hindostan, repairing at Southampton, is expected to be completed by the end of April.

ON the 28th ult. Mr. James Gardiner launched from the shipbuilding-yard, South Hylton, Sunderland, a barque of the following dimensions, viz.:—Length, 143 feet; breadth, 30 feet; and depth, 18 feet; twelve years' class. The vessel was named the Halia by Miss Cook, of Durham. She has been purchased by Mr. R. Humble, and is the tenth ship constructed for him by Mr. Gardiner, and is intended for the India and China trade.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., is barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend, to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER

dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningsham, near Warminster, Wilts:—

"I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am 78 years old.

"Remaining, Gentlemen yours very respectfully, "L. S."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

(Ex Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other.

REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium.

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

EXTRACTS FROM MEDICAL OPINIONS.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.

None genuine without the word "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. Sold in Hong Kong and Shanghai by Watson and Co.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The general aspect of affairs in China is much the same as was indicated by the last mail's news. Efforts are being made to relieve the sufferers from the famine by private individuals, both foreign and native, but there are complaints of a want of sufficient energy in this matter in official quarters. This statement must, however, be taken with some reservation, as such complaints would be certain to be made against the officials let them do what they might. An advance in the direction of improved diplomatic intercourse is reported by the North China Herald to have taken place at Peking in the first week in January, when in addition to Prince Kung and the Ministers of the Foreign Board (Tsung-li Yamen), some twenty-five or thirty of the "heads of departments," including the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of the Six Boards, the Han-lin Yuan, and the Censorate, &c., went the rounds of the Foreign Legations on successive days, to wish the compliments of the season in person. The accounts of the actions of Tso-Tsung-tang in the north-west are satisfactory, and, according to latest reports, the Imperialists were actively following up the victory which they gained at Urumtsi. An extraordinary document referring to the collection of lekin dues in Shanghai, and purporting to be of official origin, has been published in a native newspaper at that port. The effect of the regulations there set forth would be to increase both the oppressiveness and the vexatiousness of the tax very considerably, and it is strongly condemned by the English Press. It seems somewhat strange that this further action should be taken under the new Convention, when we have Lord Derby's recent declaration that the Government has not yet decided whether that instrument shall be confirmed or rejected. As bearing upon the question of Chinese immigrants to the United States (which has recently been discussed here and in the American papers, on the basis of the report of the Congressional Committee) it is interesting to note that the Chinese authorities at Peking have been quick to seize the vantage ground left to them, and have made some representations to Mr. Seward, the United States Minister in China, with reference to the usual treatment of Chinese in San Francisco. From Canton we learn with pleasure that Sir Brooke Robertson was recovering. From Hong Kong news is brought that two Government employés have absconded.

Another Chinese gunboat had been launched. Advices had been received of the total loss of the steamer Singapore.

From Japan there is nothing new respecting the insurrectionary movements. Some more editors have been fined, but it is now announced that the Press Laws are to be modified. A rock in the vicinity of Idzu, formerly hidden by the water, is now said to be visible. The yacht Sunbeam, belonging to Mr. Brassy, M.P., arrived at Yokohama on the 29th January. A farewell dinner has been given to Mr. W. G. Howell, editor of the Japan Mail.

Sir William Jervois, Governor of the Straits Settlements, is to leave on his mission to Australia about the 2nd of April. It is understood to be his intention to return to the Straits. Mr. W. E. Maxwell has left for Perak to act as Resident in place of Mr. J. G. Davidson. Mr. P. A. Seth, Warden of the Armenian Church at Singapore, has been ordained a deacon by Archbishop Gregoris. The ceremony is described as imposing. Latest advices report all quiet in Salangore. A memorial is to be drawn up by the Penang Association to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, praying that the Penang Division of the Supreme Court shall not be subordinate to that at Singapore.

A notification of some importance with reference to trade at Sooloo is published by the United States Consul at Shanghai. It shows that the Spanish authorities are recognising the necessity of modifying their restrictive policy in that quarter. The prizes to the scholars in the municipal school at Saigon have been distributed by the Mayor.

At Bangkok the U.S. corvette Ashuelot, with Rear-Admiral Reynolds, arrived on the 11th January. The admiral and staff had a public audience with the King.

JAPAN.

—o—

YOKOHAMA.

The Japan Gazette states that it is reported in the native press that a rock, situated in the vicinity of Idzu, formerly entirely covered by water, is now to be seen above the surface of the sea.

The magnificent Royal Yacht Squadron steam-yacht Sunbeam, Mr. Thomas Brassey, M.P., captain and owner, arrived in Yokohama harbour on 29th Jan. from Honolulu, on a cruise round the world.

A public dinner was given on the 24th Jan. in Yokohama to Mr. W. G. Howell, in acknowledgment of his services, during the past seven years, as editor of the Japan Mail, from which position he retires. Nearly seventy gentlemen participated, representing the most various social elements of that settlement and the capital. The Diplomatic and Consular Boards, the naval service, the bar, mercantile and scientific interests, and journalism were all active in contributing to the success of the entertainment, which was singularly fortunate in its arrangements, and in the ease and harmony with which they were conducted.

Mr. W. G. Howell, in resigning his position and duties as conductor of the Japan Mail, takes leave of the public of Yokohama and its neighbourhood in the following words :—

"This week seven years ago the founder and editor of this journal took up a wholly inexperienced pen to do what in him lay toward the task from which he now retires. If sincerity of purpose may be pleaded as an excuse for the presumption, he offers it in all good conscience, and hopes—he may even venture to say believes—that his plea will be allowed. During this not inconsiderable period — which has witnessed the passing away of one generation and the advent of another, as time is reckoned in an eastern settlement—he has stood face to face with his readers at the close of each week, with no disguise to his mind, expressing opinions upon many various subjects, and holding views which must have often conflicted with the interests, and what is often more sensitive, the amour propre, of some of his readers. The inestimable advantage of impersonality, enjoyed by the conductor of a great journal at home, is denied to a journalist here. He may be the friend of the man on whose public conduct his sense of duty calls on him to reflect adversely. The obligation imposed by private partisanship to support his friend even when in the wrong, so far as comports with obligations more sacred still, has for him no existence. Every opinion he expresses must seem superficial or trivial to some specialist whose province it invades. The conditions under which his labours are prosecuted necessitate the formation and expression of rapid judgments, which the limitation of human vision, the fallibility of human judgment, and the strength of human prejudice, unconsciously to its victim, often combine to render weak or erroneous. Called on to express decisions on all those subjects or occurrences, at least of local import, which affect or interest his readers, some of them perhaps very deeply, what wonder if he falls short in reflecting their varied sentiments, hopes, and objects? And if this is so in journals which trust for their acceptance to the fidelity with which they express the opinions of their readers, how much more difficult is the task of one who has sought rather to be of service by making his journal the organ of his own mind, fortified, instructed, and corrected by the best advice and opinion at his command. Yet society is gracious to what it believes to be sincere endeavour, however poor may be its fruits; and to this fact the retiring editor of this journal attributes such acceptance as it has found among this community and elsewhere. Of the failings, defects, and deficiencies which he has abundantly shown, no one has so keen a sense as himself, as no one can deplore them so heartily. But a man must be taken and judged of in his totality. If he has fought on the side of right and justice and liberty, if he has guarded, so far as his range and power extended, those great principles which constitute the foundations of human society and the guarantees for human advancement, his weaknesses, shortcomings, and errors will be regarded with a kindly forgiveness, and in this faith—in which he has so strong an interest—the editor very gratefully and cordially bids the readers of this journal farewell."

TOKIO.

On the 25th Jan. Mr. Arai, of the Akebono Shinbun, was fined twenty yen at the Tokio Saibansho, for having violated the Press Laws; and the editor of the Yomiuri-Shimbun, whose name is also Arai, was fined an equal sum for a similar offence.

A large school-building for the education of young nobles will shortly be constructed at Nichome, Nishikicho, Tokio. Her Majesty the Empress Dowager has given 30,000 yen towards defraying the expense of its construction.

According to a report published by the Hochi Shimbun, the Press Laws are to be administered with much less "severity than has hitherto characterised them." We have strong reasons for believing that this statement is well founded, and trust that, before many weeks, it may receive the fullest practical confirmation, and also that the means by which the modification will have been brought about may be made public. For the enactment of the Press Laws, at the time they were decreed, there were abundant reasons. For their execution with the persistent harshness that has been disp'ayed there is neither sufficient reason nor necessity. We believe that there is quite as strong a feeling against the method of their enforcement within certain circles of the Government as there has ever been outside.

One Abe Tanihei, of the village of Saijozuka, in Awa, has probably at this moment an unfavourable opinion of the workings of the ballot system. His neighbourhood was recently disturbed by the operations of a midnight robber, whom nobody could detect. The head of the hamlet being appealed to, bethought himself of a scheme which he lost no time in putting into execution. He summoned the entire male population under his control, supplied them with paper, and directed each to write the name of the person he suspected and deposit his ticket in a box. The result was, that fifteen ballots bore the name of Abe Tanihei, the rest being blank. The astounded object of public distrust was so overcome that he instantly made full confession and was arrested for trial. The Nichi Nichi Shimbun says :—"As he is a thief duly and formally elected by public vote, it will not do for him to get off without being suitably dealt with according to law."

CHINA.

PEKING.

The Peking Gazette (says the Daily News) brings to light a feature of Chinese law which will, we think, be novel to most of our readers. We all know that parents are held more or less responsible for the misdeeds of their children, on the theory that if the latter behave badly they must have been badly brought up; but on what ground a son can be held legally responsible for the acts of his father is a puzzle. Li Hung-chang, however, reports such a case. A labourer in Chihli murdered his master and the latter's two sons. For this crime he has been executed; his son has been branded and transported to the farthest frontier, and his wife banished to a less distance.

The Gazette of the 31st December contains a very suggestive decree regarding an unfortunate Colonel who was presented in audience on the occasion of his nomination to the Paoking command in Hunan, but was found a person of such a very ordinary and inefficient stamp that he is ordered "back to the place from whence he came." Did the unlucky man fail to bribe the door-keeper, or were his presents insufficient, or did he kotow ungracefully, or what was his sin? No one will suppose that the keen eye of the Dowager Empress really detected inefficiency at a glance. There must have been some horrible laches in procedure somewhere.

The Celestial Empire's Correspondent writes :—

The tail cutting mania seems at last to have invaded the sacred precincts of the capital. The result at present is only one tailless urchin in a mission school, and as the matter has been put into the hands of the Lord Mayor we shall probably hear of no more losses of this kind. A more serious matter is the recent loss of four copper cannon from the house which surmounts one of the gates. The thieves have been discovered, but the guns are hopelessly lost, having passed through the melting furnace of some foundry. All the authorities connected with the gate, which is the one through which barbarians coming from Tientsin generally enter, have been invited to enter the Hsing-pu or Board of Punishments, and the authorities will probably get far more copper out of the transaction than has been lost in the guns. Possibly some of the more peaceably disposed of the soldiery having heard that Li Hung-chang has purchased $750,000 worth of torpedoes, have determined to beat some of the old spears into pruning-hooks, or rather reduce the copper cannon to pots and pans. The result will probably be most unpleasant to the operators. During this cold spell frozen bodies are frequently found in the streets. There are certain inns in which the beggars herd at night, lying together like herrings in a barrel. I heard lately of a gathering of two hundred native Christians at the Holy Sacrament in the chapel of the Methodist mission. This is a cheering sign of progress to the labourers in this part of the field.

TIENTSIN.

The Daily News correspondent writes:—The cold is bearing heavily on the poorly clad half famished people who have come to Tientsin in search of aid, and doubtless the same is true of other places as well. Scarcely a day passes that we do not hear of deaths by freezing. It is said that in one temple court a few nights since thirty-six persons perished in one night. Were it not for the numbers who come to Tientsin from other places the suffering here would be comparatively little. The greatest distress seems to be in the districts of Wuting-foo and Lao-ling-hsien, in Shantung, in which section of country the English Methodist Mission has a large and flourishing work. Subscriptions have been raised in Tientsin, Taku, and Peking, amounting to about $1,000, the greater part of which will be expended in those districts, where, as yet, we hear of very little being done by the native authorities.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire states, under date of January 9, that a considerable number of native banks have failed within a few weeks, owing to rash speculations, scarcity of copper cash, and consequent "runs" on the banks. A general financial panic was at one time imminent, but the issue of a few proclamations had the effect of calming the excitement.

A sad fate has overtaken a quartermaster of H.M. ship Curlew, named Price. When out skating he endeavoured to rescue a companion, who had fallen into a fishing-hole, but unfortunately fell in himself, and was drowned; his companion was rescued. The funeral took place on the 9th January.

MOUKDEN.

The attempts made by Tso to increase the taxation have raised much discontent. He appears to have been acting in an arbitrary and high-handed manner, and to have missed his mark to a great extent in consequence. The Celestial Empire says the province can bear very much greater taxation than at present exists, and could gradually become reconciled to the main taxes proposed, but the Governor-General's illness of body and weakness of mind must bear the blame of the rash step of making such disproportionate increase at a leap, and of taxing every saleable article, even the most common—if, indeed, he knew anything about it.

A very large proportion, probably about half, the land of this province is owned and cultivated by Manchus, who pay no taxes. Hence, doubtless, the fact, that, notwithstanding the very large population of the province the number of cities is so small compared with the eighteen Provinces, none of which occupies the same extent of territory while few equal or surpass it in population. Hence, too, those cities are most coveted by the philanthropic magistrate interested only in the welfare of the people, where Chinese occupy all the land or the greater proportion thereof. One city in Liao-si is bound to pay Tls. 30,000 per annum to the Imperial Exchequer, but being surrounded by Chinese villages and hamlets, with almost no Manchus, the patriotic magistrate pockets yearly Tls. 20,000, for the city gathers in Tls. 50,000 per annum.

Notwithstanding the energy and activity, the variety and thoroughness of the plans of the late Governor-General for the extirpation of robbery in this province, each and all of those plans have failed, principally because of the enormous tracts of unreclaimed mountain ranges to the N. E., aided by the fact that with his orders he could not put forth the energy requisite to carry them out.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 2nd February; the French mail from London Dec. 15 was received on the 30th Jan.

The most important news is the issue of a curious Chinese document which the Herald, which publishes it, says purports to be the draft of proposed rules for the regulation of lekin under the new provisions, and that the rules appear to have been circulated by the Taoutai among the foreign consuls, and bear very evident impress of their official origin. It adds that instead of simply stating the plain fact that foreign goods are to be exempt from lekin within the foreign settlements, providing for the definition of what are foreign goods, and warning tax collectors to leave these alone—the rules are chiefly intent upon establishing the converse position and elaborating a system of lekin collection on goods that can be possibly excluded from the benefit of exemption. It is hoped the consuls will object that what they have to do is to exempt certain goods, not to pass rules for the taxation of others.

The above-named paper gives the following:—

At a meeting of the French Municipal Council, the following selections were made—Messrs. Louvier, President; Hennequin, Vice-President; Louvier, Forbes, Millot and Rice, Works Committee; Hennequin, Lang, Vinay, and Voisin, Finance Committee.

The man Edwards, who was lately condemned to a year's imprisonment for complicity in an attempt to rob the steamer Hupeh, escaped from gaol, but was recaptured the same evening.

Recently, about four o'clock, a respectably-attired Chinaman accidentally fell into the river from one of the Hongkew wharves, and rapidly floated away with his head under water and his feet in the air. The large quantity of clothing he was wearing prevented his sinking, but although he struggled hard he was unable to right himself. In this way the unfortunate man floated a considerable distance, no effort being made to save him, although there were scores of coolies on the wharves, and sampans near at hand. A foreigner passing down the river in a pair-oared boat, however, noticing some excitement, looked round and saw what he thought was a bundle of clothes in the stream. A slight motion of the apparent bundle undeceived him, and, rowing quickly to the spot, he arrived just in time to prevent the drowning man sinking. With assistance, and at some risk of capsizing, he got him into the boat and took him ashore, and he was then taken in a jinricksha to the Custom-house station, where every necessary attention was given, and he soon recovered sufficiently to be removed by his friends.

As usual at the near approach of the Chinese New Year robberies from houses are becoming frequent, many of them being doubtless facilitated by the carelessness of houseboys in leaving outer doors and windows unfastened after dark, and taking advantage of their master's or mistress's absence to retire to their own quarters, either to smoke or sleep. Early one evening an extensive robbery of this kind was committed at the residence of a foreigner in Shantung-road, the thieves getting clear off with the following valuable articles:—A marble drawing-room clock, a galvanic battery, a lady's gold watch, a pocket case of surgical instruments, two ivory napkin-rings, a cruet-stand, and a silk umbrella. The houseboy admits that the door was left open between six and seven o'clock, that he was tired, and went into the back premises to sleep; while the gateman states that so many persons usually pass in and out that he is not able to say whether any one in particular did so on Saturday evening. Some of the articles above-named possess more than an intrinsic value, and the occurrence should operate as a warning to exercise more than ordinary care with respect to fastenings generally at this season of the year.

The testimonial referred to in the address to the Hon. George F. Seward, in May last, as in the course of preparation for presentation to him, has arrived in Shanghai, and is lying at Messrs. Lane, Crawford, and Co.'s store for public inspection. It consists of a massive silver centre-piece in the shape of a tureen and stand, of chaste design and excellent workmanship in burnished and dead silver, and bearing appropriate ornaments of fruits, flowers, and ears of corn, each handle being supported by what seems to be a typical Indian female head. Both tureen and stand are raised on lions' claws, arranged in pairs, and the general effect is very good. The tureen bears the following inscription:—"Presented by members of the Foreign Community of Shanghai to their fellow resident, the Hon. Geo. F. Seward, on the occasion of his departure for Peking as United States Minister to China, as a token of their regard and esteem.—Shanghai, May 29th, 1876."—Messrs. Tiffany and Co., of New York, were the manufacturers.

Mr. Davenport has left for Foochow on important official business, and, we hear, will be absent about a fortnight.

A temporary reduction in the train service on the Woosung Railway has been necessitated by the illness of two out of the three engine-drivers employed, but it is notified that the regular trains will be resumed.

The Celestial Empire has the following:—

A rather uncomfortable rumour has recently gained ground among sportsmen in Shanghai to the effect that the Chinese authorities are contemplating the advisability of placing obstacles in the way of up-country shooting trips. It is even said, though we do not vouch for the report, that posters have been already sent into the interior, and distributed in all those places where foreigners principally resort, calling upon the villagers to resist the intrusion, and not give any assistance to them in any way whatever. We hope that this is not true; indeed, we are sure that the report must be exaggerated. But we do hear on very fair authority that much opposition is felt in certain quarters to the practice of making trips into the interior, though we are not in a position to say whether any actual steps have been taken towards interfering with it. In Japan regulations have been issued by the Government by which all foreign sportsmen are bound. The first rule is that every foreigner must take out a license, which will cost him ten dollars to begin with. It is forbidden to shoot game between sunset and sunrise, and also to kill any bird which cannot be eaten. Furthermore, a sportsman may not encroach upon any enclosure, even if marked only by a cord or temporary fence, nor may he shoot in any city or town; which last regulation would be a very vexatious one if applied to China, where the interiors of so many towns are as wild and desolate as the outlying country, and form excellent cover for birds. It is said that the regulations are likely to be well received by foreigners, not being in any way too stringent. Indeed, with the exception of the ten dollars' license, and the rule which applies to cities, the regulations go no further than the commonest precautions which would be taken by any sportsman in any part of the world. It might be as well if sport in China were similarly legalised, rather than that it should be the object of covert opposition from the mandarins.

We have received the annual report of the Missionary Physician Protestant Episcopal Church at Wuchang, where a very useful work appears to be progressing under the superintendence of the Rev. A. C. Bunn. The number of patients who have been treated at dispensary, hospital, and their own homes, during the year ending June 30th, 1876, is 4,548. One-sixth of the men were in the habit of using neither wine, tobacco, nor opium, one-sixth wine only, a rather larger proportion having been tobacco-smokers, while four men used opium only. Rather more than a third of the men used wine and tobacco, others being addicted to opium, spirits, &c., in varying proportions. The number of women amounted to nine hundred and seven, who had borne five thousand seven hundred and fourteen children between them, thus giving an average, as Mr. Bunn points out, of six and three-tenths to each woman. Acknowledgment is made to a lady, the wife of a missionary, for most efficient assistance rendered by her in conversing with these women. A short daily service is held in the hospital—a building which has been erected only within the year—and in a chapel, with which the street dispensary is connected, preaching is kept up regularly by the clergy of the mission and the native assistant, for the benefit of the patients-in-waiting, and anybody else who can be attracted thither. The report is confessed by Mr. Bunn to be very unsatisfactory as far as regards the record of several months, a fact which he attributes to his enforced absence from the station with his sick family and his own prolonged illness after their return. He concludes with the following remarks:—"Of the extent to which this branch of our Mission is fulfilling its purpose of aiding the spread of Christianity by exhibiting the Good Samaritan idea I will say no further than that, at the close of a year not without its full measure for me of difficulty and disappointments, I have received from the Chinese, from my brethren in other departments of the work, and from friends in other missions, such assurances that the work is a good one, as they know by its fruits already plucked, that I heartily thank God and take courage."

The Shanghai Courier says:—"It is reported that the China Merchants' Company is about to issue a new stock against the purchase of S.S.N. steamers and real estate, with a capital of Tls. 3,000,000 at Tls. 125 per share. The officials will thus have a good opportunity of investing the savings that they have made during their term office, which is, of course, a very legitimate form of commercial enterprise."

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 8th February; no later mail from London had arrived out.

Another of those unfortunate scandals which are becoming now so common in China has attracted some attention. The Daily Press of the 7th February gives the following suggestive paragraph:—"We are informed that Messrs. R. P. Webster and Rowe have left the public service of Hong Kong without giving the usual notice. We understand that on a survey of the stores which were in charge of these two officers there are no deficiencies. Messrs. Webster and Rowe appear to have left in a hurried manner in order to avoid their creditors,"—and the papers of the following days contain accounts of the proceedings taken by the said unlucky creditors. The present affair is not of the magnitude of some which have occurred, but runs very much in the same direction. A more serious affair has, however, come before the Police Magistrate, one Thomas Coales being charged, on the complaint of Mr. F. Pereira de Silveira, deputy commissary of the Ordnance Department, with absconding from Her Majesty's service, and with embezzling 8,626 Snider cartridges of Her Majesty's stores. The case was part heard and adjourned for further evidence.

A fatal accident has happened to Mr. George Grey, lately second officer on board the British steam-ship Estepona. The deceased, on the night of the 31st January at eleven o'clock, left the Sailors' Home, where he was residing, accompanied by John W. Godley, chief officer of the British barque Presto, and they both went on board of the latter vessel, lying on Mr. McDonald's Patent Slip. In some way or other the deceased fell from the rail of the ship into the bottom of the dock and smashed his head; he was taken up insensible and did not speak again. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

The following items of news are taken from the Hong Kong Daily Press:—

We regret to learn that the agents (Messrs. Gibb, Livingston and Co.) of the Singapore have received a telegram to the effect that that steamer has been totally lost on a sunken reef off an island in the Cumberland Group. The crew and passengers were saved.

We are informed that as a reward for the alacrity with which the crew of Mr. Wohlter's boat picked up the persons thrown into the sea through the capsising of Mr. Lording's boat, that gentleman has sent a sum of money to be distributed amongst them.

It is satisfactory to be able to announce that Sir Brooke Robertson is decidedly better, and is now progressing steadily towards recovery from day to day.

Another gunboat for the Chinese Maritime Customs has been launched. She was built at Capt. Sands's Patent Slip, and is a vessel of seventy tons. Her dimensions are as follow: Length, over all ninety feet; beam, fifteen feet; depth of hold, five feet. She is constructed to run eleven knots an hour, and is fitted with a ram. She was christened the Le-she, by Miss Hopkins, daughter of Captain Hopkins, of the steamship Rajanattianuhar.

CANTON.

The correspondent of the Daily Press, under date of January 5th, writes that the usual distribution of cotton jackets to the beggars and poor people by wealthy merchants in the city had begun. Two merchants had given away each about a thousand articles of apparel, one in Canton, and the other in Honam.

In the Peking Gazette of the 31st December a report appears from the Governor of Kwang-tung, regarding the embezzlement of some Tls. 3,900 by one of the military officers who took charge of the construction of the forts at Bocca-Tigris. The result is that the offender has been degraded, pending an investigation into his conduct.

Daring robberies continued to be as prevalent as ever in the neighbourhood of Canton, and in the villages outlying. The people have appealed to the authorities to put down the robbers, and it is said that the soldiers have been ordered to suppress them. But the measures taken rarely prove effective, and the robbers soon recommmence their operations. Until the province has some police system there is little chance of any permanent improvement in its condition.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

On the 17th Jan. the prizes were distributed at the Municipal Schools of Saigon. The Independant notices that, contrary to custom, the Governor did not honour the ceremony with his presence, but the fete was none the less cordial and charming. The parents of the children and the notabilities of the town formed a large audience, and the prizes were distributed by the Mayor.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Recorder has the following summary of news:—

The King has returned from his trip to Chantaboon. We shall probably have a full account of the visit in the Government Gazette of next week. Many of the prominent officials of Bangkok have been absent recently, but all things have moved on much as usual.

The citizens of Bangkok are to be honoured by a visit from Admiral Reynolds, of the U.S. Navy, and two vessels belonging to the Asiatic Squadron in a few days. Admiral Reynolds will come in the Ashuelot and will remain until the arrival of the flagship, when it is said he will proceed to the Australian Colonies, stopping at Singapore on the way thither.

The following notification has been issued:—

"Whereas information has been laid before me that certain persons now engaged in trade or otherwise employed within the limits of the kingdom of Siam and its dependencies are unlawfully claiming the protection of this Consulate by representing themselves to be the agents of American citizens, I hereby give notice that the name, nationality, and occupation of every agent or servant in the employ of citizens of the United States of America must be registered in this Consulate on or before the 15th day of February, 1877.—DAVID B. SICKELS, U.S. Consul."

The proceedings of Mr. Partridge, late U.S. Consul at Bangkok, are undergoing investigation. The present Consul, D. B. Sickels, on his arrival went to work to thoroughly investigate and bring to light the causes of the scandal and complaints connected with the U.S. Consulate in Siam. He issued an order that all holders of licenses from the U.S. Government should present said license at the U.S. Consulate for registration. Up to this date but comparatively few of the licensees have presented themselves; still full enough to reveal the character of the late

U.S. Consul's dealings. Some of these licenses were drawn in the name of men who left Siam years ago, and long since have been reported dead. Some of these dead men, who though dead still carried on the whisky trade, were Americans, and some Frenchmen. Some licenses were issued in the name of parties without their knowledge or consent. In some instances impressions of the U.S. seal were taken on slips of their paper, and then pasted upon the license. In these cases there was an attempt made to swindle both the United States and the licensee One Chinaman has presented fifty papers, which he purchased of Partridge and Son at about $25 per license; these papers the Chinaman, in his capacity of American citizen, sold, and forged the names of others to the papers, as suited his pleasure.

The Siam Weekly Advertiser of Jan. 18 has the subjoined items of intelligence :—

The U.S. steamers Tennessee and Ashuelot, belonging to the naval force on the Asiatic station, arrived at the mouth of the Menam river on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 11. The following afternoon the Ashuelot, with Rear-Admiral Reynolds and staff on board, steamed up the river, and before she had dropped anchor in front of the Consulate the U.S. Consul was on board to welcome the Admiral and his officers to Bangkok.

On the 27th the Admiral and staff were presented by the Consul to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and received by him in a most cordial manner. The commander of the Ashuelot and several officers of both vessels attended divine service on the Sabbath. The Rev. Mr. McDonald, of the American Presbyterian Mission, conducted the worship. On Monday the officers paid their respects to his Excellency the Minister of War. On Monday afternoon the Admiral and the naval officers attended a garden party at the splendid grounds of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, on which occasion the band of the Tennessee furnished the music. It was a very enjoyable affair, and attended by the largest number of Europeans ever assembled in Bangkok.

On the 30th the Admiral and staff, the officers of the Tennessee and Ashuelot, and the U. S. Consul, had a public audience with his Majesty the King of Siam, and the presentation was pronounced the most brilliant State affair of the kind that has ever occurred in Siam. The admiral and his officers were conveyed to the Royal palace in the King's private carriages, from Falck's Hotel, where the Admiral and his lady are stopping, and when reaching the palace gate a loud-mouthed welcome was thundered from brazen-throated guns on the esplanade. The audience with his Majesty was quite brief, but the Admiral's address and the King's reply were full of the warmest expressions of good-will and friendship.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 15th February; the French mail from London Jan. 12 was received on the 12th February. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times :—

We are informed that H.E. the Governor received a telegram from the Secretary of State, requesting him to proceed to Australia to report upon the defences of the Colonies. The request was conveyed in such terms that his Excellency could not well refuse to accept the mission, honourable and complimentary as it is in itself. Sir William Jervois has therefore resolved to go, and will leave here about the 2nd April, accompanied by his Private Secretary, Lieut. McCallum, R.E. Lady Jervois and the Misses Jervois, with Captain Paton, A.D.C., will proceed to Europe about the same time. His Excellency's stay in Australia will probably not exceed six months, and he will then return here and proceed to Europe. It is, we believe, his Excellency's present intention to return again to the Straits.

In consequence of the resignation of Mr. J. G. Davidson, and his request to be relieved as soon as possible, Mr. W. E. Maxwell left for Perak to act as Resident in his place, as a temporary arrangement, and pending instructions from home. It is reported that there is every probability of Lord Carnarvon conferring the permanent appointment upon Mr. Hugh Low, who has been long in Labuan, and administered Government there for nearly ten years, and who is said to stand high at the Colonial-office. Among other changes rumoured in Perak it is said that Capt. Speedy goes to Durian Sebatang, and that Mr. Paul has been appointed to Laroot.

We understand Major Dunlop's application for twelve months' leave has been granted by the Governor in Council, and he will leave very shortly for Europe. Captain Walshe will, it is stated, in addition to his own duties as Senior Police Magistrate, perform those of Inspector General of Police until the arrival of Mr. Gottlieb, who is expected in about three months hence, and is deputed to take Captain Walshe's place as Senior Police Magistrate. Mr. Skinner will proceed to Province Wellesley to take up Mr. Gottlieb's position there.

Mr. Willans, we are informed, intends to leave for Europe early in March, and Mr. Trotter will for three months perform the duties of Treasurer-General, in addition to those of Postmaster-General, until the arrival of Captain Ord, who will act as Postmaster-General. It seems strange that arrangements could not have been made by which the change of officials should take place without putting upon some the strain of having to carry on the work of two offices at once. It is generally admitted that the police magistrates are overworked, and it is certainly a novel way of improving matters to require the senior police magistrate to do the work of Major Dunlop in addition to his own for the next three months. Might we ask, was the application of Major Dunlop for leave so sudden that the Government was left no other alternative? And even if it were so there seems no reason, so far as we can see, why Mr. Gottlieb's place should not at once be filled by Mr. Skinner. Also, it seems unfair to Mr. Trotter to require of him to fulfil with credit, as he would desire to do, the positions of Treasurer-General and Postmaster-General for three months.

The ceremony of the ordination of a deacon by the Archbishop Gregoris took place in the Armenian Church, Hill-street, in the presence of the Armenian community and a number of other residents. The ordination service began about a quarter-past five o'clock, and after several portions of the Armenian liturgy had been read, the Right Rev. Archbishop entered from a side door dressed in a gorgeous robe, and wearing a brilliant mitre, having in his left hand a cross and in his right the emblematic crook. The warden of the Armenian Church, Mr. P. A. Seth, was then ordained a deacon, the ceremony consisting of kneeling before the archbishop, anointing with oil, consecration, bestowal of the archiepiscopal blessing, and investiture with a deacon's silk band. His Grace the Archbishop then delivered a short address and dismissed his hearers with his benediction.

Private advices report all quiet in Salangore, and everything proceeding satisfactorily. The revenue at Klang for January is said to have reached $21,000.

The United States flagship Tennessee, with Rear Admiral Reynolds on board, left for Manila, after which she goes to China and Japan, the original order to proceed on a cruise to Australian waters having been countermanded.

Captain J. A. Poland, R.N., of H.M.S. Juno, and Senior Naval Officer on this station, left for Hong Kong in H.M.S. Himalaya, on temporary leave, and Commander Anson, of H.M.S. Magpie, will be in charge of the Juno, which will leave on a cruise to Sarawak and Labuan. The command of the Magpie will devolve upon her first lieutenant.

The British steamer Straithairly reports as follows :—Had 801 pilgrims when left Jeddah; 18 died on the passage to Penang, of whom 2 were drowned, 4 died of small-pox, and 12 of old age and exhaustion. Had 2 sick of small-pox on arrival at Penang who were put on shore at the quarantine station on Pulo Jerajah, with the others, 270 in all; have now on board for Singapore 514 pilgrims, all in good health.

The Gazette contains the following returns of the average note circulation of the three banks during the month of February :—

Oriental Bank	$177,860
Chartered Bank	525,410
Mercantile Bank	454,620

The circulation of the two banks in Penang during the same period was a follows :—

Chartered Bank	$160,700
Mercantile Bank	345,730

A private telegram has been received announcing briefly that Mr. Wirth, a planter at Langkai, has been murdered there.

The Straits Times has the following on the Native States :—Now that Mr. Birch's murder has been amply, if slowly, avenged, and that Native States affairs are, or are supposed to be, managed in accordance with the nebulous wishes of the Colonial-office, it is to be sincerely hoped that our own little local affairs will have the exclusive attention during this year of the Government. The year is young yet, and it will be well to take time by the forelock and consider what are the most pressing matters requiring attention, so that a well-devised and practicable programme may be sketched out of what should be undertaken. During the past year many subjects were urged upon the attention of the Government, and they were all promised to be taken into consideration or referred for solution to the Secretary of State. Either answer could not well be taken exception to during the past year, but both were exactly like promissory notes, which fall due and must be taken up during this year, or the credit of the Government will be seriously damaged. The most important subject which should be settled during the year is that the administration of justice should be finally put in proper working order. That is a question which takes precedence of everything else, and it is to be supposed that the Government are now fully alive to its importance and have made such urgent representations to the Secretary of State as will soon put an end to the present most scandalous position of affairs. If Lord Stanley of Alderley or the Aborigines Protection Society and other Home philanthropists really wished to do the Settlements and the Native States a service, they could not do better than interview the Earl of Carnarvon and ask his lordship for an intelligible explanation of his treatment of the Settlements in the matter of judges since the time he sent Sir William Hackett to the Fiji Islands. Lord Stanley could not have had a better occasion for cornering the clever Welsh earl, and so obtaining some amends for his defeat on the Perak "little war" debate in the House of Lords early last year.

PENANG.

The Gazette has the following :—

The Acting Chief Justice, Mr. Ford, will shortly arrive in Penang, and will open the Criminal Sessions. He will not, however, be able to do much on that day, we expect, as the Chinese New Year festival commences on it, and, consequently, neither interpreters nor witnesses are likely to be found when called for. Some fifteen cases have, we learn, been sent up to date for trial at the Sessions, and before it opens there are likely to be four or five more, so we do not expect his Lordship will be able to close them till about the 25th Feb. at the earliest. He has then to hear some criminal appeals, after which, to dispose of several cases in the Ecclesiastical Court, and finally to dispose of innumerable suits on the summary and plea side of the Court.

At a meeting of the Penang Asssociation it was resolved—"That Messrs. C. W. Rodyk, F. J. C. Ross, A. Clarke, E. F. Thomas and Gregory Anthony be appointed a Committee to draw up a memorial to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, praying that the Penang Division of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements shall not be subordinate to the Singapore Division of the said Court, and that two Judges be appointed to Penang, one of whom shall be styled Judge of Penang."

THE ATCHIN WAR.

An engagement has been reported in which the Dutch attacking force was divided into two columns, and the manœuvres were so successfully carried out that a panic arose among the Atchinese. They retreated from the populous district called Lamngah, which was then occupied by the Dutch, who also having taken Krung Rayah are now masters of the greater part of the coast of Atchin Proper. The Dutch then attacked Lambaddah, the principal stronghold of Tunku Payah, meeting with severe resistance, but with a loss of only four killed and ten wounded they captured the place, together with twelve pieces of cannon. Lambaddah and Lamngah are both places of importance, where the Atchinese had made considerable warlike preparations.

THE TWELVE PROPOSED REGULATIONS FOR THE EXEMPTION FROM LEKIN OF REALLY FOREIGN GOODS IN THE SETTLEMENTS.

The North China Daily News gives the following rough translation of the document printed in the Shunpao, which purports to be a draft of proposed rules for the regulation of lekin under the new provisions :—

1. It will be necessary to make a list of what are really foreign goods, and write them one by one on a painted board, and likewise take whatever foreign or native goods there are one by one and write them on a board to be hung up in the Foreign Custom-house. This will be convenient in order that they may be distinguished clearly at the time, and likewise in order that the lekin officers may, in accordance with lists of goods so made, allow them all to pass free of lekin.

2. Although it has already been settled that goods in the Foreign Settlements shall be free of duty, yet opium has not hitherto been treated in the same way as other foreign duties, and is not allowed to pay transit dues, thus distinguishing it from other goods. In the tradal regulations hitherto made there was a special clause to this effect. The regulations made at Chefoo for unifying the duties have not yet been settled, but it is required to be immediately resolved upon, and the amounts decided. In the matter of opinion it is not only clearly decided that it will not be free from duty in the foreign settlements, but in unifying the tariff before referred to it will be necessary to settle the amount leviable upon it, and likewise the date from which the regulation shall take effect.

3. When cargo vessels arrive in port the Custom-house will depute an officer in conjunction with a man likewise deputed by the native collectorate to examine together what are really foreign goods. Custom-house officers will then impress in the seam of the bale a seal certifying that they are truly foreign goods to avoid subsequent confusion.

4. The lekin office will depute an officer in conjunction with the Custom House officer to examine what goods have on them this seal, and then likwise add the characters (Free of duty in the Foreign Settlements). This will avoid disputes when the goods are sent into the interior, and prevent foreign goods from suffering. Another day, when goods are being sent elsewhere, if it is found that they have not on them this stamp, although they are foreign goods, it will be apparent that they have not on that day paid half duty and not been examined, and if they have not paid half duty they will be treated as native goods.

5. It is now settled that foreign merchants' goods within the Settlements, or their goods sold to Chinese, shall all be free of duty ; and this must be respectfully adhered to. But the native goods in the Foreign Settlements are also numerous ; excepting foreign goods that are free of duty—all these goods, viz., from the interior, Canton, Foochow, or such like places—will still be subject to lekin dues, and to be examined in accordancee with the regulations now standing. All the officers for the collection of these dues will have, as before, to examine all goods in order to prevent smuggling.

6. When original goods are re-exported examination will be made whether the seals certifying their foreign origin and their right to be free of lekin have not been in the least torn or removed, and they will then be treated according to the regulations for the re-export of foreign goods. If they do not tally and are different from when they were originally sealed, it is decided to request that they be treated according to the smuggling clause and confiscated.

7. All native goods in the foreign settlements, when exported into the interior, will have, according to previous regulations, to be reported at the lekin office ; when a permit will be issued to facilitate the examination upon their passage, and that merchants may not suffer from delay.

8. Chinese goods carried by foreign vessels and vessels having foreign registers, although having paid duty at the Custom House, have not hitherto been allowed to pay transit duty, and will still be treated accordingly, in order to show the difference between native and foreign goods.

9. When foreign goods have paid the transit dues and a duty certificate has been issued to them, the lekin officer will compare them with the pass, and if no other goods have been packed up with them they will be immediately passed. The wrappers of foreign goods having on them the two seals referred to, examination on their arrival at the barrier will be more quick, and the merchants will not be delayed.

10. All kinds of foreign goods that are sent out of the Settlements with a transit pass will on examination, in accordance with the regulations, be free of lekin. Those that have not a transit pass, on meeting with a Customs barrier will pay duty, and on meeting with a lekin barrier will pay lekin.

11. Foreign goods now in store in godowns, after the Chinese have bought them, will, upon being cleared, be reported to the Custom House, and the Commissioner will send a man in conjunction with a Weiyuen and place a seal on the goods which have been bought for export, to facilitate their exemption from lekin in the Settlements and to put them in accordance with the, new regulations.

12. The examination of native goods belonging to native merchants in the Foreign Settlements is the business of China and China will herself manage it. Native produce is no concern of foreigners. If foreigners come forward as shields, to the slightest detriment of China's sovereignty, it will be asked that they be fined according to law.

IMPORTS.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write as follows :—In our last report we referred to the fact that the local dealers showed some inclination to purchase, anticipating an active demand at advanced rates after the Chinese New Year; the prices they offered, however, were very low, consequently few parcels changed hands. The rates paid also were irregular, and as the business was entirely of a speculative nature quotations would afford no indication of present values. From Shantung we hear that there have been heavy falls of snow, which is probably the cause of the dealers appearing so very sure of a good demand in the spring, as this province usually takes a large supply of cotton goods from here, although last year, owing to drought and locusts the demand was only about half what it is under ordinary circumstances.

SHANGHAI.—The market both for Piece Goods and Woollens was extremely quiet. Auction sales, Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs. 20,450 pieces, at Tls. 1.75½ to 1.75¼ per piece for Red Ram ; Tls. 1.71½ to 1.70 for Red Lion, Tls. 1.67½ for Yellow Lion, Tls. 1.74½ for Yellow Ram, Tls. 1.62¾ for Blue Lion, Tls. 1.61¼ to 1.60½ for Green Lion, and Tls. 1.28¾ for Green Peacock ; 5,000 pieces 7 lb. at Tls. 1.28 for Blue Lion, and Tls. 1.20 for Green Lion ; and 800 pieces 6 lb. Peacock at Tls. 1.05 per piece. T-Cloths, 7 lb. Green Ram, Tls. 1.10 to 1.17½ ; Drills, 8 lb. 10 pieces 14 lbs. Peacock, at Tls. 1.85 to 1.84¾ ; and 350 pieces Jeans, Red Peacock, Tls. 1.51¾ per piece. Metals : A faint inquiry obtained for Quicksilver at previous quotations, but holders were asking higher prices. Tin Plates were slightly dearer, but in very little request. Iron and Lead were quiet, but rates seemed inclined to harden.

MANILA.—After the departure of last mail the Piece Goods market became more active, and a fair amount of business had occurred in the interval. As importers found difficulty in moving their stocks of Plain Staples at the rates demanded last month they had given way a little, and dealers had taken advantage of the reduction to supply their wants. Coloured goods continued in good demand, and remunerative prices were readily obtained for suitable parcels.

BANGKOK.—Grey Yarns were very scarce, and in consequence a slight rise had occurred on their last values ; 18-24s were quoted Tic. 155, 30s Tic. 163, 40s Tic. 175 per bale. In Grey and Fancy Goods and Coloured Yarns a fair business had been done at previous quotations.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Houghton and Co.'s Circular says :—We have no special change to report, business being quiet, in accordance with the season of the year. The continued rise in prices of Cotton Goods in Manchester is, however, having its effect here, and whenever the retail demand improves, which we expect it will do whenever the Chinese New Year festivities next month are over, we look for a material advance taking place in the price of all our staples. Exchange has further gone against buyers, the Banks' drawing rate on London for 6 months' sight Bills being f.11.82½ per £. On Holland the rate is f.101½ per cent. 6 months' date. On Singapore f.2.60½ per dollar. Specie: English and Australian Sovereigns we quote at f.12.10 to f.12.35 each. Mexican dollars nominally at f.2.30 each.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There had again been a fair demand, the settlements comprising:—Oopack, 1,000 chests, at Tls. 13¾ to 15¼; Oanfa, 1,500, at Tls. 11½ to 12; Oonam, 1,500, at Tls. 10½ to 11: Ningchow, 1,000, Tls. 14 to 18½; total, 5,000 chests. The very low rates current had turned buyers' attention to the stock, which was being rapidly absorbed; about one-third of the settlements being for New York. At the current low rates the market was quite firm, the excess in export from this port being equalled by the deficiency in Foochow. Supplies had come to an end, and it would not be long before the present moderate stock is cleared off, and the season closed. Green: There had again been a fair business in these kinds, the total settlements being:—Teenkai, 2,000 half-chests, at Tls.27 to 28; Moyune, 5,000 half-chests, Tls. 28½ to 31¼; Fychow, 2,000 half-chests, Tls. 19¾ to 23½; Shanghai, 1,000 half-chests, Tls. 19; total, 10,000 half-chests, against 3,500 half-chests to corresponding date last season. The arrivals during the week had been very trifling and but little more was expected, but the total to date was already very little less than last year's. The operations for the week had been about half for London and half for New York, and prices were still considerably above those ruling in the latter market. As usual the near approach of the New Year had made teamen anxious to sell, and prices showed a decline from one to two taels, at which they were still ready to dispose of the remainder of what they hold, and get back to the country to commence operations for the coming season.

Total arrivals	427,000 half-chests.		429,000 half-chests.
Settlements & shipments	355,000 „		391,000 „
Stock...	72,000 „		38,000 „

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton, and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—The business of the week has comprised 1,338 chests of Congou, which have been taken at about former values. Owing to the scarcity of tonnage, a large amount of Tea is still awaiting shipment. Congou: The stock is now reduced to 1,300 chests. Souchong, Oolong, Flowery Pekoe, and Scented Teas: No stock on offer. The export to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe is 54,038,160 lbs., against 63,094,100 lbs.; to the colonies, 15,730,202 lbs., against 15,099,603 lbs.; to America, 665,141 lbs., against 974,665 lbs. at the same time last year.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—With the exception of a good business in re-reels, the larger portion of the 600 bales taken being consignment or on joint account with natives, there is but little to report of our market this week. A few bales of Buffalo chop have been purchased at Tls. 512½ per picul for the No. 2, for Blue Elephant Tls. 515 would probably be accepted, and a bid at the commencement of the week of Tls. 565 for Yankee chop No. 3, has, it is said, been refused. Market chop Tsatlees are in the case of some weak holders quite Tls. 30 lower than they were a fortnight since; Taysaams remain in very small demand at Tls. 5 to 10 cheaper than last mail's rates, and re-reels show but little change at Tls. 475 for common to Tls. 570 for fair cargo. As far as can be ascertained the stock of Tsatlees here is limited to within 4,000 bales; arrivals continue insignificant (since Dec. 1 last the total is 1,250 bales), still the home market value for all Silk appears uncertain, and the late improvement in prices is quite lost again with the news to hand by telegram that the chances of war in Europe are very unlikely. Settlements since Jan. 25 1,000, against 300 same period last season; total settlements and reshipments to date 65,000, against 61,000; stock estimated at 17,000, against 4,000.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SHANGHAI.—There have been foreign speculators at work in Cotton who had pretty well cleared the market of such parcels of fair to fair med. staple as were offering for cash. Their operations had strengthened the position already, and better news from Hankow was expected to cause an immediate advance in prices. The receipts were visibly diminishing, and would not probably be larger until after Chinese New Year.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Sugar: A few days after our last Circular was issued purchases of Extra were made at $5.75 per picul, but telegrams quoting a further decline in Europe having been subsequently received; the market is now much weaker, and as dealers have shown more willingness to meet the ideas of purchasers, some contracts for Superior have been booked at $5 per picul for forward delivery. Unclayed Sugar has also declined in value to some extent, but as the receipts are small yet, prices are still comparatively high. We quote:—Taal, £13 5s. 8d.; Cebu, £13 15s. 2d.; Ilo Ilo, £13 15s. 2d.; Cebu Superior, £17 16s. 8d. Hemp continues very dull, and prices have declined considerably. There have been sales during the fortnight at prices ranging from $5.75 to 5.25 per picul (£24 0s. 3d. to £22 3s. 5d.), and the latter may be called to-day's value. A good deal of Hemp, however, is still stored for higher prices. Coffee: Latest telegraphic advices having been unfavourable for the article, the price has declined to $20.50 per picul (£78 9s. 3d.). We estimate that 4/5000 piculs of the new crop have already arrived.

BANGKOK.—The Borneo Company's Circular says:—Paddy of the new Nassuan crop is now arriving daily in large quantities, but though holders are eager sellers on account of the approaching New Year Holidays, prices have declined but slightly, and Mill Cleaned Rice is still selling at $1.55 per picul for ordinary China cargo, in Mats, with a fair demand for immediate delivery. Buyers are in the market at $1.50 for delivery in a fortnight, but as yet we hear of no settlements. There is no Namuan Rice procurable. Native cleaned Cargo Rice is worth Tic. 54-5 per coyan. White Rice for the Straits is in good demand at Tic. 66-7 per coyan ($2.21 per picul in Mats f.o.b.), while for best quality Tic. 73-4 per coyan ($2.44 per picul in Gunnies f.o.b.) would be paid. Black Pepper: The only sale reported is of Piculs 120 at Tic 12¾ per picul, while for piculs 150 in stock not even Tic. 12½ per picul can be elicited ($8.30 f.o.b.). A small lot of White Pepper is offered at Tic. 22 per picul ($14.31 f.o.b.). Sticklac: About piculs 900 have found buyers at Tic. 17 to 19 per picul according to quality, but there is little animation, and piculs 200 Good Medium now in stock are offered at Tic. 19 per picul without success ($13.85 f.o.b.). Tea-seed: Only 150 coyans have arrived during the month, and prices have continued to rise to 87-8 per coyan for Namuan, Tic. 90-91 per coyan or Suphan. ($3.33-6 per picul and $3.43-7 per picul f.o.b.). Supplies are still wanted for China, and next sales will probably be at higher rates. Sapanwood: 7-8 pieces uncleaned are worth Tic. 1½ per picul ($1.81 f.o.b. cleaned). Buffalo Horns are very scarce and have advanced to Tic. 14 per picul for 3 lbs. ($9.23 f.o.b.), Tic. 15 per picul for 4 lbs. Buffalo Hides are in rather better inquiry at Tic. 11¼ per per picul ($8.19 f.o.b.), and Cow Hides are much wanted at Tic. 20½ per picul $14.04 f.o.b.). Gamboge; 13 piculs were sold at Tic. 81 per picul ($56.11 f.o.b.), and there is none now obtainable.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Houghton and Co.'s Circular says:—Arrack, 4 per cent. overproof, we still continue to quote at f.165 per leaguer of 133 imperial gallons. Cloves: In these there is little doing, nominally we value them at f.95 per picul. Coffee, Java, continues in active request at high rates, say at f.65 to f.66 per picul for ordinary preparation; of West India preparation there is none offering. Gum Damar remains at our last quotation of f.37 per picul. Indigo we value at f.3.50 to f.3.80 per Netherlands pound. India-rubber: Sales have been made at f.90 to f.100 per picul. Gutta Percha: In this there is nothing doing. Hides are procurable at f.0.22 to f.0.25 per lb. for Buffalo, while Cow commands f.0.35 to f.0.45 per lb. Mace: A small parcel lately changed hands at f.140 per picul. Nutmegs are a little higher, but only small transactions are taking place at f.100 to f.125 per picul for nuts in the shell. Pepper, Black, we value at f.20 per picul; do. White, is procurable at f.45 per picul. Rattans: Borneo first quality is valued at f.12.50 to f.14, and Padang at f.13 to f.15 per picul. Rice has advanced, first quality Batavia being now worth f.210 to f.220, and second quality f.180 to f.190 per koyang. Sugar still continues in very good demand. For immediate delivery sales have been made at f.19.75 per picul for No. 14, while for delivery from the growing crop contracts have already been closed at f.16 to f.16½ per picul, the latter both for first receipts of selected numbers, and for whole crop delivery being on the coast. Of Chinese manufacture, delivery here, sales have been closed at f.14 per picul for colour No. 9. Generally the position of the article is very strong.

Literature.

The Chronicle and Directory for China and Japan for 1877.—We have received a copy of this useful directory for the current year. It contains the usual information as to the residents in China, Japan, and the Philippines, the treaties with foreign countries, trade regulations, &c. ; and has been carefully revised up to the end of last year. It will be of much value to those at home, who are desirous of obtaining detailed information concerning the countries it applies to. The agent in London is Mr. Algar, 8, Clement's-lane.

tains an article by the Rev. John Ross, of Newchwang, entitled "Obstacles to the Gospel in China." He looks hopefully upon the prospects of Christianity being ultimately accepted, but notices difficulties resultant from the conduct of some foreigners in China, the superstitions of the Chinese, and the peculiarities of their education.

A new edition of Mr. P. L. Simmond's work on Tropical Agriculture is in course of preparation by Messrs. E. and F. Spon, of 48, Charing Cross. It was published nearly a quarter of a century ago, and the great extension of the culture, production, and consumption of the great staples of commerce has led to frequent demands for a new edition. The work has long been looked upon as an authority for reference upon tropical products of all kinds, and will form a practical and reliable treatise and handbook for the colonist, planter, manufacturer, merchant, broker, and consumer, on the cultivation, preparation for shipment, and commercial value, &c., of the principal products obtained from trees and plants entering into the husbandry of tropical and sub-tropical regions.

The Anti-Slavery Reporter contains an interesting article, entitled "Portuguese Indignation," in which the semi-denials of the Portuguese Chambers of the charges as to the Portuguese being concerned in the African Slave Trade are contrasted with the precise information given in other quarters on the subject. It observes that our geographical explorers have all, in fact, brought back the same tale. What Cameron and Young have been lately asserting is just what we have been told some years before by David Livingstone. The presence of the Portuguese on the African coast is, we have been taught by all of them, one of the great obstacles in the way of our efforts to put down the Central African slave trade. The Portuguese are far enough from being the only offenders, but they are quite among the worst, and are, for various reasons, the most difficult for us to restrain.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Astronomical Society on March 9, Prof. Cayley, V.P., in the chair, the Astronomer-Royal stated that he had received a communication from M. Le Verrier, requesting that observations of the Sun might be made on March the 21st, 22nd, and 23rd, for the purpose of detecting the intra-mercurial planet which he is inclined to believe will pass across the Sun's disc about that period. The Astronomer-Royal had sent telegrams to stations in India, Australia, and New Zealand, requesting that observations might be made at intervals of every two hours, or oftener. He trusted also that as many photographs as possible of the Sun would be obtained on those days.

At the Geological Society on March 7, Prof. P. M. Duncan, President, in the chair, the following communications were read:—"On the Vertebral Column and Pelvic Bones of Pliosaurus Evansi (Seeley), from the Oxford Clay of St. Neot's, in the Woodwardian Museum of the University of Cambridge," by Mr. H. G. Seeley; "Supplementary Notes on the Fauna of the Cambridge Greensand," by Mr. A. J. Jukes-Brown; and "On the Beds between the Gault and Upper Chalk, near Folkestone," by Mr. F. G. H. Price.

At the Society of Antiquaries on March 8, Major Cooper in the chair. Mr. E. Freshfield exhibited a photograph of an interesting sun-dial or hemicyclium, found against the wall of a temple of Aphrodite at Aphrodisias, which temple had been afterwards turned into a Christian basilica by extending the columns eastward. The gnomon of the dial was missing.

At the Royal Society on March 8, Dr. Hooker, president, in the chair, the following papers were read:—"On Magneto-Electric Conduction in Liquid and Gaseous Conductors, Part. I., Production of Induced Currents in Electrolytes," by Mr. J. A. Fleming; "On the Structure and Development of Vascular Dentine," by Mr. C. S. Tomes; "Note on the Early Stages of the Development of the Nerves of the Chick," by Mr. A. M. Marshall; "Notes on Physical Geology, No. I. Preliminary Formulæ relating to the internal change of position of the Earth's Axis, arising from Elevations and Depressions caused by Geological Changes; No. II. On the Amount of Shifting of the Earth's Axis, already caused by the elevation of the existing Continent," by the Rev. S. Haughton, M.D.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE SLAVE TRADE IN THE RED SEA.

Mr. BOURKE stated, in answer to a question from Sir H. WOLFF, that a treaty for the suppression of the slave trade on the Egyptian coast of the Red Sea had been sent to the British Consul-General at Cairo, which it was hoped would have the approval of the Khedive.

THE SUEZ CANAL PILOTAGE DUES.

Mr. DAVID JENKINS asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he would call the attention of the directors representing Her Majesty's Government at the Board of the Suez Canal Company to the excessive rate charged for pilotage through the Canal, amounting in many cases to more than one franc per ton on the ship's registered tonnage, less than one-fifth of which is paid to the pilots employed by the company, and if Government will use their influence to relieve British shipping from this charge.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he had made inquiries in regard to this subject, and he found that the pilotage charge was not made according to the tonnage, but according to the draft of water; consequently, if a vessel was of small tonnage and deep draft, she had to pay comparatively a heavier sum than a larger vessel of smaller draft of water. The amount was not one franc per ton, as stated by the hon. member, but about 70 centimes. With regard to the application of the money, it included payments for the maintenance of sidings, telegraphing, watchmen's signals, and other means established by the Company to ensure the good navigation of ships. Under these circumstances he thought there was hardly a case for the interference of Government.

THE ROUTE FROM RANGOON TO WESTERN CHINA.

Mr. SAMPSON LLOYD asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, considering the great importance to the commercial and industrial interests of this country of establishing commercial intercourse with the populous south-western provinces of China Her Majesty's Government intend to take steps to complete the survey of the land route from Rangoon to Kiang Hung, which in 1867 was ordered to be made by the noble lord the present Chief Secretary of State for India, and of which the first half was actually completed in that year, as appears by a report laid before this House.—Lord G. HAMILTON said the completion of this survey would be attended with a certain amount of risk and expenditure. Pending the consideration of the information obtained by the recent missions of Colonel Browne and Mr. Grosvenor, the Indian Government do not think it expedient, in the present state of feeling upon the frontier, to take steps for the completion of the survey.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF HONG KONG.

Mr. GREENE asked the Under-Secretary for the Colonies whether his attention had been called to the following remarks made by Mr. Pope Hennessy, the Governor of Hong Kong, when he was presented with the freedom of the City of Cork. He is alleged to have said, "I am enabled now, for the first time since I have returned to this country, to refer to what has passed in Barbadoes, and to declare that, in all my experience, I was never in a community where there was such deliberate oppression of the masses as in the community at Barbadoes;" and whether, from the information received by the Government, such a charge was borne out by the facts of the case.—Mr. J. LOWTHER said a communication has been addressed to Mr. Hennessy, inviting him to state whether it is correct, and, if so, to offer explanations. With respect to the latter part of the question Government are not possessed of any information which would warrant a statement that there had been deliberate oppression of the masses in Barbadoes.

THE KHAN OF KHELAT.

Replying to a question from Mr. ROBERTSON as to the truth of the statement that a treaty had been concluded with the Khan of Khelat for the occupation of a portion of his territory by British troops, in return for an annual subsidy and an undertaking to support him against internal and foreign foes, Mr. BOURKE explained the facts of the case to be that an old treaty, negotiated in 1854 between the Khan of Khelat and the British Government, had been recently revised, and that under this agreement the Khan became entitled to an annual sum in return for the performance of certain duties—such as maintaining peace on the frontiers, keeping open the Boolan Pass, and permitting British troops to be stationed at Quetta. In 1873 the subsidy was withheld, as the Khan had failed to perform his part of the contract. Negotiations were subsequently revived, and the present treaty was the result. There was not, however, any intention on the part of the British Government to pursue any aggressive policy on the frontier States.

Naval and Military.

Captain A. Glen, 10th Regiment, has been appointed Brigade-Major on the Staff of the Straits Settlements, vice Brevet Major C. W. Lloyd, 16th Regiment, whose term of service expires on the 22nd proximo. Captain Glen entered the army February 4, 1872; passed from the Staff College in December, 1875; and became Captain, March 22, 1876.

The project which was some time since entertained of separating the military command of the Straits Settlements from that of China has been abandoned.

Fleet Surgeon G. F. A. Drew has been appointed to the Audacious, flag-ship of the China Squadron.

An experiment of a very interesting character has been made at Cherbourg to test the merits of a small torpedo boat, built in England, and known as the Thorneycroft. Admiral Jaurez ordered a disabled ship, the Bayonnaise, during a rather rough sea, to be towed out by a steamer. A second lieutenant, M. Lemoinne, was selected to make the experiment of launching the Thorneycroft. He accepted the mission without hesitation, picked out two enginemen and a pilot, and went down with them into the interior of the Thorneycroft, of which only a small part appears above water. Both ship and torpedo-boat were then put in motion, and, after an hour's chase, the boat, which travelled at the rate of nineteen knots an hour against the fourteen knots of the tug towing the vessel, came within striking distance. The whole squadron watched this last phase of the struggle with breathless interest, and people asked themselves whether the shock of the torpedo would not infallibly destroy the little vessel which bore it. It was feared that the lives of Lieutenant Lemoinne and his companions were absolutely sacrificed. However, the two vessels got visibly nearer. All at once the Thorneycroft put on a last spurt, and struck the Bayonnaise with its whole force on the starboard bow. The sea was terribly agitated, a deafening report was heard, and the Bayonnaise with a rent as big as a house, sank with wonderful rapidity. As for the Thorneycroft, rebounding by the shock about fifteen metres off, even before the explosion occurred, it went round and round for a few moments, and then quietly resumed the direction of the squadron. No trace remained of the Bayonnaise; it was literally swallowed up by the sea.

Mr. William Coppin, with whom the Admiralty have opened negotiations for the raising of the Vanguard, has communicated to the newspapers some details of the means to be used for carrying out his project. The weight of the Vanguard under water is about 5,000 tons; the dimensions of the four pontoons to be employed are 175ft. by 50ft. by 18ft. depth each, capable of raising upwards of 12,000 tons with a freeboard of over 3ft. The raising will be accomplished by passing steel wire ropes under her bottom at distances apart of about 5ft. for the entire length of the ship. After passing the ropes under the ship they will be fastened to a line of buoys on each side of the ship ready for being passed up through the tubes from the bottom to the deck of the pontoons, and the slack taken in by steam winches The pontoons will be fitted with appliances for quickly lowering and raising them. Each foot of depth in the four pontoons, after their own displacement, is capable of raising 1,000 tons; therefore, 5ft. will lift the Vanguard off the bottom, leaving a further lift of 8ft. every two hours for each operation, irrespective of tides. Mr. Coppin calculates upon taking the Vanguard up the incline of the Kish Bank so that her decks will be above water within twenty-four hours after securing her to the pontoons. Messrs. Siebe and Gorman, the well-known inventors of diving apparatus, point out that there will be no difficulty in the way of divers descending to the Vanguard, as they have perfected a dress in which men are able to work at even a greater depth of water than that in which the ironclad lies.

Vice-Admiral Lord William Compton, who has succeeded to the Marquisate of Northampton by the death of his brother, saw considerable service in the Wellesley, 72, Commodore Sir James Bremer, in which ship he took part in the Chinese war. When in command jointly with Acting Lieutenants G. Campbell Fowler and John Astle of the barge and two cutters belonging to the Wellesley, he had the good fortune of preserving the ship, then in the Boca Tigris, from a formidable and well-planned attempt made on the part of the Chinese to destroy her by means of a flotilla of nearly twenty-five vessels, the whole of which, though in many instances chained in couples, and some even three together, were towed clear, without doing the slightest injury. He afterwards, in October of the same year, commanded the Wellesley's boats at the capture of the Chinghae. These gallant services were mentioned in the Gazette, and he was rewarded by being promoted to the rank of commander.

A Royal warrant has been issued fixing the rates of pay of officers of the head-quarter staff and general staff of the Army as follows:—Head-quarter staff: deputy quartermaster-general, £1,200 per annum; deputy adjutant-general of Royal Artillery or Royal Engineers, £1,000; assistant adjutant-general, £600; assistant quartermaster-general, £600; deputy assistant adjutant-general, £450; deputy assistant quartermaster-general, £450. General Staff: Daily pay at home and abroad—Deputy adjutant and quartermaster-general, 19s.; assistant adjutant and quartermaster-general, 14s. 3d.; deputy assistant adjutant and quartermaster-general, 9s. 6d.

The Channel Squadron, under the command of Vice-Admiral Beauchamp Seymour, C.B., comprising the Minotaur (flag), Black Prince, Resistance, and Defence, has left Gibraltar for Cadiz, where the Squadron will receive orders to return to England, the Minotaur proceeding to Portsmouth, and the Black Prince, Resistance, and Defence to Plymouth. The Devastation will probably be paid off at Malta, instead of returning to England, and will be recommissioned by Captain W. J. Hunt Grubbe, C.B., now in command of H.M.S. Rupert. Both ships are now at Malta.

A telegram from Malta announces that H.M. steam corvette Thetis from India viâ the Suez Canal, has been reported passing 200 miles south-east of Malta with her machinery disabled and short of provisions. The ironclad Sultan, accompanied by a steam-tug, have left in search of her. The Thetis (Captain Thomas Le H. Ward) is a screw corvette of 1,870 tons burden and 2,275 (350 nominal) horse-power, and carrying 14 guns. She was commissioned at Devonport in 1873, and has been since employed on the East India and China stations.

The Gazette notifies the filling of two regimental commands by selection (Major James Gunter, 1st Dragoon Guards, to be lieutenant-colonel, 4th Dragoon Guards; and Lieutenant-colonel R. C. Watson, half-pay, late Ceylon Rifles, to be lieutenant-colonel, 37th Foot), and one by promotion in the regiment (Major and Brevet Lieutenant-colonel W. B. Fielden, 6th Foot, to be lieutenant-colonel).

The committee which has been appointed to inquire into the reorganisation of the Admiralty departments, with a view to the introduction as far as possible of the system recommended by the Playfair Committee, is to consist of Mr. Mills of the Treasury, Mr. Hamilton of the Board of Trade, and Mr. Vernon Lushington of the Admiralty, with Mr. E. Swainson as secretary.

Gradual reductions are being made at the Royal Gun Factories, at the rate of about thirty men per week, in order to bring down the establishment to the lower standard authorised by the Army Estimates for the current year. The order for new guns this year is very small in comparison with that of last year.

Further reductions in the Royal Arsenal are imminent. It is expected that 400 men will be discharged from the Gun Factories within a month hence; and the completion of a large order for iron gun-carriages for the Indian Government has sensibly diminished employment in the Carriage Department.

The Boxer, gun-vessel, which was commissioned at Chatham three months since, and afterwards detained in consequence of the serious defects in her crank-shafts, has now left for the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa station, new crank-shafts having been fitted to her at Keyham.

A committee, having at its head the Mayor of Portsmouth, has been formed for the purpose of raising funds to make a farewell presentation to the Ven. Archdeacon Wright, late Chaplain of the Forces, prior to his leaving England for his new sphere of labour in British Columbia.

Deputy Surgeon-General J. N. Tressidder and Surgeon-Major E. McKellar, M.D., have been permitted to retire from the Indian Medical Service from the 31st inst., the former on a pension of £550 per annum, with £250 per annum added, the latter on £365 per annum.

Quartermaster John Woon, Royal Marines, died at Walmer on the 8th inst. The deceased greatly distinguished himself in the Arctic Expedition of 1849-54, and in the attack on the Peiho forts in 1859, and his death is deeply regretted by all who knew him.

The War-office has consented to a strengthening of the garrison of the Cape of Good Hope by one battalion from England. The lieutenant general commanding the troops at the Cape is in future to hold the additional appointment of lieutenant governor.

Indian Good Service Pensions of £100 per annum have been awarded to the following officers of the Royal (late Indian) Artillery, viz.:—Colonels H. E. L. Thuillier, C.S.I., H. Le G. Bruce (late Bengal), and G. Petrie, C.B. (late Bombay).

Major-General J. Abbott, C.B., succeeds to the vacancy among the colonels-commandant on the Bengal list of the Royal Artillery, consequent upon the death of Lieutenant-General Sir J. D. Fordyce, K.C.B.

Three new torpedo-mooring steamers are now ready to be handed over to the Admiralty. They are twin-screw vessels of seventy-two tons, and have been built and engined by Palmer's Company at Hull.

Deputy Commissary-General E. Strickland, C.B., has left England for the Cape of Good Hope, to assume Commissariat charge, vice Deputy Commissary-General H. Moore, who returns to England.

Lord Eustace Cecil, M.P. for West Essex, Surveyor-General of Ordnance, has quite recovered from a recent attack of typhoid fever, and is on the point of resuming his official duties.

The 88th Connaught Rangers have been placed under orders to proceed to the Cape of Good Hope, where they will probably embark early in May next.

The expense of Admiralty Committees is estimated at £4,000 for the financial year ending March 31, 1878. For the current year it was £2,500 only.

THE SOOLOO QUESTION.

Mr. J. C. Myers, the U.S. Consul-General at Shanghai, has issued the following circular:—"The Minister of Spain has informed the United States Legation at Peking that the port of Jolo (Sooloo), in the Archipelago of that name, has been opened to commerce under the following conditions:—I have been instructed to convey this information to American merchants at this port. 1st. Trade may be carried on in all articles saving arms and war munitions, and those which are forbidden as contrary to morals or the public health. 2nd. Manifests of the whole lading of vessels arriving and departing will be required for statistical purposes. 3rd. Vessels may go from Jolo to other ports of the archipelago, after having obtained permission of the authorities. 4th. Vessels arriving from Jolo, at the ports of the Philippines, will be dealt with as coming from abroad, but native products, arriving under the Spanish flags, will be taxed at coasting rates. 5th. Goods exported from the Philippines to Jolo, under the Spanish flag, will be taxed at coasting rates. They may also be exported under foreign flags, in conformity with existing laws, and after the payment of duties."

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—The subjoined appointments are gazetted:—Mr. Alexander Condie Stephen as attaché to H.M. Embassy at St. Petersburg; Messrs. Neale Porter and Richard Mahoney Hickson to be Members of the Executive Council of the Leeward Islands; Mr. Roger Tuckfield Goldsworthy, C.M.G., to be Colonial Secretary for the Colony of Western Australia; Captain Arthur Elebank Havelock to be President of the Island of Nevis; Lieutenant Herbert Belasyse Moffat to be Vice-Consul at Sebastopol; Mr. Thomas Fellowes Reade, now Consul at Cadiz, to be Consul at Smyrna; Mr. Chas. SUPPLEMENTARY NAVAL ESTIMATES.—A Supplementary Navy Estimate for 1875-6 states that a sum of £75,511 2s. 3d. is required to be voted in order to defray the excess of expenditure beyond the ordinary and supplementary navy grants, as shown in the appropriation account for the navy, for the year ended March 31, 1876. Another paper gives the particulars of a vote of £42,373 19s. 6d., which is required to make good excesses on certain grants for Civil Service and Revenue Departments for the year ended March 31, 1876. A third paper contains a statement of a sum of £2,017 5s., required to be voted in order to make good the excess on the vote of credit for the Ashantee expedition for the year ended March 31, 1876. This excess, it is explained, arose from the repayment to the Admiralty of a claim which was not anticipated when the estimate was framed. These three sums make up a total of £119,901 16. 9d.

PRESS STATISTICS.—The following particulars, convey an interesting idea of the present position of the newspaper and periodical press of the United Kingdom. There are now issued 1,783 newspapers, thus distributed:—Metropolis, 460; England, 946; Wales, 50; Scotland, 164; Ireland, 142; British Isles, 21. Among these are 87 morning, and 42 evening journals, but the majority are published weekly, Friday claiming 353, and Saturday 675 examples. Only one newspaper, the Observer, appears on Sunday alone, the remaining journals recognised as Sunday papers (all published in the metropolis) issuing editions on preceding days also. The publishing prices range from one halfpenny to two shillings per copy.

A YACHTING VOYAGE ROUND THE WORLD.—A prospectus has been issued of a proposed yachting voyage round the world in August next, in the screw steamer Sumatra, 2,400 tons, which is to be fitted with every comfort. The journey will be to the ports of Spain and of the Mediterranean, and through the Suez Canal to China and Japan, and thence to San Francisco, round to New York, and home. Those passengers who prefer visiting the American Continent will be provided with free railway passes to enable them to do so. The passage-money is to be £500, which will include everything but wines. The Sumatra was formerly one of the P. and O. steamers, and is fitted up with every possible convenience, and no better opportunity than the present could be found for making a visit to the Far East. Particulars can be obtained of Messrs. Hide and Thompson, hon. secs., 4, Cullum-street; and of Messrs. Grindlay and Co., 55, Parliament-street.

THE MESSAGERIES OFFICERS AT COLOMBO.—A correspondent writes:—"After spending a small fortune in telegrams the Committee of the mercantile community have not succeeded in persuading the Captain of the Meikong to accept their invitation [to a public lunch]. His telegram is as follows:—'A thousand thanks for your kind invitation, but sorry that my health does not permit accepting of it.' His indisposition is unfortunate, and as it would be 'Hamlet with the principal character left out,' if they were to have the entertainment without the captain and officers when the ship was in the roads, it has been wisely resolved that it will not take place. The mercantile community have done their best to be civil, and the French must take the will for the deed if they like it best.'"

THE TELEGRAPH SERVICE.—From an official return it appears that the gross amount received by the Post-office, in respect of telegrams, private wires, rentals, &c., from 1870 to 1876 inclusive, was £6,037,433 12s. 2d. The amount received for last year—up to 31st March—was £1,276,662 8s. 8d.; and the amount expended during the same period was £1,051,525 10s. 2½d. The cost of telegraph service for public departments, without remuneration, last year was £9,694 1s. 7d.

BUTTONS.—The following letter, in which the writer is evidently thinking of buttons not feathers, appears in the Globe:—"I noticed at the levée that the two Celestials who stood on the footboard behind the Chinese Ministers' carriage wore feathers in their caps—as far as I could see very much the same sort of feathers the Ministers themselves wore. I have always thought that no Chinese under the rank of mandarin was entitled to wear a feather in the cap. Can you enlighten me on this point."

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.—The receipts on account of revenue from the 1st April, 1876, when there was a balance of £5,119,587, to March 10 were £73,950,644, against £73,025,724 in the corresponding period of the preceding financial year, which began with a balance of £6,265,322. The net expenditure was £71,145,763, against £72,180,385 to the same date in the previous year. The Treasury balances on March 10 amounted to £6,944,917, and at the same date in 1375 to £5,778,431.

ON the 9th inst. a meeting of the working classes was held, under the presidency of Alderman Sir John Lawrence, M.P., with reference to the proposed India and Colonial Museum. Messrs. H. Broadhurst, Chessen, Campin, Paterson, and others took part in the proceedings. A resolution was passed approving the scheme, but suggesting that the Museum should be on the Victoria Embankment, so as to be accessible to the working classes; and not, as proposed, at South Kensington.

ACCORDING to the Turkestan Gazette, the official journal of Tashkend a serious encounter between the Chinese and Kashgar troops is drawing near, the hostile parties being only separated by the Tian Shan Hills. To prepare for the conflict the Chinese have established a large arsenal at Lanchefu, whence 10,000 breech-loading rifles of the Berdan type the other day were sent to Gutchen, the head-quarters of the expeditionary force. Yakob Beg, on his part, is likewise arming.

MR. PIPER, of the Joint Select Committee on Chinese Immigration to America, presented in the House the same report previously offered by Senator Sargent in the Senate. Mr. Meade, the other member of the committee, on the part of the House, did not join in the report, although agreeing with its conclusions in some respects. His views were ordered by the House to be incorporated in the record, and will be printed.

AT a sitting of the Italian Geographical Society, Signor Gessi gave an account of his exploration of Lake Nyanza in company of Colonel Gordon. He spoke in praise of the efforts made by the Egyptian Government for the suppression of the slave trade, and said he could promise that the Italian expedition to Africa would have Colonel Gordon's support.

THE Queen has held a Drawing-room, at which the following presentations were made in the diplomatic circle:—By the wife of the Japanese Minister, the Princess Nabeshima (wife of the ex-Daimio of Hizen), and by the Japanese Minister, the Prince Hachisuka (ex-Daimio of Awa), and the Prince Nabeshima (ex-Daimio of Hizen).

THE Morning Post states that the estate of Woburn Park, near Weybridge, which has been lately occupied by Mr. W. J. Alt, formerly of Nagasaki, and before him by the Earl of Kilmorey, has just been sold to one of the most influential sections of the Roman Catholic party for monastic or scholastic purposes.

WITH reference to the Rangoon-Penang Cable Expedition, the following telegram has been received by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company:—"Steamship Kangaroo, March 14, 1877. Rangoon, noon. Cable landed at Elephant Point, and paying out towards Krishna."

HAMBURG, MARCH 13.

The newly-elected Imperial Parliament at Berlin is already in full action, showing again that the fractions which are principally opposed to the Imperial Government and Prince Bismark have lost very little of their talent of finding fault with everything Prince Bismark orders and undertakes. Last Saturday especially, when a debate about the Imperial Budget was going on, this was the case, and our great diplomate took occasion, in an excellent speech, to express his indignation about the many totally unfounded attacks and accusations made upon him, at the same time mentioning that he very little deserved such hateful grievances after having spent all his life and his health in the service of his country. Reading between the lines, the speech made the impression as if the "Reichskanzler," in view of all the constant vexations, gets tired of his many employments, and the sooner the better would like to retire from business altogether. Taken on the whole, a great portion of the enthusiasm of 1870-71 is fading away, as the immense sums paid by France fade away; in many directions a reaction is plainly perceptible, and God knows how long the present peaceful state of things will last within the boundaries of Germany.

The inquiry against Captain Keyn, formerly in command of the Hamburg Steamship Franconia, according to all appearance, will be a very long-lasting one. The investigation in the case, which was carried on here, having given no sufficient material for an accusation, the indictments made at the inquiry in London have been demanded by our police, and a copy of them will be sent here for the further prosecution of the case. If things go on still as they have gone on hitherto, the poor captain may still hang a couple of years between life and death, and perhaps at last to get clear with six months' imprisonment, or no punishment at all, but still being forced to idleness for all this time.

The International Bank of Hamburg, and London (Limited), declares, according to the report and balance-sheet now in hand, a dividend for the past year at the rate of 6 per cent., and directly after transpiring of this rate the International Bank in Hamburg, the mother-establishment, advertised their shareholders of the distribution of a dividend of m.15 per share, equal to 3 per cent. upon the reduced capital in 30,000 shares of m.500 each. The shareholders of the Hamburg establishment do not seem to be very much satisfied by this rate, as the net profits of the London branch are decreasing by a distribution, effected by the mother-institute, and they think it to be of more use for them if the shares of the Hamburg establishment are changed for shares of the London branch, this latter being nearly the sole profit-maker.

The Deutsche Bank, well-known to the East, distributes for the past year a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent., and it is very interesting to hear of the healthy state of this establishment; the report and balance-sheet may be expected shortly, as the report of the German Bank of London, and the New York branch of this firm, are now in the hands of the directors of the Berlin mother-establishment.

The Deutsche Dampfschiffs Rhederei zu Hamburg calls her shareholders for the 27th of March, the Hamburg American Packet Company for the 28th of this month. The Hamburg South American Steamship Company has fixed her annual meeting for the 14th of this month, and distributes a dividend at the rate of 5½ per cent. This result is the more remarkable as the company had from the beginning of the past year to fight with a concurrent—the Norddeutsche Lloyd at Bremen. This latter company endeavoured to get a part in the Brazilian freight business, but in vain, as our Hamburg company has not been bereft of any noticable amount.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MARCH 14.

The members of the Second Chamber are still busy discussing the Judicial Bills. Up to this moment they are very unlucky with pleading on behalf of their respective districts as they do not succeed in maintaining the Courts, which the Minister thinks fit to abolish. In the meanwhile they have done what they could do and saved their membership à l' impossible nul n'est teme. It is now positively asserted that the report of the Committee on the Lower Class Instruction Bill is quite ready, so that it will be published after a short delay. Rumours are in circulation that the tenor is by no means in favour of the Bill, but, of course nothing can be said thereabout positively. It creates great surprise that Dr. Kuyper, the leader of the anti-revolutionary party—though he declines to accept this honour—advises his partisans not to participate in the Parliamentary struggle. For several years the revisal of this Bill was their hobby-horse, and, indeed, they rode it with a prodigious noise, whilst now on the very moment they could work with some chance of success, they will withhold themselves of the debate. I need not add that a good part of the public is quite convinced that this is only a manœuvre un reculer pour mieux sauter. It is indeed another proof of the rottenness of our present Parliamentary institutions. Party speculations and not the general welfare rules all. It was so in the yesterday sitting. The Chamber had to decide about the question how to deal with the Reform Bill, but instead of that the members did their utmost to bring this item to a conclusion. They sought for stumbling blocks, in order to prevent what was most urgent. The Opposition bears in the latter days a sharper character, and there are some who foretell that the dismissal of the Cabinet is near on hand, because the appointments prove that friends must be saved. It is, I think, possible, but not probable.

LONDON: MONDAY, MARCH 19, 1877.

AS will be seen by the report elsewhere, a paper on Formosa has been read by Mr. ALLEN, of HER MAJESTY'S Consular Service, before the Geographical Society. Although it did not give anything that was new to readers acquainted with China, it was, especially when taken in conjunction with the remarks which Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK made upon it, of interest, as showing the small degree to which the island has become developed, and the extent to which its commercial importance would be increased were it to fall under any sound and civilised Government. This fact was pointed out very clearly by Sir RUTHERFORD; and some considerations, which are perhaps too purely of a political character to have been alluded to at a learned Society, are worthy of being noticed in regard to it. The Chinese claim the island of Formosa as being under their jurisdiction; but their power over it is so small that they are unable to do more than merely hold their own on the coast against the natives; and thus the island remains in a very low state of civilisation, and the development of its resources is indefinitely retarded. It becomes a question how far a nation so little fulfilling the duties of a governing Power can justly claim jurisdiction over a large territory; and this question, it is more than likely, will be some day raised by some European Power, with regard to this island, which, in proper hands, would probably become a very valuable possession.

A PROPOSAL has been set on foot for the establishment of a Church of Scotland Mission to China. A member has offered to guarantee £1,000 if the Church will institute a Mission to that country; a young medical man has volunteered for service as a medical missionary; and it is under consideration whether these offers of money and service shall be accepted. This will depend upon the amount of aid which is forthcoming, and we trust that the large number of influential Scotchmen connected with China, both at home and in the East, will support the movement, as there is undoubtedly no field in which Mission work is likely to be of more value than in China. It is proposed to begin in one of the new Treaty ports where there has not yet been any Mission. It is to be hoped that the matter will be taken up and discussed in earnest at the Shanghai Missionary Conference, in May this year. The subject of the proposed union of Presbyterians of the different Churches established in Japan will also form a suitable matter for consideration on that occasion. The Presbyterian Missionary Record of this month gives the details of the proposed union, and, whether the scheme be carried out or not, we trust that in the future we may find more union among the missionaries in China, who, if of different denominations, are all engaged in the common work of propagating Christianity.

MR. W. H. MEDHURST, one of the oldest of the public servants connected with China, returned to London last week. He entered the office of the British Superintendency of Trade in China in 1840, and has since been in the Consular Service, retiring at present from the post of Consul at Shanghai. He has long been recognised as a most valuable public man, and has always performed his duties efficiently, and well maintained the dignity of the Service. In the negotiations connected with the Yangchow outrage he conducted one of the most difficult cases ever placed in the hands of a diplomatic agent with the greatest tact and skill, and obtained results of a most satisfactory character. But for the extraordinary views of the Government then in power there can be no doubt that the services he rendered would have been rewarded by his being made a "C.B.," or having some other similar dignity conferred upon him. Under the new regulations Mr. MEDHURST retires with the substantial pension of £1,200; and deservedly carries with him the good wishes and high opinion of all connected with China.

IT is to be regretted that there seems a prospect of the exploration of the route between Burmah and China being indefinitely postponed. According to the statement made by Lord GEORGE HAMILTON in the House of Commons, the Indian Government, upon being put in possession of the information obtained by Colonel BROWN and Mr. GROSVENOR'S Mission, are of opinion that, in view of the state of feeling on the border, it is not expedient at the present time to take steps to complete the survey. We presume that the reason for this will become apparent on the issue of the Blue-book on Yunnan, which has so long been expected. The memorandum prepared by Sir THOMAS WADE is probably under consideration at the Foreign-office, and will be issued at the same time.

A MOVEMENT has been set on foot in London with a view to working business in such a manner in China that the market for Teas shall be at Shanghai, and not at the River ports. The measures which have been taken with this object have not been sufficiently matured to produce any results for the coming Season; but it is, we are informed, hoped that this may be accomplished next year.

PROFESSOR CHENERY and Sir HENRY RAWLINSON are appointed delegates for London at the sitting of the Congress of Orientalists at Florence, to be held in September, 1878; Professor LEGGE, for Oxford; Professor WRIGHT, for Cambridge; and Dr. MUIR for Edinburgh.

WE understand that Colonel ANSON, the Lieutenant-Governor of Penang, will act as Governor of Singapore during the absence of Sir WM. JERVOIS in Australia, which it is expected will not exceed six months.

THE COMING TEA SEASON.

LOOKING at the general prospects of trade, the unsettled aspect of political matters, and the dulness and want of confidence in most branches of commerce, there is nothing to lead to the anticipation of any very brilliant business in Tea during the coming season; nor do the special features of the trade itself warrant very sanguine views as to the future. During the past season, business in the commoner sorts of Teas has undoubtedly been overdone, both as to quantity and price. The Teas have, as is usual, been hurried forward, regardless of the state of the market or the requirements of the trade, and they have in consequence at last had to be pushed off at public sale at whatever they would fetch. The history of the Season has, in fact, been the old, old story, which seems destined ever to be re-enacted. Teas hurried forward, as though the country with over a hundred million of pounds in stock were actually undergoing a species of tea drought, and then as much hastiness in forcing them off upon the home market as there was in buying them in China. A few lucky well made purchases are taken as indicating the general tone of the market for higher class Teas, and it is overlooked how limited the demand must necessarily be for Teas at anything like extreme figures. An unfortunate error was also fallen into in China in September last, which has brought about the most unsatisfactory results on this market. The buyers in Shanghai imagined that the increase in shipments to the extent of about eight million pounds from that port would be counterbalanced by a corsponding decrease from Foochow; but this did not prove to be the case, and in consequence the market became weakened until all chance of profit has gone. The only hope that there is for a satisfactory business during the coming Season is, that the lesson learnt by the sacrifices which have had to be made at the public sales just concluded will be beneficial, and that there will be sufficient caution at the opening of the Season to bring prices to a more moderate limit, and restrain shipments within something more like a reasonable quantity. Reduction in price at the opening and early part of the Season alone will not be enough to secure a sound business. However low the price may be in China, it can be of comparatively little benefit so long as we have such excessive quantities arriving simultaneously, as it is impossible to adapt the trade here to such pressure upon the market. The only remedy, therefore, appears to be to induce the Chinese to be less free in their production in the Tea districts, and thus to bring about more careful picking and a consequent improvement in the quality; and to make the middlemen less inclined to send orders into the interior, thus inducing the firing of the Teas to the last leaf of the crop, and at the same time make them inclined to bring their supplies to the shipping ports more gradually, and more in accordance with the requirements of buyers. A very important feature in estimating the probable drift and tone of the Tea Market here is the increasing popularity of Indian Teas. As noticed recently in these columns, in a summary of a paper on these Teas, the cultivation is steadily increasing, and they are becoming more and more popular with consumers. This element in the markets must necessarily tend to keep China Teas at a lower range, and is at least sufficient to prevent the possibility of the prices paid in China affecting the selling prices at home to anything like the degree that was the case in former days, when we were dependent upon China Teas alone.

The above gives the chief features and the general prospects for the coming Tea campaign; and, although they are discouraging in many directions, they present some features of a hopeful character. It may be expected that the heavy losses on the common Teas all through the present season will lead to some prudence at the opening of next. Exchange, so far as can be judged at present, seems likely to be at a somewhat high range at the opening of the Season; but this feature, though apparently against the shipper, has been found by practical experience to be in his favour; as by lowering the dollar and tael price at the commencement of operations, it has the effect of establishing a better range of prices throughout the Season. With care, prudence, and circumspection, therefore, there is room for a sound if not brilliant business; but it is to be sincerely hoped that the rush at the opening of the Season in China will be restrained, as if the market here be flooded in July and August, the course of prices through the whole Season will in all likelihood be downward, and the market dragging and disappointing.

THE HONG KONG PRAYA.

Too tempting to remain longer untouched, the Special Fund (in other words, the accumluations of fees under the Hong Kong Gambling Ordinance, now fortunately no longer acted upon) is to be made use of to assist in the extensive works connected with the repairs of the Hong Kong Praya. The sum of $200,000 is to be "borrowed" from the "Special Fund," and the works are to be proceeded with forthwith. On the whole, possibly there is no very serious objection to this appropriation, as the principle laid down by the Home Government that the Special Fund should be devoted exclusively to works for the benefit of the Chinese, such as Hospital Schools and Police Stations, was at best a piece of rather pedantic scrupulousness which came in too late to avert the mischief which had been caused by allowing the money to be obtained from gambling at all. The natives, however, are unquestionably interested in the Praya, and should contribute towards it, and on this ground there is no great cause for objecting to the appropriation. It is satisfactory, therefore, that the present Government have modified the too rigid instructions originally sent from the Colonial-office on the subject, and that the long contemplated works are to be commenced. It seems that a thorough job is at last to be made of it. According to the particulars given in the China Mail the sea-works will involve an expenditure of over $200,000 alone. The Praya is to be widened, but this will not interfere with private piers. The proposed extension in front of the Naval Yard—a most desirable step—will not be proceeded with at present, as it is estimated to cost some $150,000, and it is not thought the present state of trade will justify this outlay. The work, however, which is to be done will cover what is really essential, and it is satisfactory to find that the report of the Praya Commission, upon whose recommendations the scheme is set on foot, states that the present repairs are to be inaugurated "with the full intention of their being, so far as professional skill, experience, and foresight can provide, a final work." It is to be hoped that this intention will be carried out. The typhoon of 1874 was undoubtedly one of the worst that Hong Kong had ever experienced, and did far more damage than ordinary typhoons; but hitherto on every such occasion the Colony has had to vote heavy sums for repairs of the sea wall. If the present works put an end to this they will not in reality be expensive, even at the large figure which they are estimated to cost. We congratulate Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY upon having completed arrangements for this important work during his term of office; but regret that he has been compelled to leave the blockade question, on which he has expended so much labour, as a legacy to his successor.

CHINESE EMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES.

THE Report of the Congressional Committee upon the above question has been issued, and the substance of its recommendations is given further on. It is to be regretted that the Committee have shown a disposition to favour unduly the outcry against the Chinese made by the Californian labourers with whom they compete, but we observe with satisfaction that The Times and the New York Times both condemn the strong opposition which is shown to the Chinese immigrants, and consider, upon grounds which can scarcely be gainsaid, that the recommendations of the Committee will not be deemed such as it will be wise to take as the basis of any legislative action. The two strong grounds against any restrictive measure—at least, any of a severe or prohibitory character—are the one of a political and the other of an economical character. Such a measure would completely stultify the position of the United States vis-à-vis the Chinese Government, not only in respect to the Burlingame Treaty, by which provision for Chinese immigrants is expressly made, but also in regard to its previous treaty, and the general rights claimed under it. It is impossible for the United States to demand of China the same concessions for her citizens as are accorded to other nations if she frame laws expressly against such Chinese as may find their way to America. Still more inconsistent will it be for her to join in demands for further concessions, which in their immediate results will have the effect of benefiting foreigners at the expense of Chinese traders and labourers, if she enact prohibitory laws against the Chinese who come within her domains. Upon economical grounds, any legislative action of the kind suggested by the Report of the Committee is to be equally deprecated. The Chinese cheap labourer has all along been of great value and has done much towards the development of California and the Western States, and to thrust him out would, as we have maintained on many occasions when this question has been discussed, be obviously to the material disadvantage of the country. We cannot, therefore, but trust that the good sense of the public will still prevail, and that notwithstanding the report of the Committee, legislative action of a restrictive or prohibitory character will be refrained from.

CONSTANTINOPLE AND THE COAST OF SYRIA.

We lately called the attention of passengers to and from the Far East to the advantages of a visit to Cairo and other ports of Egypt. Constantinople and the Bosphorus have attractions in the combination of the old Turkish quarters with modern houses, streets, gas, &c., which contrast in a very interesting manner. To those who have the time and means to proceed from Egypt to Constantinople the steamers from Alexandria of the Austrian Lloyds and Messageries Companies afford a convenient opportunity. Leaving Alexandria weekly the steamer calls at ten places along the Coast of Syria, remaining a few hours at each, and arriving at Constantinople in ten days. These ports under Turkish rule are as follows:—Jaffa, Caiffa, Beyrout, Cyprus, Rhodes, Scio, Smyrna, Miteline, Tenedos, Dardanelles. The first of these, Jaffa, or Joppa, is the port for Jerusalem, which can be reached by a daily caravan. At Caiffa is the celebrated Mount Carmel, with its ancient monastery, and the German colony of Templars. Beyrout is the port for Damascus, with which place there is daily communication. The town shows more improvement than any other along the coast; the roads are better, and a nice style of villa residence outside the town. The English Consul-General of Syria, Mr. Eldridge, resides here. The English and American missionaries have large schools and establishments for printing Bibles, &c. Smyrna is also improving very much; a fine quay runs along the town, at which vessels now load and discharge with expedition. At the entrance of the Dardanelles is a town of some importance, with ancient and modern fortifications of considerable power, but not sufficient to stop a Napier or Keppel from carrying a fleet right up to the Golden Horn. The Dardanelles Straits are not very picturesque either on the European or the Asia Minor side. About two hours steaming brings you to the entrance of the land-locked Sea of Marmora, or Propontis, at the entrance of which is the town of Galipoli. About eleven hours' steaming from this point is sufficient to reach the Golden Horn and the entrance to the Bosphorus. Constantinople stands on the two shores of the Golden Horn, or harbour, which is said to be somewhat in the shape of a horn. Be that according to the visitor's own idea or not, it is certainly a magnificent harbour, with bold water close in shore, and depth enough for any vessel afloat. On the one shore is Stamboul, the seat of Government, on the other —connected by a wide but very rough bridge of boats, and one iron bridge—are Pera and Galata, the residence of foreigners.

When landed the aid of a dragoman with guide books is necessary, and four or five days' fair application will be sufficient to obtain a good knowledge of Constantinople, the Bosphorus, Scutari, &c. To those who visited it ten years since the interest will be almost greater than the first visit on account of the modern introductions. The Hotel de Byzance, in the Grand Rue at Pera, is all that can be desired, and is recommended as the best, and most moderate in charges. From the top of the Hotel a fine panoramic view is to be seen of the city and harbour, (Golden Horn), the domes and minarets of mosques, the Seraglio, the marble palaces, the cemeteries with their stately cypress trees, sacred to the Mahomedan, the snowy summit of Olympus, the Bosphorus, and the sea of Marmora. The picture is certainly grand and unique. On descending into the narrow streets, however, the poetry of the position is considerably shaken. To say that they are always muddy and dirty conveys but a poor idea of the muck and filth by which you are surrounded, even in the approaches to the palaces of high officers and ambassadors. The usual mode of locomotion is not the donkey, as in Egypt, but horses and the Sedan chair, which are to be found for hire in all parts. Besides the filth to be encountered there are the "dogs," a formidable nuisance, hovering about in packs of half dozens, living only on the refuse thrown into the streets, and having no other abode by night or day. They occupy certain districts well defended by themselves, and when one gets astray and invades his neighbour's quarters the howling is terrific. Beggars, also, form an institution, exceeding in horrible deformity what is seen in China. The bridge of boats is their favourite resort, and the disgusting exhibitions there are not to be described. Amid the novelties that strike the European nothing surprises him more than the silence that pervades so large a capital. The only sounds he hears by day are the cries of bread, fruits, sweetmeats, or sherbet, carried in a large wooden tray on the head of an itinerant vendor, and the barking of dogs. The contrast between Constantinople and a European city is still more strongly marked at night. By ten o'clock everything is hushed, and not a creature is seen in the streets, except a few patrols. This silence is frequently destroyed by a fire, which is announced by the patrol striking on the pavement with their iron-shod staves, and calling loudly "Yangen var" (there is a fire!); on which the firemen assemble, and all the inhabitants in the neighbourhood are immediately on the alert. If it be not quickly subdued, all the Ministers of State are obliged to attend, and if it threatens extensive ravages, the Sultan himself must appear, to encourage the efforts of the firemen. The combination of Oriental splendour, filth, and misery to be found in Constantinople is certainly unequalled in any other city in the world.

From the Golden Horn steamers run to Scutari and the line of the Bosphorus up to the ports of the Black Sea, and another service runs from Sulina up the Danube to Vienna. The steamer stops at several places, and occupies about an hour and a-half to the head of the Bosphorus, which connects with the Euxine. The two shores of the Bosphorus are studded with palaces and gardens, and most of the Turkish navy is anchored here, the number of ironclads and other craft varying from twenty to thirty. The Sultan's Palace, the summer palaces of the foreign Ambassadors, the Pachas, and other notable personages, including that of the English Minister, are at Therapia. The beauty of the Bosphorus cannot be overrated. It does not run a straight course, but forms a chain of small bays or lakes. This formation cause irregular currents, which can only be navigated with safety by steam power. By reference to the map it will be seen that the seven promontories on the European shore have as many corresponding bays on the Asiatic side.

Scutari has become familiar to English ears since the Crimean war, as it was used as a depot for our troops and stores and hospitals. It is here that the good work of Florence Nightingale was chiefly carried on, and the hospital still bears her name, which is cherished by all Turks. The burying-ground of our soldiers is also here, and it is kept in good order, with a resident English keeper, paid by our Government. Scutari lies on the Asiatic side, at the confluence of the Bosphorus and the Golden Horn, distant only about twenty minutes by steamer from Constantinople. It stands on seven hills, and was constructed in the earliest time of the great Persian monarchy. The name is as old as the town itself, for Uskudar means in Persian a courier who conveys the Royal orders from station to station, so that they may be forwarded by estaffette or a change of couriers. Scutari, therefore, was in the remotest periods, what it is to this day, the post station for Asiatic couriers, the great rendezvous of all the caravans proceeding from Europe, and the spot whence all travellers from Constantinople to the East commence their journeys.

THE CHINESE LABOUR QUESTION IN AMERICA.

The New York Times, referring to the report of the Committee of Congress on the above subject, observes that the Congressional report will not please those who insist that Chinese immigration to California is an unmixed evil. It goes on to say: "The Committee agree that the resources of the State (of which we hear so much) have been more rapidly developed by the cheap and docile labour of the Chinese than they could have been without it. But it is further argued that this apparent prosperity is deceptive; it benefits the capitalist and depresses the white labourer. A sound social prosperity, argue the Committee, is based on adequate wages, the family, and education of the young. None of these elements are found among the Chinese. Therefore the wealth which their labour produces is unwholesome or fictitious. This means, we must suppose, that it would have been better if the Pacific Railroad, the great water-ways in the mining districts, and other works requiring the investment of considerable capital, had cost more, or had not been built so soon, or had never been built. They were constructed by Chinese labour when the cost of white labour would have made their completion impossible. This seems like a very thin argument. Public improvements which facilitate the movement of goods, passengers, and industrial products, and others which hasten the development of natural resources, are not desirable if they are the work of an alien race. Why? Because, it is answered, these aliens not only do work which white men could not or would not perform, but they also compete with them in other fields of activity. Not only so, but they are objectionable because they are unclean in habit and in all their associations. Competition in labour, says the Committee, might be endured. But when the successful competitor is helped by a cheapness which is secured at the cost of personal comfort and decency, he is an unendurable interloper. This is precisely the conclusion to which the Committee are forced. It is complained that the Chinese in San Francisco 'live in filthy dwellings, upon poor food, crowded together in narrow quarters, and disregarding health and fire ordinances.' We are surprised at this confession of the weakness of the Municipal Government of San Francisco. The report puts the number of Chinese in that city at 35,000, or 40,000 less than the excited memorialists who lately addressed the President on this subject. The total population of the city is estimated at 250,000, and it is now contended that the 35,000 Chinese are able to defy the local authorities, and live in a condition of filth and squalor which not only breeds contagion, but must reduce, by disease, their own numbers. This is mere assertion, however. If it is true that this small fraction of the total population of the city cannot be controlled, more shame to the weak local Government. If the Chinese quarter is a deadly spot, and if the influence spreading therefrom is fatal to the rest of the people, where are the statistics to prove it? It may be admitted that crowded tenements and narrow streets are unsightly, but there is nothing to show that mortality among the Chinese denizens of these quarters is any greater than in the densely-populated area of San Francisco where other foreigners live and die." The Committee recommend that Congress take measures to confine our treaty relations with China to "strictly commercial purposes." This means, of course, to prohibit Chinese immigration. To regulate immigration so that it shall not exceed a certain figure would be impossible. But when we exclude the free immigration of the Chinese, we must be ready to be excluded from China, in turn. A commercial treaty with a friendly nation is desirable, but it cannot be wholly one-sided. The conclusions of the Congressional Committee are largely fallacious. It does not seem necessary to add that their single recommendation is utterly impracticable.

The Times, after summarising the facts set forth in the Report as given above, takes substantially the same view as its New York namesake. It says:—Our Artisans' Dwellings Acts have, after all, very much the same object which the inhabitants of California are professing themselves anxious to realise. So far, then, we cannot but sympathise with the professed motives of this crusade against Chinese immigration, whatever we may think of the much more questionable means by which its leaders are proposing to proceed. But it has been clear all through the discussion on Chinese Immigration that the real forces at work have been of quite another kind, and quite distinct from those which we can in some degree approve. That cheap Chinese labour should threaten to supplant more costly and less docile white labour is felt naturally enough as a grievance by the white labourer. The interest of the employers of labour and of the general community is, however, not wholly identical with that of the white labourers. A well-balanced relation between pay and work is what all ought to be willing to accept; but in California the scales have hitherto been a good deal weighted on the side of the labourer, and we are by no means satisfied that the Chinese immigration has made them even. It is, no doubt, less easy than it used to be to obtain high wages in California for short hours and bad work, but we need not pay much regard to the class of labourers who are most likely to complain of this. But it is the future danger, it will be said, against which Congress is asked to guard. The State of California is not yet swamped by Chinese immigrants, but the tendency is clear and the certain effects are deplorable. It will be too late by-and-by, when the tide has risen to its full height, and when the State has well-nigh passed into the hands of the strangers. But we must remember here another charge against the Chinese, not so clearly made out than any of the others, and not less conducive on their demerits as American residents. We may allow that it would be most undesirable that an American State should slip indirectly out of American possession; but we may fairly ask, in turn, how it is possible that this can happen as the result of Chinese immigration. The Chinese, on the testimony of their accusers, have no thought whatever of settling themselves permanently in America. They do not desire to share the civilisation of which they are the convenient tools, or to exercise voting privileges, which the alleged shallowness of their brainpan will not suffer them to employ aright. They have left China, not from any preference for America, but simply with the purpose of returning home laden with American spoils. It is for this object that they are content to go through their term of servitude, and their only wish is that their period of enforced absence from home may come to a close as soon as possible. A community consisting almost exclusively of males, not intermarrying with the people among whom they are living, and eager to get away at the first opportunity, can scarcely be considered as threatening any very permanent mischief. That such objections as this should have been included in the Committee's Report, and that the discrepancies we have remarked should have been suffered to pass unnoticed, seem to us to prove very convincingly that their views have been formed under strong bias, or that they have not been thought out with any care, and that they represent, accordingly, nothing better than chance influences and reckless talk. It is sad, of course, that the virgin purity of San Francisco society should be sullied by contact with a race of lower morals and less inoffensive personal habits. It is hard that the patriotic desire of all other classes of foreigners to obtain high wages should be thwarted by the perverse willingness of their Chinese rivals to work for low wages. But is there no middle course between suffering them to come in any numbers and shutting them out altogether? Perhaps we need not altogether regret that one form of improper influence is likely in this matter to correct the mischief of another, and that the patriotic outcry of the Californian rowdies against Chinese immigrants will be moderated by the more professedly selfish aims of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. The case may very well be one which calls for Legislative help, but the Report of the Committee is, on the face of it, not of a kind by which the Legislature ought to be guided.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

The Standard states that the Official Gazette of Tashkend has lately published a statement to the effect that the armies of the Chinese and of the Kashgarians, which have long been threatening each other, and carrying on a barren frontier warfare, have at last approached each other in force, and, it is said, are now only separated by the Tian Shan Mountains. The Chinese Government, it is notorious, have long been eager to strike a heavy blow at the growing Mahometan Power which harrasses their north-western provinces and seems capable of winning away the inhabitants from their loose allegiance to Peking. The Chinese frontier army, which some time ago gained a few trifling victories over the Kashgarians, has been reinforced, and from an arsenal lately established at Lanchefu ten thousand breech-loading rifles have been sent to the head-quarters of the "expeditionary force" at Gutchen. It is true that the reports of the Chinese successes have been grossly exaggerated, and even the Peking Government has not ventured to give currency to the rumour which reached Europe some months ago, that the son of the Ameer of Kashgar had been taken prisoner in one of the engagements of last summer. The impression, indeed, prevails among Englishmen who know China, that the troops sent to the north-west will be found no match for the Kashgarians, blazing with zeal for Islam, and led by a Prince whose force of character has raised him from a humble station to a position where his policy is watched with anxious eyes by the greatest Empires on the earth. But in Kashgar itself the forecast of the struggle with China, which must some day be faced, is not contemplated with the same assurance of victory. The Ameer is labouring to strengthen his military resources, and at the same time to draw the bonds of diplomatic intercourse with Russia closer and closer. Russia, apparently, is on the alert to guard against possible dangers, and to profit instantly by any advantages that may offer themselves. A special Embassy from St. Petersburg has followed the Ameer to Akasu, his head-quarters in the war against the Chinese, so that whether the Kashgarians be worsted or victorious the Russian Government will have the earliest and most accurate information.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting of the Geographical Society on the 12th inst. Sir Rutherford Alcock, K.C.B., in the chair, Mr. J. Y. Buchannan read a paper on the "Distribution of Salt in the Ocean, as indicated by the Specific Gravity of its Water." The lecture was based on observations taken by H.M.S. Challenger, and was illustrated by various diagrams which showed the variation of the saltness of the ocean, and were explained in detail by the lecturer. He said that water had been taken from different depths and at an immense number of places in the ocean. Of the three and a-half years during which the cruise lasted, three years were spent in the tropics, and the water from the bottom of the sea had to be allowed to stand to take the temperature of the air before its specific gravity was ascertained by means of a hydrometer. The water was heaviest, and consequently most salt, in portions of the Atlantic where there were two bands on each side of the equator, which were of the greatest density, while between them, on the equator, was a band which was not so salt. Throughout the whole of the Atlantic the water was more salt than in any part of the Pacific. Mr. Buchanan gave reasons for attributing this effect to the operation of the trade winds, which caused a much larger amount of evaporation than took place in the Pacific, where the trade winds were neither so regular nor so general, and where there was much greater rainfall than in the Atlantic. The most interesting feature noted was that the greatest saltness in the ocean was found in the coldest and also in the hottest regions; and this Mr. Buchannan explained arose from the same proximate cause, brought about by opposite remote causes; that is to say, in both cases the increased saltness resulted from the abstraction of a certain portion of the water at a given place, in the one case from the effects of the cold, the ice containing much less salt than the water from which it is formed, and in the other from the effects of heat, which caused evaporation. At the conclusion of the paper, Sir Rutherford Alcock said it was of great interest as giving information upon certain important scientific problems, which could scarcely be obtained in any other way than by expeditions too costly for private individuals, such as that of the Challenger. The information given was merely a fragment of the many valuable results of that voyage; and he thought the Government could not better employ its surplus funds than in despatching such expeditions. Mr. Herbert J. Allen, of H.B.M. Consular Service in China, then read a paper entitled "A Journey through Formosa, from North to South." He gave various details of the manners and customs of the people; his treatment by the Chinese officials, the missionary stations in the interior of the island, and other similar matters. He stated that since the Japanese expedition against the Formosan tribe the Chinese have endeavoured to extend their territory and increase the number of colonists, and during the last year they have largely increased the staff of officials, but colonists in advanced positions are exposed to many serious risks, notwithstanding that the Chinese have made large presents to many of the native chiefs. Mr. Allen travelled in company with missionaries, who are well received, and who have a considerable number of converts to Christianity among the natives, who are supposed to be of the Malayo-Polynesian race. Mr. Allen entered by a very narrow pass into a plain, inhabited principally by semi-civilised natives and a few Chinese, the hills surrounding it being occupied by wild savage tribes, who live by hunting in the woods. Sir Rutherford Alcock stated that some years ago he had visited Formosa, and was much struck by what he saw there. The Chinese who had established themselves at various places round the coast, but had not subdued the inhabitants, looked upon the natives as almost wild, and spoke of them as barbarians. The island was extremely fruitful, and pine-apples grew there wild. He had asked permission of a native on one occasion to take some, and on inquiring what return he should make in payment was told to take as many as he liked, as they were worth nothing. He considered Formosa as undoubtedly of some commercial importance, but it required developing. At present it was merely "fringed" by the Chinese. The inhabitants were almost wild, and had an unpleasant fancy for the heads of strangers. The climate, he considered, was very much against colonisation, although it was spoken of more favourably, he thought, than it deserved by Europeans who had been there. The British Consul in the north of the island, whom he saw, told him the climate was very pleasant, but they had rain there for over six months in the year. Some progress was, however, being made in the development of the island. The coal mines were being worked in the north, and were likely to prove of advantage to steamers which traded on the coast. We must, however, be patient and wait until time had further developed the resources of the island. In themselves, however, they were undoubtedly great; and consisted, in fact, of almost all kinds of tropical produce—tea, coffee, sugar, &c.; these might be produced in large quantities if the island had the good fortune to be civilised and under a good Government. So far, however, as he could judge from what he heard when in China, it seemed to cost so much in health and money to go up the country that few were disposed, as matters stand at present, to do so.

Monetary and Commercial.

The position of the Tea Market is unaltered. Teas continue to be forced off without reserve, and complaints of the disastrous state of business are made in all directions. The amelioration of the present state of affairs rests with importers, who should take steps to check the heavy supplies from China. We are certain to receive increased quantities from India, and at least 32,000,000 lbs. must be expected during the coming season, all of good quality, whereas of China teas much of that imported is unsuited to the present wants of consumers. To-day's quotation for good clean Common Congou, red or black leaf, is 7½d. per lb., with unlimited supplies available, and further additions to the stock will continue for some time, as many parcels imported of a higher grade deteriorate to the level of "good common," owing to its poor keeping properties, from its being imperfectly fired, and, in consequence, losing its quality.

In the Produce Markets there has been a continuance of the quietude so long prevailing, and transactions have been of very moderate extent, there being an entire absence of speculative demand. The public sales of Tea continue large, but supplies have for the most part sold readily at the previous value. Silk has been in improved demand at advanced quotations. Plantation Ceylon Coffee is steady, but Native has declined. Sugar is dull, and China has sustained a fall of 2s. to 2s. 6d. per cwt. Floating cargoes of new Burmah Rice have been sold at firm rates, but there is little or nothing doing on the spot. The declining tendency of Cotton has continued. Tin is lower, Straits being quoted £71 10s., Banca, £74 per ton. Cutch, Gambier, Isinglass, and Pepper are all lower in value. Business in other articles has been on an extremely limited scale.

The quantity of tea cleared from the bonded warehouses in London last week amounted to 3,548,043 lbs., which was 400,088 lbs. more than was taken out of bond during the corresponding week of 1876. Of this quantity 2,192,420 lbs. went for home consumption, the duty on which was £54,810 10s., an increase of £4,713 18s. on the sum taken during the corresponding week of last year, when the tea duty collected in London realised £50,096 12s.

The third annual drawing of the Bonds of the Japan Government Seven per Cent. Loan, which are to be paid off on the 2nd July, will take place on the 3rd proximo at the Oriental Bank.

A further reduction of ⅜d. per rupee was submitted to in the allotment of the India Council Bills on the 14th inst. Last week's successful tenders were made at, and above 1s. 9⅜d. per rupee, whereas for the 17½ lacs (say £175,000) placed on the 14th inst. only 1s. 9¼d. was obtained; £100,000 was taken for Calcutta, and the balance for Bombay. Applicants at that rate received in full, except those for telegrams on Calcutta, which obtained about 78 per cent. of the amounts applied for.

The price of Bar Silver has receded to 55d. Mexican Dollars have also become much weaker, closing at 54½d. per oz.

The Daily News Lyons correspondent alludes to the various theories which are afloat as to the cause of the great distress which, whatever may have been its origin, undoubtedly does exist amongst the operatives of Lyons. It has been asserted that the crisis has been, if not caused, at all events precipitated by the statements made in the French Chamber of Deputies by one or two representatives of the city, especially by M. Ordinaire, the argument being that in proclaiming to the whole world the existence of distress and the general suspension of manufacture he virtually told the silk buyers of Europe and America that if they held back their orders they would be able to purchase at a lower rate. One would have supposed that the large buyers are sufficiently well posted in what takes place at the capital of the silk trade not to require any information which may be given in a public speech, and there is probably more truth in the theory which attributes the crisis to the lessened demand for silk since ladies have taken to wearing dresses made of other materials. The Chamber of Commerce at Lyons, which ought to be able to speak with authority, does, however, adopt to a certain extent the former theory. Nearly half the looms in the city are stopped though the manufacturers are doing their best not to suspend operations altogether, or all at once; and the same is the case in the factories where the silk is dyed.

in 5 per cent. redeemable obligations of the Bergslagernas Railway Company (Sweden). The price of issue is 91 per cent. and the bonds are of the value of £50, £250, and £500 each, with interest payable in January and July. The line is to run from Falun to Gothenburg, with sundry branches, and will be in all 344 miles in length. The section from Falun to Kil is open, and passes through the mineral districts, and to complete the work to Gothenburg it is expected that about two years will be required. The obligations are redeemable by annual drawings at par, and the Gothenburg Handels Company guarantee the interest on the bonds till 1884, before which time it is expected that the traffic will be fully developed.

The report of the Mauritius Land, Credit, and Agency Company for the year ended 31st December shows a net profit, inclusive of £218 brought forward, of £12,129. The interim dividend of 2s. 6d. per share paid in September absorbed £3,750, and it is now proposed to make a further distribution of 3s. per share, requiring £4,500. To the reserve £1,500 is added, raising it to £14,000, and from the balance of £2,379 the directors propose to invest £2,000 in Consols or approved securities as the nucleus of a home reserve fund.

The report of the Equity Law Life Assurance Society shows that the new policies effected last year insured a sum of £432,207, the new premiums being £15,197. The claims have been only £37,651, being less than half the expectation of the year. The assets, after providing for outstanding claims, amounted at the end of the year to £1,284,954, being an increase of £131,428 in the course of the year, and the investments, excluding reversions, produced an average rate of £4 18s. 1d. per cent.

The report of the India Rubber, Gutta Percha, and Telegraph Works for the year 1876 states a net profit of £30,764 was made, which has more than sufficed to clear off the debit balance of £24,183 in 1875. The balance of £8,905 is carried forward. The auditors again press the necessity of a reserve fund being created, and urge as a reason that they "cannot put a value on the 'shares in other companies' amounting to £301,908, or on the dividend on a portion of such shares taken credit for in the profit and loss account."

The Barcelona Tramways Company (Limited) notify that a further dividend of 13s. per share, making 9½ per cent. for the year 1876, will be paid on the 1st April, free of income-tax.

The directors of the Bank of Australasia have declared an interim dividend on the capital of the bank (£1,200,000) at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

It is announced that the trustee of the estate of Messrs. Bowdler, Chaffer, and Co., shipbuilders, Seacombe, has negotiated a sale of the machinery, plant, and all the materials in the yard for the sum of £6,500, subject to the sanction of the general body of creditors, and a meeting is called for the 19th inst. to consider the question

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—There is no alteration to notice in our market this week. Public sales without reserve still continue to be the leading feature, and those of this week have comprised a larger proportion of good grades of Congou, which went off slowly at irregular prices; they also comprised over 5,000 packages of Green tea, which went at low prices for all common to medium kinds. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings being scarce sell at comparatively full prices; common sold from 6¾d. to 7¼d., fair to good common from 7½d. to 8¾d., showing no change; fair kinds at 9¾d. to 10d., and good medium at 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 2d., and good at 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 6½d. were rather easier prices. Privately there has been but little done. Pak-lin inds show no change. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common at 7¼d. to 8½d. per lb. remain as before; fair kinds at 8⅜d. to 9⅜d. per lb. were rather cheap; fair to good medium sold from 1s. 1⅛d. to 1s. 3¼d. per lb. and good at 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 6½d., fine at 1s. 10d. to 1s. 11¼d. per lb., prices being rather irregular. Privately there is a moderate inquiry for good to fine kinds. New-make Congous: Common sold at auction at 7½d. to 7⅝d. per lb., being a lower quotation; fair kinds sell only slowly; a few parcels of good to fine have sold from 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 5d. per lb., being rather lower rates. Oolongs are only in limited request; at public sale fine Formosa only realised 1s. 4⅝d. to 1s. 5¼d. per lb. Souchongs: A few fine have been inquired for, but the demand is generally quiet; common at auction sold at 8½d. to 9⅜d. per lb., good at 1s. 3⅛d. to 1s. 5d. per lb. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers have been dull of sale; common show no change; fair to good kinds have sold at low prices at public auction, say 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 1⅜d. per lb. Orange Pekoes: The Macao kinds are steady; long leaf kinds sold at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4¼d. per lb., being much as before. Foo Chow Capers are only saleable at low prices. Orange Pekoes continue in request at full prices. Green Teas.—The large quantity offered at auction has gone off slowly at some decline in prices. The public sales have comprised 22,158 packages, the whole of which have been offered and sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

COFFEE.

The statistical position of this article has undergone a considerable change since the commencement of the year, for the deficiency of 43,000 tons then apparent in the chief European stocks has been brought down to less than 20,000 tons, and the stock in London, instead of being 7,000 tons less, is now about equal to last year. Attention has been chiefly directed towards Plantation Ceylon, large supplies of which have been brought to auction almost daily, but the demand has been nearly equal, and prices, after more than usual fluctuations, close nearly equal to those a fortnight ago. Native and pale kinds have been flat, and the value has given way 2s. per cwt., good ordinary closing at 82s. Quotations are:—Plantation triage 81s. to 93s., common to fine coloury small 97s. to 101s., low middling 101s. 6d. to 104s., middling 104s. 6d. to 106s. 6d., good middling to fine middling bright 107s. to 111s., good to fine bold 112s. to 119s., choice 120s. to 121s., pea-berry 110s. to 115s. 6d.; Native, small and broken 70s., good small 77s. to 77s. 6d., good ordinary to fine ordinary 82s. to 82s. 6d., pea-berry 86s. The only sale of other East India has been 500 bags Manila, fine Zamboanza at 81s. 6d. to 82s.

The Dutch Trading Company have announced their next public sale for the 21st inst., when 104,806 bags Java will be offered, against 83,422 bags in 1876.

CHINA SUGAR.—A good business has been done during the week in Swatow sugar, about 12,000 bags having been sold, very low to fair Native 17s. 6d. to 18s. 6d. Nothing has been done in Hainan or Siam kinds.

COTTON.—The market has been in an extremely flat state, owing to continued and unexpectedly heavy receipts at United States ports, which has caused some pressure to sell, and prices have consequently declined. In East India business becomes more and more unimportant, and the few sales made show a decline of ⅛d. per lb.; whilst American for delivery, in which considerable speculative contracts have been made, has declined ¼d. to 5-16d. per lb., but closes firmer. Quotations are:—Tinnivelly, 5 11-16d. to 6d., good fair to good; Western Madras, 5⅛d. to 5⅜d., fair to good fair; Bengal, 4 15-16d. to 5⅛d., fair to good fair; Rangoon, 5⅛d. to 5¼d., good fair to good.

CHINA TALLOW.—57 casks were either bought in, good at 41s., or withdrawn.

CARDAMOMS.—6 cases long Ceylon partly lean and shelly and slightly mouldy sold at 3s. to 3s. 1d.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction 701 bales met a moderate demand, and 250 bales sold at easier rates; white coarse wide to medium £7 17s. 6d. to £9 5s., good medium to good £10 15s. to £18 10s., fine to superior narrow bright £19 to £28 15s., with two lots at £35 10s. to £40, mottled £5 12s. 6d. to £8 10s., one lot £9 17s. 6d., black and white coarse £9 to £10 5s., medium to good £12 to £17 15s., fine £22 5s., black and white rustic £9 5s. to £10 2s. 6d., brown and white £10 to £20 10s. per bale.

CHINA FEATHERS.—Of 174 packages 7 bales sold at 4d. to 7d., the remainder being bought in at 4½d. to 11d.

COCOANUT OIL has been without animation. Cochin is quoted £42, Ceylon £36 10s. to £37, according to packages.

CHINA PRESERVES.—Ginger continues in large supply, but at auction 980 cases of fresh import met a good demand, and 930 cases sold at full rates to ½d. advance, 779 cases Mansing large jars at 5¼d. to 5½d., Sam Shing 5d. to 5¼d., and 20 cases Cumquats at 7¾d. per lb. 26 cases Kurrachee Condiments partly sold, Curry Powder, &c., at 40s. to 43s. per case.

CHINA SOY.—25 casks sold at 1s. 7d. per gallon.

CUTCH.—At auction 505 boxes fine Pegu, just arrived, were sold at a further decline of 6d., chiefly Fish over N and B mark at. 26s to 26s. 6d. per cwt.

GAMBIER.—The market continues in a weak state, and prices are again easier, 100 tons just arrived having been sold at 19s. 6d. ex ship, all faults also for arrival; 50 tons January-February, and 50 tons March-April, shipment sold at 20s. At public sale 373 bales Cubes sold steadily, dark at 26s., fine mixed pale and dark 27s. to 27s. 6d. per cwt.

GALLS.—108 cases China bought in at 58s., fine worked 70s.

GUM BENJAMIN.—30 cases Sumatra seconds sold, good fair rather mixed with dark at £9 to £9 7s. 6d., middling mixed at £6 10s. to £6 12s. 6d.

ISINGLASS.—The monthly public sales held on the 13th inst. consisted chiefly of East India, of which the good supply offered met a steady demand, and was nearly all sold; Bombay tongue rather irregularly and occasionally 1d. lower, bladder pipe at full rates to rather dearer, cake at previous prices; Penang tongue and leaf sold steadily for common, but about 4d. lower for good, but cake at firmer rates. The moderate quantity of Brazil sold 2d. cheaper for fine lump but at full rates for all other kinds. Of Penang 62 cases 27 bags were nearly all sold, good pale tongue at 4s. 5d. to 4s. 6d., medium at 4s. 3d. to 4s. 4d., low and ordinary dark at 3s. 6d. to 4s., good pale leaf at 4s. 9d. to 4s. 11d., medium at 4s. 4d., to 4s. 8d., low and ordinary at 3s. 6d. to 4s. 1d., cake at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 4d.; 22 bales Japan manufactured were bought in at 1s. 5d. to 2s. per lb.

JAPAN WAX.—Privately about 300 cases fair to good quality have been sold at 43s. to 45s. per cwt. At the public sales 428 cases met a moderate demand, and 100 cases found buyers at easier rates, middling yellow squares 41s., good bold ditto 43s. to 43s. 6d., good yellow saucer 43s.

JAPAN SOY.—55 cases bought in at 40s. per case.

ORCHELLA.—29 ballots Ceylon offered were bought in at 50s.

PEPPER.—Black continues extremely dull. Privately about 400 bags have been sold, Penang at 3⅝d., Singapore at 3¾d., and at public sale 1,643 bags were chiefly sold at a further reduction of 1-16d. per lb.; of 1,221 bags Penang 900 bags sold, sound at 3½d. to 3⅝d., first and second-class sea-damaged at 3⅜d. to 3½d.; 229 bags Singapore were bought in at 4¼d. White also continues flat; and at auction prices declined ½d. per lb. 172 bags Singapore being sold at 6½d. to 6⅝d. for brownish, and 6¾d. for fair, and 112 bags Penang bought in at 6⅜d. per lb.

PLUMBAGO.—75 barrels Ceylon sold at about previous prices, ordinary dull small lump 10s. 6d., good bold chips 10s., common to good bright dust 7s. 6d. to 9s. per cwt.

RICE.—Although the demand for new crop cargoes is moderate importers are unwilling sellers, and the market is firm. On the spot 3,500 bags new white Bengal, just landed, have been sold at 12s. 4½d., 6,500 bags old white table Bengal at 11s., and 800 bags Askoolie at 10s. 1½d.; also 2,500 bags old Bassein at 9s. 10½d. ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

There is again nothing to report as regards the Manchester Market but dulness and inactivity. The inquiry from all sides has been slow and of very limited extent, and there has been an exceedingly quiet market. The reductions in prices obtainable so far have failed to tempt buyers to depart from the abstentive policy that has lately characterised their operations. Quotations must be considered almost nominal; the better qualities of Shirtings are still firmly held, and for lower descriptions there have not been transactions of sufficient extent to ascertain the concessions producers would actually submit to. Those producers who are still under engagement continue opposed to reductions, hence there is more irregularity in values than has been the case for some time.

CASUALTIES.

ROTTERDAM.—March 12, the Java Packet, Trappen, arrived at Nieuwe Diep from Batavia, sustained damage to bows during heavy weather off the Cape of Good Hope.

NEW YORK.—March 12, the Bethany, Hong Kong to this port, is ashore at Hereford Inlet. The tide flows in and over her. All the cargo will probably be saved, but the hull will probably be a total loss. The Scotia (barque), Duncan, arrived here from Manila, experienced heavy W. and N.W. gales off the Cape, and a succession of gales from lat. 25, split sails and stove bulwarks. The Lucia, of London, Crowley, arrived here from Hong Kong, reports that in lat. 24, long. 65, she experienced very unsettled weather, the wind veering all round the compass and blowing with hurricane violence; sustained slight damage about deck and blew away lower maintopsail.

MAURITIUS.—(By Telegraph dated Aden, March 14.)—The William Fruing (barque), from Ilo Ilo for Channel, f.o., has put in here leaky, with loss of mainmast, mizentopmast, and boats, with bulwarks stove in, and with foremast sprung; by order of the surveyors she is discharging her cargo for survey. The Rowena (British brig) has put in leaky, with bulwarks stove, and decks swept; she is discharging her cargo for survey; also the Taitsing (of Greenock), with bulwarks and stanchions damaged, and having jettisoned portion of cargo; must go into dock for survey and repairs.

CAPE TOWN.—(By Telegraph dated Madeira, March 13.)—The Brothers German (barque), from Singapore for New York, put in here Feb. 19 with loss of main and mizen topmasts, and with damage to bulwarks.

ILO ILO.—Jan. 16, 4,500 piculs of sugar, landed in a damaged state ex Monarchy barque, have been sold by auction at an average of $3 71c. per picul; the decks, waterways, stanchions, and combings of the Coldstream are to be calked, and the vessel to be horsed and calked from copper to gunwale. The repairs recommended on Dec. 4 are being proceeded with. The hemp discharged from the vessel will be surveyed, and it is supposed that about 200 bales will be sold as damaged; a quantity will have to be re-pressed. GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

SALE OF MESSRS. ROBERT NAPIER AND SONS SHIPBUILDING YARD.—The extensive marine engineering works and shipbuilding yard at Govan, Glasgow, with all the buildings and fixed tools and machinery, belonging to Messrs. Robert Napier and Sons, engineers and shipbuilders, and the goodwill of their business were sold on the 14th inst. in the Faculty-hall, Glasgow. The upset price was £250,000. The property was knocked down to Dr. Anderson Kirkwood for a client. The competition lay between the purchaser and the Clyde Navigation Trustees, who desired to secure the ground for the extension of their works. The firm of Napier and Sons was founded about fifty years ago by Mr. Robert Napier, who had previously carried on business as a blacksmith in Glasgow. Mr. Napier constructed his first marine engine in 1823, and in 1836 he built two ships for the East India Company. His first contract for Her Majesty's Government was obtained in 1840, and so much satisfaction did the engines give that many similar orders followed. Along with Sir Samuel Cunard Mr. Napier projected the now celebrated Cunard Line, and build its first ships, to which many have been since added from the same yard. Messrs. Napier and Sons constructed for the British Navy the Erebus, Black Prince, Hector, Audacious, Invincible, Hotspur, and Northampton, all armour-clad vessels, representing a tonnage of 26,938 tons, the engines representing 5,450-horse power. The Messrs. Napier were also extensively employed by private shipowners, and vessels built by them are to be found in all quarters of the globe.

PROSECUTION BY UNDERWRITERS.—The Lord Chief Justice has been engaged at the Bodmin Assizes with the trial of John Hooper Carbines, master mariner, charged with feloniously casting away and destroying the brig Thermutis, of which he was master. The ship belonged to Brixham, and the prosecution alleged that she was overinsured in a Brixham club, and that her freight was overinsured in Lloyd's. In November last she sailed from Cardiff with coal for Demerara, being in excellent condition, well found, and not overloaded. About 150 miles west of Scilly the prisoner put back for Falmouth, although his ship was in no way damaged. Soon after, however, the ship did leak, but not more than the pumps could keep under. Arriving off the English coast the prisoner, instead of running for Falmouth, anchored in Penventon Bay. The weather was not rough, and without using the pumps the prisoner and his crew left her. After standing by the ship for a few hours the prisoner again went on board, got her head put for the shore, slipped the cable, and deliberately setting her running on the rocks, left her. The ship, however, headed round for the Bristol Channel. The prisoner again boarded her, set her head to land, once more steered himself until she was within a quarter mile of shore, and within five minutes of his leaving her she was on the rocks a total wreck. The jury found the prisoner guilty, and the Lord Chief Justice sentenced him to fourteen years' penal servitude.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The receipts from shipping during the month of February amounted to f.3,150,000, against f.2,555,409 in the same month of 1876, and f.2,683,966 in 1875. The number of vessels which passed through the Canal during the month was 162 in 1877, 130 in 1876, and 151 in 1874. In the first two months of the year there was an increase of 29 vessels and f.632,350 compared with 1876, and of 22 vessels and f.984,070 in 1875. It is remarked as a sign of a revival in trade that during the month of January last 92 vessels went from the Mediterranean through the Canal to the East, against 47 only returning from the Red Sea to Port Said. Of the 92 vessels bound eastward 9 were in ballast going to take cargo in Indian ports, generally to Calcutta or Kurrachee, steam tonnage being in good demand in the different ports. In January 11 steamers, of which 9 were English, passed through the Canal for the first time. Five steamers made the passage with a draught of over 7 metres (23 feet) of water. The average passage of each was 18 hours 40 min. On the 28th February 495 vessels were loading or on their way to the Canal; they consisted of 121 from Europe to Asia, signalled with date; 69 from Asia to Europe, also signalled with date; 133 vessels announced but without date, and 172 which had passed from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea and not yet returned.

THE CASTALIA.—The steamer Castalia has made a trial at Dover of the "Aston patent disc-blade paddle-wheel." The paddles of these disc-blades are straight narrow metal blades, a few inches wide, and when fixed upon the spoke of the wheel resemble a huge pair of old-fashioned parallel rules, separated on their hinge just sufficiently wide apart to allow the iron to be fastened on to the spoke itself. The Castalia attained an average speed of little under eleven knots an hour. This is a gain of nearly two knots an hour over the average of her working speed, nine-two, for her last forty-six voyages—twenty-three each way—taking her course as twenty-two and a-half statute miles.

THE steamer Consolation, recently chartered for a voyage to the Amoor, was built in 1873 by Messrs. Aitken, of Glasgow, owned by Messrs. McGregor of Leith; her length is 242 feet, breadth 30 feet 5 inches, depth 15 feet 9 inches, tonnage 768 tons, with engines of 150-horse power; last voyage was from Pillau to London; she discharged in the Millwall docks, and left for Antwerp and Hamburg on the 11th inst., under the command of Captain Roper; from thence she will proceed to the Amoor.

SMUGGLING BY CHINESE.—At the Thames Police-court, on the 10th inst., three Chinamen, named Aplon, Ap Kung, and Ap Sing, firemen on board the steamer Glengyle, lying in the West India dock, were charged with possession of 17 lbs. of cavendish tobacco, of foreign manufacture, which was liable to seizure and customs' duty. The magistrate fined each of them £5 3s. 6d., and in default of payment 14 days' hard labour.

THE Colonial wool ship Hesperides, with 5,444 bales of wool on board, and upon which high premiums were being paid at Lloyd's, has arrived in the Channel, from South Australia, having been at sea over 123 days.

THE Board of Trade inquiry into the stranding of the ship Ethel, of Plymouth, on the 27th February, has terminated in the suspension for three months of the master and the mate.

THE FRIEND OF ALL!!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

These famous Pills PURIFY the BLOOD, and act most powerfully, yet soothingly on the LIVER, STOMACH, KIDNEYS, and BOWELS, giving TONE, ENERGY, and VIGOR to the whole system. They are wonderfully efficacious in all ailments incidental to FEMALES, Young or Old, and as a general FAMILY MEDICINE, for the cure of most complaints they are unequalled.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7 000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarsh p. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend, to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

From China the present mail again brings a variety of details connected with the opening of the new ports under the Chefoo Convention, affairs with regard to that matter appearing to proceed much more rapidly there than at home, where it is still doubtful whether the Convention will come into force at all. According to a letter from Hankow to the North China Daily News, Messrs. Baber and Gill were likely to set out on their eastward journey about the 8th February. Mr. W. King, of H.M. Consular Service, had also arrived at Hankow, and was about to start in the Kestrel for Ichang, to take a preliminary official survey. Mr. Dick, who is understood to be appointed commissioner at Ichang, is also in Hankow, on his way to the new port. It seems to be assumed out in China that the Convention is as good as ratified, at least so far as the opening of new ports is concerned. The relief of the refugees from the famine in the north is still one of the chief subjects of attention on the part of the native officials, one of whom has published regulations providing that if there are are any starving people desirous of selling their wives and children to buy food, proclamations must at once be issued, forbidding any purchaser to purchase them. The notification is painfully indicative of the state of misery into which large numbers have been plunged. From Hong Kong the most interesting item of news is the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, at which a number of matters of considerable importance were discussed. Some sensation has been caused by the fact that the absconding Government employés, Webster and Rowe, were in charge of the gunpowder in the colony. Sir Arthur Kennedy had intended to go to Australia by the steamer Singapore, which was wrecked, and is congratulated upon having delayed his departure.

From Japan a curious and interesting piece of intelligence, somewhat suggestive of the blind leading the blind, is brought by the present mail. Japan is to make a loan to China, not however in money, but in rice, copper-cash, and other goods. Altogether the transaction seems to be one of the most extraordinary that has ever been recorded. It would be interesting even to the "floaters" of loans in the European money markets, as a financial novelty, and it is to be hoped, if we may put the thing in a commercial form, that the business which has now been opened between the two Governments will prove profitable and mutually satisfactory. The Kioto-Osaka Railway has been opened by the Mikado, the ceremony as described by the local journals being of a very imposing character. The rumours of difficulties among the Kagosima Ken were on the increase; but nothing very definite seemed to be known on the subject, which appeared to be involved in the obscurity that generally attaches to native affairs both in Japan and China. Mr. Consul Russell Robertson has obtained leave of absence. It was expected that the Empress of Japan would shortly make, for the first time, a journey by sea—an event which was looked upon with some interest.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 6th Feb., and we have advices by the Occidental and Oriental Company's steamer Gaelic, via San Francisco, five days later, viz., to the 11th Feb. The P. and O. mail from London, Dec. 8, arrived out on the 28th Jan., the following French mail of Dec. 15 on the 2nd Feb., and the P. and O. mail of Dec. 22 on the 8th Feb.

An unexpected announcement is made in the local papers. For some time a rumour had been abroad that Japan was about to grant a loan to China. As was natural, not very much attention was given to the statement, but according to the Japan Herald the report has been revived, with a circumstantiality that leaves no doubt about the affair being in course of negotiation. The amount of the loan is variously stated; it is to be given partly in rice, partly in copper, and partly in iron, brass, and copper cash that are now being withdrawn from circulation in Japan, while they are yet current in China. The price of rice has gone up in consequence of this loan operation. China, it appears, is to give bonds, but for how much, how long current, and at what rate of interest has not yet been made public.

The Mikado left on the 24th January for Kioto by sea, and was followed on the 1st Feb. by most of the Foreign Ministers, who went in a steamer placed at their disposal by the Government to witness the ceremony of opening the Kioto Osaka railway, which took place successfully on the 5th February. The Herald gives an excellent account of the ceremony, from which we extract the following:—

As soon as his Majesty descended from his carriage he was received by Enouye, the Chief Commissioner of Railways, and the foreign and native Ministers, and was then conducted along a pathway, bordered with flowers, followed by the Ministers, &c., to the State carriage. in which he took his seat, accompanied by the high Japanese officials, whilst the Diplomatic corps took their places in the two carriages before and behind the Imperial one, and the remaining members of the procession filled the others without much distinction of persons. As soon as all were comfortably seated, the signal for starting was given, and amidst the crash of the band, the presenting of arms by the troops, and a salute of 101 guns fired by a battery stationed there, the train moved slowly out of the terminus, at 9.30 A.M. The engine, which was gaily decorated with flowers and flags, was driven by Mr. Smith. the locomotive superintendent, whilst Mr. Page, the traffic manager, under whose charge were the traffic arrangements of the day, also took post thereon. All down the line preparations had been made by the people to greet the Emperor. The railroad officials had outdone themselves. Every little crossing had its archway of flowers and evergreens surmounted by two national flags, while at the larger stations the decorations were extremely good, and the platforms on each side were crowded with officials and the school children of the neighbourhood, in holiday attire, who, ranged in serried lines, bowed as the train swept swiftly past.

If Kobe could not rival the Kioto terminus in the beauty of its hangings, it enjoys an advantage which the other does not. In Kioto the main entrance opens directly on to the street, but at Kobe a considerable extent of ground intervenes between the buildings and the roadway. This the Kobe officials had taken advantage of, and it was in this piece of ground that the ceremony took place. To this place the Mikado was conducted, whilst bands played and the men-of-war in harbour thundered forth a Royal salute. As his Majesty appeared on the platform the assembled Europeans burst out in a hearty cheer, which was graciously acknowledged by the Mikado, and at which he seemed gratified. As soon as his Majesty had taken his place on the dais, Sir Harry Parkes stepped forward and, as doyen of the Diplomatic corps, read an address to the Mikado, to which he returned a few short words of reply. After this some presentations took place. Sir Harry presented Mr. Annesley, the English Consul at Hiogo, Mr. Brassey, M.P. (who wore the uniform of a lieutenant in the Royal Naval Reserve), Mr. Frere, and the Hon. J. Bingham. Captain Marvin, U.S.N., and Mr. Vreeland, U.S.N., of the U.S. Alert, were presented by the Minister of the United States; and Admiral Veron, Captain Caillet, Captain Rieunier, and several officers of the Admiral's staff by the French Chargé d'Affaires. These comprised the foreign presentations, and the Governor of Hiogo then proceeded to read the address from the people of the ken, to which a few words were returned by the Mikado. This concluded the more formal business, and the Emperor was conducted to the general offices, which had been specially fitted up for the occasion, and where an elegant luncheon had been prepared.

The threatening rumours regarding the action of the Kagosima ken continued, and were becoming more menacing. The risings among the farmers had, however, entirely subsided.

The Minister of Finance has published his estimates of the Imperial revenue expenditure for the period 1st July, 1876, till 30th June, 1877, showing a surplus of yen 1,796.00, but there is a reserve fund for contingencies of yen 1,330,000, and a loan fund of half a million. The revenue itself is estimated at five aud a half millions of yen less than last year, principally on account of the reduction in the land tax, which for the six months, January till June, 1877, is calculated to entail a loss for the treasury of five millions.

The Herald gives the subjoined items of general news:—

It is reported that two architects have been engaged in England to teach their profession to students of the Kogakurio, and that the Preparatory School in connection with that establishment is shortly to be abolished, because the Minister of Public Works wishes the elementary education of youth to be confined to the Educational Department.

A novel method of advertising has been adopted by the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, situated at Ginza, Tokio, for every evening after dark there is a gas illumination in front of the building representing the name of the house (Nippo) in two Chinese seal characters, in a circular border; the effect is very pretty, and it attracts large crowds every night.

The Mikado, it is expected, will return from Kioto early in March, and it is thought by some people that the Empress will accompany him in the same ship, in which case Her Majesty would make her first sea voyage, and show an example to her countrywomen, whose horror of sea sickness is such that they can scarcely be persuaded to make a sea voyage, even when one would be materially advantageous to them.

Mr. Consul Russell Robertson has obtained leave of absence; his place will be temporarily filled by H.M.'s Acting Vice-Consul at Yedo, Mr. H. S. Wilkinson, while the duties of that Vice-Consulate will be discharged by Mr. W. G. Aston, Japanese Secretary to H.M.'s Legation.

Tokio has been visited by a series of fires. On the 1st Feb. the Gaimusho (Ministry of Foreign Affairs) was burnt down, and up till the evening of the 2nd seven more fires had happened.

The Tokio fu has brought an action for recovery of ground-rent against a British Tsukidji resident, who has refused to pay on the identical plea advanced by Captain Batchelder when he was sued. The action is still pending.

The volcano on Vries Island is in a state of eruption.

The agents of the different fire insurance companies established in Yokohama have held a meeting to concert measures for lessening the risks incurred by insuring buildings of faulty construction.

An American citizen, a naturalised Englishman, a Dane, and a Swede have been imprisoned upon a charge of making counterfeit Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank $500 notes, and trying to pass the same.

The uncertainty with regard to the state of affairs in Eastern Europe has had a very depressing influence on our export market. Our import market has also been very dull, as customary, however, at this time of the year, when the China New Year's holidays are close at hand.

YOKOHAMA, FEB. 10.

Not a stick of the Foreign-office is left standing. In one hour on the 1st February, afternoon, the magnificent Chikuzen Yasiki, formerly the abode of Kuroda, was burnt to the ground. The Foreign Affairs Department acquired the compound and buildings and established their offices and their right years ago. A few weeks since some alterations were made in a part of the building intended for a Conference Hall. The new rooms were fitted with European furniture, and, alas, foreign grates and chimneys; and in one of the latter a beam was left, which ignited; thence the flames spread to the building, which it was found impossible to save. Owing, however, to the fact of the fire taking place in the day time, and the willing promptness of the officials and firemen, all the archives and documents and much of the furniture were preserved.

More changes in the very limited journalistic world here. Mr. C. D. Moss, for four years one of the managing proprietors of the Japan Gazette, has gone out of the business.

The Silk market has experienced another fall, of about $100 per bale. I almost fell inclined to envy the silk men the pleasant state of excitement in which they must live. I wonder if they might not almost as well be "punting" at the now, alas! no more, tables of Hombourg or Baden Baden. If this oscillating state of things continues the history of some of the speculators will be as eventful as that of Garcia of famous trente et quarante memory.

OSAKA AND HIOGO.

The Hiogo News says:— His Excellency the Minister of Public Works and Chief Commissioner of Railways gave a railway banquet at the Shinseifu, Osaka, on the 5th inst., at which the members of the foreign and native staff, and the representatives of the foreign and native press, who had participated in the opening ceremony were present. The above paper states that a serious accident happened on board the French ironclad Atalante, during the firing of a salute on the railway opening ceremony. One man had both arms blown off, and another lost his thumb.

The Hiogo News publishes the following address, delivered by Mr. Nathan J. Newwitter, United States' Consul for these ports, and President of the Hiogo Municipal Council, to his Majesty the Mikado:—

"The pleasant and honoured duty of welcoming your Majesty to this section of your Empire, and to greet your Majesty in behalf of the Hiogo Municipality and its residents, representing all nations, has devolved upon me. In offering your Majesty sincere congratulations on your safe arrival from the pleasant visit and sojourn at the Western capital, the historical cities and beautiful homes of your brave, honoured, and heroic ancestors, I but interpret the feelings of the foreign community of Hiogo when, in their name, I tender you a cordial welcome.

"I have reason to know that your Majesty's visit to Kioto, Osaka, Nara and Hiogo, and the days you have sojourned in the midst of your people, has added joy and inspired your people with patriotic impulses, and the demonstrations with which you have been received is but a proof of a people's love, fidelity and loyalty. The history of all ages has from time to time recorded the glory of their Rulers, but none will appear brighter on the pages of the world's history than that of your Majesty's Empire, powerful and majestic now as well as centuries ago, and progressive to a degree which must redound in continued national honour and glory. It is a source of pleasure to those who from foreign shores have made your Majesty's land their home, who have watched the prosperity of your people and that progress and glory amongst the nations of the world which your Majesty's Government has achieved in so brief a time, aided by your Majesty's personal efforts to promote the welfare of your people. Wishing your Majesty continued good health, and that your Majesty's reign may be happy and long continued, as well as marked by constant advancement in everything that will benefit your land and people, that peace and plenty essential to greatness and glory may ever surround your Majesty's Government and people."

CHINA.

PEKING.

The Gazette of the 7th January contains a memorial from the Taoutai of Chefoo, in which an effect of the stipulations of the Chefoo Convention, that greater courtesy shall be observed in official intercourse, is observable. The memorial relates the arrival of certain shipwrecked Liu-chiuan seamen, who had been saved by a British ship and handed over to the Taoutai by the British Consul. And it is satisfactory to note that the text, as printed in the Gazette, elevates the characters "Ying Kwoh" (British) in the manner required by due (Chinese) official courtesy.

Li Han-chang's narrative in the Peking Gazette on the 8th January, of his experiences on his way to take up the Governor Generalship of Szechuen, reads like an extract from a book of travels. He had to leave the river at Ichang, because the current was too strong in the gorges; the post-road was under water; so he had to take to the mountains, and these were deep in snow. When eventually he did reach Ch'eng-tu, he learned that his journey had been useless, as he had been appointed instead to the Viceroyalty of Hukwang, which he seems to think a decided improvement; though he would probably have preferred escaping the double journey. Altogether, this Mandarin has not been idle of late. From Nanking to Momein and back; and from Nanking to Ch'eng-tu during the winter and back immediately to Hankow, is a very fair amount of journeying for eighteen months—as travel goes in China.

TIENTSIN.

The North China Daily News correspondent writes that he hears from Laoling, in Shantung that corn cobs are being ground up and mixed with bran and other things as an article of food. There is nothing new concerning the refugees. Mr. Yun, who put alum into the gruel at the soup kitchens some time since, after being taken out of the prison, and placed in the keeping of the lictors, has again been remanded to prison, to await the Viceroy's judgment. An appeal to the Taoutai by the Fire Companies, made a few days ago, was of no avail.

It is stated that gas is to be introduced into the Tientsin native city by H.E. Li.

The benefit given for the friends of the poor sailor who was drowned realised about $100—a small enough sum certainly for the old people bereaved of a son, and left without regular support.

A considerable depression in silver has taken place of late, attributable, it is said, to the small amount of cash in the market, consequent on the falling off of business caused by the famine. The tael has not been so low before for a number of years.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 9th Feb.; the P. and O. mail from London Dec. 22 was received on the 5th Feb.

The Chinese regulations with reference to lekin still form the chief subject of public attention. The North China Daily News translates from the Sinpao a note issued by the Tsung-li Yamên, informing the Inspector-General of Customs of the arrangement for the exemption of foreign goods from lekin within the foreign Settlements; and that drawback certificates may in future be cashed at the option of the holder, and observes that the simplicity of the Yamên language contrasts with the elaborate regulations for throttling trade which the Taoutai has submitted for the approval of the Foreign Consuls. It is understood that it is likely the Chamber of Commerce will protest officially against these rules as tending to hamper and interfere with trade; and no doubt is entertained that they will be greatly simplified before they are put into execution. As a matter of fact, all the proposed stamping and marking are quite superfluous. Foreign goods are exempt from lekin within the Foreign Settlements, because they are foreign goods; and they are entitled to a transit pass when they go up country for the same reason—irrespective of any Customs mark. The Chinese in the Settlements were preparing for the New Year's holidays, and announcements have appeared of the intended closure of the public offices, banks, &c., during periods varying from three days to five. The Custom-house was to be closed and the shipment and delivery of cargo suspended on the 12th, 13th and 14th, and general business would not be transacted on the three following days. An amateur theatrical performance, in which ladies took part, has been given at the Lyceum Theatre; and is spoken of as a complete success. The proceeds were devoted in part to the Shanghai General Hospital and in part to the funds of the Amateur Dramatic Corps.

Another illustration of the cleverness with which the Chinese seize every opportunity which is presented of turning an honest penny, notwithstanding all that is said of their want of progressiveness, has been given in Shanghai, where some native speculators have started an omnibus for the accommodation of Chinese passengers, to run to and fro between the Shanghai Railway Station and the Little East Gate, the fare charged being 100 cash each way. It is already running on the Honan-road route, and appears to be well patronised, and the vehicle is nearly an exact copy of the railway carriages now in use. The interior is comfortably fitted up, and is provided with reflector lamps, a clock, and other conveniences. The omnibus is drawn by two ponies, and the driver and conductor are attired in a livery evidently a close copy of that worn by the railway officials, altogether presenting a neat and cleanly turn-out. If the adventure be successful, it is stated to be intended to build a number of similar vehicles, to ply on different routes.

The Sinpao (says the North China Herald) publishes some rules promulgated by Tseng Kwo-fan to prevent corrupt practices by yamen runners, which afford one more instance of the excellent theories of Chinese Government; but only to show again how wretchedly it fails in practice. The yamen runners, it is acknowledged, are guilty of many corrupt practices, "such as capturing a defendant and keeping him in prison without the knowledge of the mandarin; detaining a defendant in custody after he has been dismissed by the authorities, with a view to extorting a bribe; or conspiring with the plaintiff to kidnap the defendant, and present a petition against him." And to prevent all this—the dates and reasons of arrests and releases are required to be written on boards, to be hung outside the Magistrate's yamen.

We take the following from the Celestial Empire:— The brutal cruelties that were, and still continue to be inflicted by the local authorities upon the poor wretch who acted as middleman in the sale of land for the Woosung Railway, have been paralleled by tortures to which an unfortunate scholar—a bachelor of arts—has been subjected by the provincial authorities at Soochow. The unhappy offender in this case had acted in the capacity of middleman for an American mission at that city in leasing land, for which he was first deprived of his rank that he might be legally flogged. He was repeatedly and cruelly beaten, and imprisoned some fourteen months ago, and still suffers incarceration. His maintenance in prison, and the squeezes to which he has been subjected, have beggared him. Recently he lost, first, his aged father, and next, his only son, by death, and although ten highly respectable men petitioned for leave for him to perform one of the funeral rites, rendering themselves responsible for his safe return, that favour was refused. The effect of such transactions by mandarins on the people is obvious, and it is useless for the authorities to affect surprise when acts of violence on the part of the populace towards foreigners occur. The people know very well that the mandarins sympathise with them in their feeling of hostility towards us. It may be questioned if ever a riot has occurred in China that was not instigated by men in authority. When we recal to mind the proclamation which Viceroy Shen Pao-chen issued on his accession to office at Nanking, a document which was charged with expressions of goodwill towards foreigners, and which enjoined officers and people to abstain from unfriendly acts towards men from afar, we are surprised that acts like these should take place under his jurisdiction. It is still more matter of surprise if it is true, as we are assured is the case, that six months ago his Excellency was remonstrated with by the Shanghai American Consular authority, and that the despatch had been treated with contemptuous silence. We were not before aware that the officials of any foreign Power were so largely endowed with the quality of meekness which has been thus exhibited. However little commiseration may be felt for the literary graduate Dzen Pin-fu, or however indifferently the mission may be regarded, we should imagine that amour propre would disallow such viceregal snubbing. We shall be glad to be corrected if we have been misinformed on this point. It is a subject which we shall not lose sight of.

There is a report that a well-known Chinese banker in Shanghai is attempting to negotiate a loan of five million taels with one of the foreign banks, the object in view being the defrayment of expenses incident to the campaign in Kansuh and the outlying provinces. Money is urgently required; and this bears out the rumour which reached us a short time ago from Peking, that extensive operations are being contemplated as soon as the frost breaks up.

We call the attention of our readers to some articles which have appeared in the Shen-pao (of the 1st and 3rd inst.) with regard to Chinese combinations at auctions. The Chinese, as everybody is doubtless well aware, often take advantage of their being the only attendants at auctions of piece goods and damaged merchandise, by settling beforehand the price they wish to give; and then, when they have succeeded in purchasing at their own figure, they put up the goods again, and divide the profit between all the members of the syndicate. Complaints which have lately reached the Chinese through the German Consul have induced the Taoutai to interfere, and the Shen-pao of this week contains a proclamation from Ch'en Fu-ch'ing (of the Mixed Court) condemning all such combinations as illegal.

NINGPO.

The little community at this port keeps up its reputation as one of the most active in China, in the pursuit of information concerning the natives, and in literary pursuits generally. The "Winter Evening Lectures" are going on with success. On Friday evening, Feb. 2, the Rev. Frederick Galpin lectured, taking for his subject, "Chinese Wit and Humour." The lecturer exhibited and explained a number of those ingenious acrostics, anagrams, charades, &c., of which Chinese literary men are so fond; and kept the audience in high good humour by relating a variety of comical anecdotes and whimsical stories illustrative of Chinese facetiousness in general. Mr. W. M. Cooper, H.B.M.'s Consul, in proposing a vote of thanks, congratulated the lecturer on having acquired so surprising a fund of entertaining matter respecting the humourous side of the Chinese character.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald of January 25 states that it is rumoured Ting Futai proposes to erect a telegraph line in Formosa, between the principal coast towns of the island. It is also stated that Mr. Tuck Suey has been entrusted by the Provincial Treasurer with the delicate task of raising about Tls. 2,000,000 on loan. It is reported that the new Chinese gunboats Alpha and Beta are shortly to be transferred to Tientsin. At present they are kept in excellent order at Pagoda Anchorage by a select crew—decks washed regularly, brass work cleaned thoroughly, and guns polished until they resemble mirrors. But as for roughly handling the twenty-six ton guns—never! The Celestials are, it is whispered, afraid of them. In fact the entire business of supplying the Chinese with ships and weapons is a sham, in which we believe that the poor mandarins are the scapegoats. Children must learn to walk before they can run. Talk about peaceably expelling foreigners!—the latter find it too good a trade, and therefore will not retire so long as China shows herself such an exceptionally good customer.

The value of the telegraph as a means of detecting crime has been fairly demonstrated within the limits of this port. A Chinaman bought from a foreign hong about $3,000 worth of opium, for which he tendered a certain number of native bank notes which on presentation for payment were declared to be forgeries. Meantime, an order had been issued to deliver the drug at Pagoda Anchorage, and though the would-be purchaser made every effort to obtain it, he was too late—thanks to the telegraph—by about one minute.

We hear that the Mamoi Arsenal authorities have been compelled to partially suspend operations through lack of funds.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 15th Feb.; the French mail from London Dec. 29 arrived out on the 9th Feb., and the following P. and O. mail of Jan. 5 was received on the 13th Feb.

The yearly general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce took place on the 12th February, when several matters of importance were discussed. Among them were the Blockade question, the opening of new ports under the Chefoo Conventions, the Sooloo question, postal rates, &c. More than usual spirit appears to have been infused into the discussion, especially with reference to the Blockade question, a protest being made against Sir Brooke Robertson being appointed a member of the Commission to report upon the subject. The Chairman in his speech stated that it appeared that the Hoppo of Canton levied on all goods coming to the Colony an export duty according to the native tariff, and also an export duty according to the foreign tariff.

The sudden disappearance of Mr. R. P. Webster and Mr. C. Rowe, in the employ of the Local Government, seems, as the details have become known, to have caused considerable sensation in the colony. The two gentlemen, who so rapidly decamped to happier climes, were employed in connection with the public store of gunpowder, and the China Mail gives the following somewhat startling account of the affair:—

It would seem that Hong Kong has had a sort of gunpowder plot all to itself during the last few months. The object of the plotters, however, is said to have been entirely different to that of the memorable scheme of the 5th of November, 1605. As the information in our possession is somewhat meagre, owing to the fact that steps are now being taken to follow up the track of certain runaways, we cannot vouch for the absolute accuracy of the statements here made. It seems, at all events, that the system under which gunpowder stores in Hong Hong have been regulated of late must be open to serious objection. Mr. R. P. Webster, formerly in charge of the Powder Hulk in Yau-mah-tee Bay, disappeared some time since without sending in his resignation; Mr. C. Rowe, one of the cargo-boat inspectors, temporarily employed at the Powder Depot, absconded not long since under similarly cloudy circumstances; and Mr. T. Coales, assistant foreman of the Ordnance Store Department, having taken a hasty departure for Shanghai, was brought back and charged before the magistrate a short time ago for desertion, under the terms of the new Mutiny Act. These incidents considered together would seem to imply that our stock of gunpowder has not for some time back been in the safest hands; but as yet, we repeat, there is nothing definite to communicate on this subject beyond the rumour that a large amount of public powder appears to be unaccounted for. Some persons who think they know say that the quantity missing is much larger than would be credited. Now, we do not know whether this alleged embezzlement of stores has been practised upon powder belonging specially to the naval, the military, or the colonial authorities—i.e., whether the explosive was handled on shore or afloat; but what appears to be a generally received probability is that gunpowder must have been pretty freely and stealthily handled to enable the thieves to get clear of so large a stock. The dangers which the working of such a loosely-hanging system—of which inadequate regulations the rascally manipulators appear to have taken full advantage—must have imposed upon this Colony are so uncomfortably huge that we prefer to pass on to congratulation at our escape.

Referring to the loss of the steamer Singapore, Captain Peake, belonging to the Eastern Australian Mail Steam Company, on a sunken reef off one of the islands in the Cumberland group, which was briefly reported by last mail, the above named paper adds the following particulars:—We find that the group of islands named is scattered around in the vicinity of lat. 20·40 S., long. 149·20 E., off the Queensland Coast, opposite Repulse Bay, and between Port Denison (on the north) and Port Bowen (on the south). As the unfortunate steamer left Hong Kong on the 15th ult., via Singapore, she must have been on her downward trip; and it will be matter for congratulation that the intention at one time entertained was abandoned by Sir Arthur Kennedy of taking passage by this vessel. The mishap, coming as it does so soon after the catastrophe in which the Queensland was wrecked, will be a serious blow to the Company; but this popular service has been well appreciated, and it is to be hoped that the energetic conductors of the new line will successfully maintain the regularity of their communication in spite of those serious difficulties. The passenger list of the Singapore from this port was—Mr. Ronald McDonald for Sydney, and 453 Chinese for Cooktown. Of course the Singapore list would have to be added to this.

The half-yearly report of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, to be presented to the meeting on the 15th February, and of which particulars have already been given by telegram, is published.

The report of the China Fire Insurance Company, to be presented on the 16th February, gives a statement of the Company's accounts made up to the 31st December, 1876.

The Net Profit for the year 1875 is shown to be as follows :—

Balance at credit of working account as per last report	$79,371.79
Deduct losses and claims paid in 1876 ...	11,662.52
Net Profit	$67,709.27

Of this amount the directors propose to apply $22,394.77 to the payment of a bonus of 20 per cent. to the contributing shareholders of 1875, and add the balance to the Reserve Fund, which will thus be increased to $339,787.30.

The half-yearly report of the directors of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock has been published. The gross earnings for the six months amount to $139,849.06, and the net profits to $14,961.18, which with $15,533.28, the balance from last account, represents $30,494.46. It is proposed that no dividend be declared, but that $15,000 be paid in reduction of the loan from the Hong Kong Fire Insurance Company, and the balance carried to new account. The report notes the sale of the Whampoa property to the Chinese Government for $80,000.

The annual report of the Hong Kong Fire Insurance Company has been issued, and shows a net profit for 1875, of $190,000, and for 1876 a balance of $244,445 at credit of working account. The profit for 1875, is divided as follows—30 per cent. to reserve, 20 per cent. bonus, to contributing shareholders, and 50 per cent. dividend to general shareholders. The reserve fund is increased to $564,202.

From the China Mail we take the following items of general news :—The annual meeting of the members and seatholders of Union Church was held on the evening of the 9th February, Rev. James Lamont in the chair. The Report of the Committee and the Treasurer's accounts were read, accepted and ordered to be printed. Messrs. A. Falconer, Noble and Dickie were elected members of Committee of Management for the year ; and Messrs. D. R. Crawford and J. Fairbairn were re-elected Secretary and Treasurer respectively.

We have received, and will notice at greater length, later on, the first part of Dr. Eitel's "Chinese Dictionary in the Cantonese Dialect." The Rev. Doctor says in the Preface to the work that "The basis of this Dictionary, for the written language, is the Imperial Dictionary of Kanghi combined with the vocabularies appended to the several volumes of Dr. Legge's edition of the Chinese Classics, and for the spoken language Dr. S. Wells Williams's Tonic Dictionary of the Chinese language in the Canton Dialect." As the author says, he "has prepared what will be found to be an essentially new Dictionary on the basis of the works published by Kanghi, Dr. Legge. and Dr. Williams." The author hopes it will be found to be practically useful; and we are sure that it will.

By the steamer Conquest, which arrived a few days ago, we learn that the French gunboat Aspic was lost, about the 14th January, on the coast to the Southward of Haiphong. No lives were lost.

The local Government Gazette has the following appointments by H.E. the Governor :—Thomas Middleton Leatherburrow (provisionally) to be in charge of the Gunpowder Depot, and Jose L. de Sa to be Acting Assistant Inspector of Junks, vice Webster and Rowe, dismissed as absent without leave. Hon. George Phillippo, Attorney-General, to be a Trustee of St. John's Cathedral. It is stated that Mr. Plunkett has declined the post of Registrar of the Supreme Court, and that Mr. Huffam, the present Deputy Registrar will be appointed to it.

It is stated that Mr. Consul Davenport will shortly proceed to Wenchow, to complete arrangements for opening that port to trade.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

MANILA.

The Sooloo correspondent of the Diario de Manila states that the Moros made a night attack on a Government cattle pen at the new settlement there, but were beaten off by the troops, leaving one of their number dead, and carrying off many wounded, to judge from the pools of blood found. Several head of cattle were killed and two Spaniards wounded. On the following morning the dead Moro was picked up and hung on a tree as a terror to others, after his arms, consisting of a kris, shield, and spear had been taken possession of. The building operations going on in the settlement were much impeded by rain and want of workmen and materials. The streets marked out have been lighted and named. On the 1st January last Colonel Paulin assumed the Governorship of Sooloo. Since the correspondent's previous letter, four Moros, three Moro women and one Chinaman had surrendered and submitted to the Spaniards. The following is a translation of a portion of the correspondent's letter :—

The soil of Sooloo cannot be better than it is for any kind of agricultural enterprise ; the sweet potato, the staple food of the natives, yields here astonishingly heavy crops. The coffee produced is excellent, and may, perhaps, vie with the famed sorts from Silam and Pollok. On this island the sugar-cane contains such an abundance of juice, and grows so well, that it may become one of the articles of export with the best results. Grain is obtainable in surprising abundance ; it is sufficient to say that maize gives four crops a year, which happens nowhere else. It is the same with fruits. The mangosteen, the mango, the orange, and the lime are delicious, and the first-named may be exported according to the quantity produced, because it grows nowhere else in the Philippine Archipelago than here. All this productiveness is due to the excellent and unimprovable nature of the soil, which abounds much in the vegetable earth styled humus ; besides this, the soil may be cultivated with great ease, and at little expense.

BORNEO.

SARAWAK.

From the Sarawak Gazette of the 15th Feb. we learn that an expedition by the Dutch Resident of Pontianak against the Dyaks of Upper Kapuas has been completely successful, and all the inland villages which supplied head-taking parties were destroyed.

The Gazette publishes reports from the Residents of Rejang, Muka, and of Batang Lupar and Sarabas, but they contain nothing of any particular interest. Small-pox was disappearing throughout the principality. Favourable reports continue to be received of the new Gambier plantations, and the Gazette anticipates a course of prosperity throughout the year.

JAVA.

The following is translated from a Batavia newspaper by the Straits Times :—

Warlike operations in Atchin are again concluded for the present. Our troops have gained a success which is, fortunately, not dearly bought. Instead of a campaign on a grand scale, the operations have been limited to occupying a couple of important positions on the coast, so that we are now masters of the coast line from Krung Raya and Kwala Loh to Gighen. From the telegrams made public by the Government in the Javasche Courant or forwarded by it to the newspapers here, it appaars that our troops, on the 26th of January last, landed at two places, Krung Raya and Qwala Loh, where no resistance was offered, the enemy being apparently surprised. At Krung Raya no place was found suitable for a fort. Colonel van der Heyden took up a position at half an hour's march from Kwala Loh. According to our correspondent at Atchin, the bivouac was twice fired upon during the night. On the 27th of January a column marched from Kotta Rajah across the mountains to effect a junction with Van der Heyden's column ; the latter in the meantime had reconnoitred the neighbourhood, and found Campong Lamnga strongly garrisoned. The enemy offered no resistance in the mountains, and the columns effected their junction on the 28th. By this the panic which had already set in among the Atchinese became greater, and they evacuated Lamnga. On the 30th our troops marched up to Lambada, the principal fort of Tuku Paya, from which the 8th battalion had formerly been repulsed. The resistance here was great. The place was taken at the cost of four privates killed and twelve wounded ; twelve cannon were captured. On the 31st General Diemont returned. Altogether there were captured three schooners, twenty-two cannon, fourteen barrels of cartridges, several bags of gunpowder, and weapons. Further particulars are still wanting. The state of health of the expeditionary troops was favourable, but this cannot be said of the garrison troops at Atchin.

The harbour works at Tanjong Priok have now been begun. The technical and administrative personnel have been appointed, and the works have been begun at Tanjong Priok, Pulu Merah, and Batavia, so far as they relate to getting everything in readiness for the reception of the machinery, &c., to be forwarded from the Netherlands.

22nd Feb.; the P. and O. mail from London Jan. 19 was received on the 19th Feb. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

There is much speculation as to the government of the colony. The most probable arrangement is said to be that during the absence of Sir William Jervois in Australia, which is expected not to extend over six months, Colonel Anson will again become Administrator of the Government, Captain Shaw going from Malacca to Penang to take his place, and the Auditor-General, Mr. C. J. Irving, becoming Lieutenant-Governor of Malacca, his brother, Mr. E. A. Irving, acting as Auditor-General. It is said, however, that Sir William will be longer than six months in Australia, that on his return here he will at once proceed to Europe in any case, that there is little probability of his returning again to the Straits, and that his successor will be appointed at once. Who this successor will be nobody has any idea. There is a wild sort of rumour that Sir Henry Ord will return for a couple of years. Mention is also made of the name of Sir Arthur Phayre, the present popular Governor of Mauritius, and who was Chief Commissioner of Burmah some years ago. [Sir Wm. Jervois will resume his post on return from Australia.—ED. L. and C. T.]

A meeting of the Legislative Council is to be held for the first reading of three Bills—one authorising the raising of £100,000 in Debentures of £100 by the Crown Agents in London at 5 per cent. for the purpose of covering the advances already made to the Native States and to provide funds for a police force, roads, and other works in Perak, as well as funds for certain public works in the Colony proper; another Bill for the protection of Chinese immigrants; and the third for putting down crimping and protecting emigrants.

Telegrams from London announce the appointment of Mr. Hugh Low as Resident of Perak. Further, it has been announced that Mr. Paul relieves Captain Speedy in Larut, and that Captain Speedy is to take charge of the Residency at Bandar Bahru, on the Perak river, which is to be removed further down the river to Durian Sabatang, where Sultan Abdullah used to reside. The list of changes as yet announced or known is completed by the appointment of Mr. W. H. Wormsley, Inspector of Immigrants, to act as Coroner in Province Wellesley; of Mr. Noel Penrose Trevenen, who has passed in Malay, to be Acting Inspector of Schools, and of Mr. Frank Oliver, to be Emigration Agent for the Straits in Negapatam.

The Chamber of Commerce has had its attention occupied for some little time back with the regulations in force in the territories of H. H. the Maharajah of Johore for the delivery of gambier, pepper, and other produce as far as they affect the flow of trade to Singapore. The Maharajah has given satisfactory assurances that the regulations will be modified in so far as they place any impediment in the way of freedom of delivery of produce.

A site having been very liberally granted for the purpose by H. E. the Governor on the west side of Fort Fullerton, next Johnstone's Pier, it has been resolved to erect a suitable building for the Chamber of Commerce, the Exchange, and a town Club, at a cost of $25,000 to $30,000, to be raised by subscription, and a committee of the members of the Chamber and of the Exchange has been appointed to carry out the necessary arrangements.

The report of the Directors of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company, for the last half of 1876, is to be submitted to a general meeting on the 27th Feb. A dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum is proposed for the half-year.

A general meeting of the Sporting Club was held, when the programme for the Spring Meeting was submitted by the stewards, and adopted. There will be three days' races beginning on the 3rd April.

On the anniversary of the birthday of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands the Dutch men-of-war Sambas and Amboina, the German men-of-war Elisabeth and Vineta, the English man-of-war Magpie, and the colonial steamer Pluto, all were decorated with bunting, and at noon a Royal salute was fired from most of them in honour of the day.

His Highness the Maharajah of Johore intends to leave for England in a few months.

The sale of the sugar estate known as Tassik, in Province Wellesley, is announced for July.

Mr. Logan has resigned his appointment of Solicitor-General in consequence of the refusal of the Home Government to permit an increase of salary being given by the Local Government.

An interesting report on Perak, by Mr. Adamson, will be given in our next.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had been exceedingly quiet. In Yarns, at the commencement of the period under review, a fair enquiry existed for the lower and medium spinnings of 16/24; 27/32 also meeting with a little attention, but all counts closed weaker, with scarcely any demand. Indigo Shirtings and Velvets had been sold at lower rates, and Turkey Reds were almost neglected. Woollens were very quiet; Blankets, however, being fairly saleable. Metals continued extremely depressed. Stocks of manufactured Iron were accumulating, and dealers showed little desire to enter in transactions, even at the lowest range of quotations.

NAGASAKI.—Only trifling transactions had occurred at irregular prices. Cotton Yarn 16-24 ruled at $85 to $90; Grey Shirtings 8¼ lbs., $2, 7 lbs. $1.75; T-Cloths, 7 lbs., $1.65; Turkey Reds, 2¾ lbs., $2; Long Ells 12 lbs., Red $8.75; Black $8.25; Nail Rod Iron $3.20 to $3.70.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write:—During the week now under review further investments in Manchester goods have been made by local traders in the anticipation of an improvement in prices so soon as the spring demand sets in; beyond these speculative purchases no business worthy of note has taken place; indeed, owing to the near approach of the Chinese New Year most of the dealers have returned to their homes, so that our market may be considered as virtually closed, and we shall consequently suspend our weekly report until business recommences after the holidays.

SHANGHAI.—Business in imports during the week had been limited, all private enquiry being suspended in consequence of the near approach of China New Year settlements and holidays. Still a fair quantity of goods had been forced at public auction, where dealers had paid current prices for the Cotton fabrics offered, principally Grey Shirtings. Woollens were quoted a shade lower all round. Sales 35,000 pieces Grey Shirtings at about former rates. 1,000 pieces T-Cloths, 7 lbs. Mexicans, at Tls. 1.17 to 1.23 per piece. 1,000 pieces Jeans at Tls. 1.51½. 1,600 pieces Drills, 14 lbs. common, at Tls. 1.82½. 1,420 pieces Camlets at Tls. 12.25 to 13.40 per piece. 540 pieces Spanish Stripes at Tls. 0.52 to 0.54½ per yard, and 500 pieces CPH Long Ells at Tls. 6.60 per piece. The quotations for Metals were nominally lower, a few lots had been offered at reduced rates, but the bulk of stocks was virtually out of the market, except at an advance on the current prices.

HONG KONG.—A fair amount of business had been transacted during the fortnight, generally at lower prices for Piece Goods, but steady rates for Yarns. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—The inquiry for Nos. 16/24 English Yarns has continued, and purchases have been freely made at previous rates; the supply on offer at the close is light, and is firmly held. Bombay kinds are also in strong hands, but the sales have been moderate in extent. Nos. 28/32 are somewhat inquired for, but Nos. 38/42 are not wanted at the moment. Piece Goods: The usual Chinese New Year's holidays have latterly interfered with business, but the market has been comparatively steady, and on the whole fair settlements have been made. Grey and White Shirtings and T-Cloths have all been in demand, and prices show but little change. The stock of Drills is small, and holders are firm. Woollens: Dealers generally have supplied their wants, and the market is now quiet and weaker for most fabrics. Metals: Lead is quiet, and L.B. can be bought for future arrival at $7.40 per picul. There is nothing doing in Steel or Tin; and at the close Tin Plates are not inquired for. Quicksilver declined at one time to $61.25, but is now steady at $64 to 65 per picul. No sales of Yellow Metal have been reported. Coals: The arrivals have been 10,320 tons, including 5,770 tons of Cardiff. No settlements are being made at present, and prices are nominal.

CANTON.—Quotations for Lead were unaltered, and no business had been effected during the fortnight. The stock was estimated at 1,200 piculs.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Houghton and Co.'s Circular says:—Our market is very quiet at the moment, caused partly by the season of the year, and also on account of our Chinese dealers being busy with their New Year holidays. This will continue, we expect, for about a month longer, when, after that, we look for a steady improvement setting in, which we trust will be permanent, as all import houses are steadily holding for an advance.

SINGAPORE.—A fair business had been done, notwithstanding the intervention of the Chinese New Year holidays. Prices of most articles were well maintained. The Metal market continued without improvement. The market for Coals had become weaker owing to heavy arrivals.

PENANG.—The market remained very quiet, and business, which had been almost suspended during the Chinese New Year holidays, was only just being resumed. Transactions in any class of goods had been limited.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—During the interval the market had been dull and dragging, settlements for the period amounting to 2,800 piculs: stocks were very light. Prices rather hardened towards the end of January, but closed weak at former quotations. Export from 1st May to date 14,537,444 lbs., against 17,369,279 lbs. in corresponding period of last season.

NAGASAKI.—Holders had shown more inclination to meet the views of buyers, and some 1,500 piculs had changed hands at $2 to 2.50, reduction on former quotations. Stocks were increasing, and a further decline was expected. Quotations were:—Common to medium $6 to 8; medium to fine $9 to 12.50.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There had been a very trifling business done during the week, the settlements comprising 200 chests Oopack at Tls. 12½, 200 chests Ningchow, 990 chests Hohow, at Tls. 12½ to 14; total, 1,300 chests. Something over half of the settlements had been for New York. Teamen, as they saw the stock gradually melting away, were firm in their demands; on the other hand, exchange was so high, and prospects for common teas showed so little improvement, that buyers were not disposed to raise their offers. Green: There had been an active demand for these kinds, the week's settlements being 3,500 half-chests Teenkai at Tls. 26¼ to 29½, 8,000 half-chests Moyune at Tls. 26 to 30½, 700 half-chests Fychow at Tls. 24¼ to 24½, 800 half-chests Pingsuey at Tls. 28½ to 30; total, 13,000 half-chests. The great majority of the settlement had been for the New York market, whence there was news by wire of a rise from 2 to 3 cents. all round. The teamen generally had made their arrangements to "pass New Year," and were less eager to sell; the market was therefore firm, and teas were dearer than they were a week previously. Comparing the settlements with last year's at the same date, makes the prices about Tl. 1 to 1½ lower this year; but as exchange is fully 7 per cent. higher than last year, there is no gain in laying down cost. The export to date to the two countries showed a deficiency of 2,000,000 lbs.; but the stock was fully 2,000,000 lbs. larger, while the quantity afloat was about the same.

FOOCHOW.—Business for the season appeared to have closed, no settlements having been reported. The stock consisted of about 1,000 chests Congou, the bulk of which would probably be carried over till next season, as at recent prices Teamen are said to have been heavy losers.

AMOY.—Nothing of special interest had transpired, and the season was considered at an end. The barque Fidelio for London, would take about 333,000 lbs. Tea and the steamer Glenroy, about 80,000 lbs. for the same place. Upwards of 700,000 lbs. of Ooloongs had been sent by Coast steamer to Hong Kong for transhipment there to the sailing vessels Unanima and Ceylon for New York.

CANTON.—But little business had been effected owing to the approach of China New Year, and scarcely any stock remained upon the market.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had been greatly interfered with by the tenor of advices from Europe, and a very heavy decline, of about $100 per picul, that had taken place on this market, has failed to produce any response from buyers. The best descriptions of Hanks were very scarce and fully half of the stock consists of Oshius, which were altogether neglected. Filature Silks had fallen but slightly in value. Settlements from 1st July to date 19,250 bales against 10,700 in corresponding period of last season. Stock 2,000 bales against 700 bales at same date last year.

SHANGHAI.—There had been nothing of importance doing. Prices had declined Tls. 20 to 25 per picul, but without bringing forward buyers and the small shipments which were going forward were mostly on joint account with natives.—Tsatlees: Very few settled, and it was difficult so give quotations. Woman Chop No. 2 offering at Tls. 500 (24s. 8d.), Common Market Tsatlee quoted Tls. 440 (21s. 9d.) Tayseams had been forced for sale and fair 9/12 moss was to be had at Tls. 280 (14s.). Low class Laeyangs were worth Tls. 270 to 280 (13s. 6d. to 14s.), and common Keahings Tls. 280 to 300 (14s. to 15s.)—Rereels had formed a considerable portion of the fortnight's business, some 600 bales having been settled at Tls. 480 to 580 (23s. 8d. to 28s. 6d.) for R.R. Haineens and Tls. 490 to 570 (24s. 2d. to 28s. 1d.) for R.R. Tsatlees. Native consignments and joint account shipments account for most of the transactions reported, very few buyers being on the market.

Settlements for the fortnight ...	1,500	against	2,500
Total settlements to date	65,500	„	62,500
Stock estimated at	16,500	„	3,500

CANTON.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Almost complete inactivity has prevailed during the fortnight, chiefly owing to the unwillingness of holders to part with their stocks at prices offered by foreigners. We have therefore nothing of interest to report regarding this staple, and do not anticipate that any business will be transacted during the next two weeks, as the annual native festivities will extend over nearly the entire interval. It is currently reported that the result of the year's business shows a heavy loss to the native dealers in the city, and generally in the country. The profits made by them during the early port of the season have not been sufficient to meet the losses consequent upon the subsequent decline in values, and the gains from the rapid advance in prices appear to have remained with the producers only. The demand for re-reels has fallen off and no contracts are reported. Stocks remain as previously advised.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NAGASAKI.—Tobacco was steady at previous quotations; settlements 2,800 bales at $4.50 to 7 per picul. Wax had been in demand for shipment to Hong Kong at previous rates. The stock had been reduced to 300 boxes, but arrivals were expected. Camphor was out of stock; arrivals could be purchased at $14.50 to 14.75. Rice was without alteration. Coal was in better supply, and exhibited a downward tendency.

HONG KONG.—Camphor had further declined, and last purchases of the Formosa article were reported at $16 per picul, packed, which figure was considered the current quotation. Japan Camphor was quoted $17 per picul nominal, as the stock on offer was very small. Gamboge was worth $49 per picul, and Vermilion $33 per case, nominal. At Macao the nominal quotations were Aniseed Oil $190 to 191 per picul; Cassia Oil, $99 per picul; and Aniseed Stars $22.50 per picul. No business was being done, owing to the Native New Year holidays.

CANTON.—Cassia: No settlements reported; holders asking $11.80 to $11.90 for cases and $11.50 to $11.60 for mats per picul, refusing to accept any lower prices. Stocks 5,000 piculs. Cassia Buds: No stocks: one sale of 70 piculs at $17.75 per picul had cleared the market. It was considered very doubtful if any further supply would be received this season. No business had transpired in any article of general merchandise, with the exception of a limited inquiry for common Matting.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Houghton and Co. report as follows:—Iron, Swedish, flat bars assorted, could be placed at f.12 to 12½ per picul; do. English do., is quiet at f.7¾ to 8 per picul; do. Hoop is very seldom inquired for; do. Square and Round we value at f.7¾ to 8 per picul; do. Sheet is quiet at f.11 per picul; do. Galvanised Corrugated is saleable at f.20 per picul; Zinc Sheet: Arrivals of this continue to take place, and we cannot quote the article now at over f.26 to 27 per picul; Sheet Lead we value at f.21 per picul, and dull at that; Pig Lead is in no inquiry at present; Tin Plates are not required for the moment; Copper Sheathing continues firm, but cannot be quoted higher than f.76 per picul; Iron Nails are quite neglected; Coals: West Hartley could be placed at about f.25 per ton, while Scotch are difficult of sale—Australian were lately sold at f.15½ per ton; Gunpowder: The importation of this is virtually prohibited at the moment by the Government only allowing 50 lbs. to be received at one time, while even to get this a great many official red tape forms have to be gone through.

SINGAPORE.—A falling off had occurred in the amount of business doing, partly attributable to the intervention of the Chinese New Year holidays, and partly to the unfavourable reports concerning the Home market. There had been little, if any, alteration in values.

PENANG.—Both Tin and Pepper had moved to some extent, purchases being mostly for the country trade. Other articles had not been offered in much quantity. Tin: Market opened at $19 per picul, but under influence of heavy arrivals and lower quotation from home prices declined to $18.70. Latterly prices had hardened to $19.15 to $19.20 as offered by purchasers for Europe. Stock remaining in Bazaar unsold amounted to piculs 3,350. Black Pepper: A good demand for India and China purchases of West Coast had been made at $7.82½ to $7.95 to extent of 2,500 piculs. A small lot of Atchin had been also taken for India at $7.60, leaving market bare. White Pepper: A small purchase at $19.50 is the only transaction noted. Basket Sugar had further declined; purchases after mail left were made at $3.40, and latterly a small lot had been yielded at $3.30. Penang No. 1 large sales at $6.40.

THE WORKING MEN'S MEETING ON OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

On Thursday, March 22nd, a public meeting, convened under the auspices of the Anti-Opium Society and its supporters, with the object of organising a more formal meeting to elicit an expression of the views of the working-classes as to our relations with China, took place at No. 337, Strand. Among those present were Prof. Beesley, Mr. Richards, M.P., Mr. Chesson, &c., &c. A number of working-men had been expected to be present, but after waiting some time and such not proving to be the case, the Rev. Mr. Turner secretary to the Anti-Opium Society, suggested the adjournment of the meeting; upon which Mr. Mottershead suggested that if a more suitable evening were chosen, and steps were taken to inform the working-men of the object of the meeting, no doubt there would be a larger attendance.

After some further conversation, Mr. Richards, M.P., was unanimously voted to the chair, and in opening the proceedings he said that he understood that the object of the proposed meeting was to consider our relations with China, and that the reason for taking them into consideration at this moment was that for the first time since we had had any relations with that country China had sent envoys to represent her here of high character and great official distinction, and the promoters of the present movement were anxious that some steps should be taken to demonstrate the impression which this had made, and to show the desire which was entertained that our relations in future should be such that the two countries could live in peace instead of in mutual suspicion and distrust as hitherto. That such had been the case until now it was impossible to deny. What, then, had been the cause of this? In part, it was no doubt attributable to the national exclusiveness of the Chinese and their desire to live at a distance from other nations whom they regarded as barbarians; but what we had done in other places was not calculated to remove these prejudices. For instance, in India, we had gradually crept on in a policy of aggressiveness until we had taken the whole of the country. But whatever the cause, no doubt the Chinese had not been inclined to court our friendship, and he must say that their experience during the last forty years was not of such a nature as to diminish, but was eminently calculated to increase their antipathy to us; as we had appeared before them chiefly as greedy and unscrupulous traders; as smugglers of opium; as the authors of three bloody and desolating wars; and the destroyers of their towns and the invaders of their capital. Such acts were not calculated to gain the friendship of any people; but he believed they had special cause, when looking at what we had done in India to feel hostility. So far as the real interests of this country were concerned, he believed Mr. Cobden had been right in maintaining that the country had been a material loser from this policy. Looking at the subject in its purely commercial aspect, the profits of the export trade hence had really only to be taken into account, because the Chinese were quite willing to send us their teas and silks without coercion, and if we set against these the cost of our Naval, Military, and Consular services, the result would be seen to be that instead of being gainers we were great national losers. But this was not all. We had introduced what all impartial witnesses admitted to be a deleterious drug, and this drug had brought demoralisation and death upon many in China. For his part, he thought the Opium trade one of the darkest blots on the national escutcheon, almost as bad as the slave-trade. He had often spoken against it before, and would always continue to lift up his voice against it. Twenty years ago an Anti-Opium Society had been formed, chiefly by the efforts of Mr. Joseph Sturges. He (Mr. Richards) acted as honorary secretary to that Society, but it was found impossible to arouse public attention or stimulate public feeling. Another association bearing the same name had now been formed, of which the Rev. Mr. Turner was secretary. Lord Shaftesbury had called attention to the subject in the House of Lords, and Sir Wilfrid Lawson and others had done so in the House of Commons. The matter had not been allowed to slumber, and the present was a good opportunity to bring pressure to bear upon the Government to cause them to reconsider their policy and to let the representatives of China know that at least a large body in this country repudiated responsibility as to the policy adopted in the past, and desired to clear the fair fame of England from the blot which had been cast upon it. He concluded by observing that there were many present who could give the meeting the advantage of their experience, and he called upon Professor Beesley for a few remarks.

Professor Beesley said that the difficulty had been that no class had ever identified itself with our policy in China. When the indemnity money was brought here a large crowd followed, expressing their pleasure at its having been obtained—a fact which proved that the working-classes were then inclined blindly to support the Government. He did, however, think such would be the case now. Enough was known on the subject to make those who guide the country more cautious. The fact that the report of the Grosvenor Mission was kept back showed that the Government was aware that there was now a party in the country whose opposition to the policy which was adopted might be expected, and which opposition they feared. The time had therefore come to obtain an expression of opinion from the working-classes, and if they were made acquainted with the facts connected with our intercourse with China it was impossible that they could be divided in their opinions on the subject. The present business he considered to be to organise a meeting, with a view of laying these facts before them; and it was certain that if the merits of the matter were known the promoters of the movement would obtain the support of the public, and this would enable the Chinese Envoys to take a much firmer tone than they could otherwise in negotiating with our Government. He considered that steps should be taken to get together a meeting of the working men of London.

Mr. Mottershead again addressed the meeting at some length, characterising the past policy of this country as "a murderous policy of forcing the Opium trade upon the Chinese," and arguing that this "truth" was not known, otherwise the strongest feeling would have been aroused. He attributed this policy to a "semi-military semi-official class, who were ever willing to plunge the country into difficulties, as they always contrived to gain by turmoil and aggression"—a class as much divided from the working classes as the priesthood of the Catholic Church. They were totally independent of our merchants, and did not care for our real commercial interests. He also animadverted upon the high-handed and bellicose policy of the late Lord Palmerston, which he considered had been the chief cause of the state of affairs which was now deplored. He was as anxious as any one that British prestige should be upheld, but this should be done only by benefiting the nations with whom they came into contact; and he trusted that a meeting would be held which would show that England was prepared to treat with justice nations who, if we believed our Christian faith, were, whatever their shortcomings our equals before God.

Dr. Badenoch, in seconding the proposal that a public meeting should be convened, suggested that it would be a suitable way to show the goodwill of the working-classes to the Chinese Envoys to invite those gentltmen to a banquet. This suggestion did not, however, appear to meet with much support.

A resolution was then passed that the committee should take the necessary steps to convene a public meeting for the expression of the opinion of the working-classes.

Professor Sheldon Amos suggested it would be advisable that the main facts connected with the history of our past relations with China should be placed before them meantime in a succinct and intelligible form.

Mr. Chesson read a letter from Sir Charles Dilke, in which he expressed a hope to be present, and stated that since his visit in 1868 he had taken great interest in China. There was one point in which he considered the Government of that country still bad, namely, that it still inflicted judicial torture. Mr. Chesson observed that until recently this had been the case in Japan, but that under more enlightened auspices torture had now been abolished, and it was found that justice could be better administered without it. He thought the present occasion would be a suitable one for some remarks to be made upon the coolie trade.

The meeting then separated.

AN IMPERIAL MUSEUM FOR THE COLONIES AND INDIA.

We are glad to notice that progress is being made with the project which we some time back advocated for the establishment of a Museum for the Colonies and India. A meeting was held on the 20th inst. at the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion-house, when the preliminary resolutions were passed, the site favoured by the meeting being that of Old Fife House, on the Victoria Embankment. The proposals are to be submitted to Government, and a deputation, headed by the Lord Mayor, to wait upon Lord Beaconsfield and ask for their support. So far the scheme seems likely to progress; but an unfortunate difficulty has been raised by Mr. Fawcett, M.P., who felt himself called upon to propose that no portion of the expenses connected with the institution should fall upon the Indian Revenue. The resolution, which he brought forward was not put to the meeting, the business being confined to the question of the principle of establishing the Museum; but it is to be feared that the idea of the Institution being a tax upon Indian resources is likely to become spread, in consequence of Mr. Fawcett's suggestion, which we observe is already warmly endorsed by the Daily News. Now, however tender those who undertake the protection of Indian interests may be upon the subject of revenue under the delicate circumstances at present existing, it is somewhat stretching a point to suggest that India should not contribute her quota towards a scheme of this kind, by which she will be one of those most largely benefited. The sum total of the cost of keeping up the establishment will probably be something like £10,000 a-year, and India's share of this sum is surely not sufficient to be taken into serious consideration against the obvious advantages which she will derive from the scheme being carried out. It is suggested that the Crown Agents of the various colonies by taking offices in the building might reduce the expenditure by about £2,500 a year, so that the total funds required will not be such as to open the door for any very grave consideration of their burdensomeness to any given Colony. It is clear that India and the Colonies will be much more directly the gainers by such an Institution than the home country, and if they should not bear all the expense it is at least reasonable that they should be willing to pay the lion's share.

Naval and Military.

Rumours are current as to the successors of Vice-Admiral Ryder on the China station and Rear-Admiral Macdonald on the East Indian station, but we know on good authority that pending the settlement of the Eastern question no changes will be decided on.

The Ringdove, double screw gun-vessel, Commander Singleton, arrived in Plymouth Sound on the 19th inst. from China, via the Suez Canal. She has been employed on that station for upwards of eight years, having been commissioned at Portsmouth in October, 1868, and recommissioned at Hong Kong in 1873. She is now at Portsmouth, where she will be paid off.

Rear-Admiral Lambert, with the Narcissus, Topaze, Newcastle, and Immortalité, from China, arrived at the Cape of Good Hope on the 16th ult.

Admiral Sir Edward Belcher,, K.C.B., died on the 18th inst., aged seventy-seven. He was one of the most distinguished scientific officers we have had in the Royal Navy, and had made various important surveys, in the Pacific, Behring Straits, and in the China Seas. He entered the navy in 1812. He was at the battle of Algiers, on board the Superb, and fought in her as signal midshipman. After the action he was selected by Lord Exmouth to make a plan of the batteries. In March, 1817, he passed a successful examination at the Royal Naval College, and obtained the rank of lieutenant in July, 1818, while serving with the Salisbury, 50, in Jamaica. After leaving Algiers he was employed off the West Coast of Africa against the slave-trade. He served nearly two years in the West Indies, and in 1824, he volunteered to accompany Captain Beechey in the Blossom on his scientific voyage to the Pacific, when he acted as assistant-surveyor to the expedition, and in that ship visited the frozen regions for the purpose of co-operating with the expeditions under Franklin and Parry. As commander of the Etna and the Sulphur he executed some various important surveys. In the command of the latter he served at the destruction of the forts of the Bocca Tigris in company with the Nemesis, and in the operations against and capture of Canton, which were greatly facilitated by his previous surveys. For his services he was appointed captain in May, 1841, and nominated a Commander of the Bath in October following; and in 1843 received the honour of knighthood. In November, 1842, he was appointed to the Samarang, 26, surveying-vessel, and sailed in her for Borneo. Afterwards he visited Brune, and there was offered by the Sultan the island of Labuan, whence Sir Edward proceeded to the China Seas. On June 4, 1844, while in the Straits of Jilolo, he fell in with and was attacked by a fleet of Illanon pirates. In the conflict which ensued the pirates were defeated, but Sir Edward unfortunately received a wound so severe that the surgeon who cured him was presented with the Blane medal. His conduct on that occasion met with the approbation of the Board of Admiralty, and was declared "highly creditable" by Lord Palmerston: and by a court of inquiry instituted at the instance of the Dutch, was thanked for his forbearance and humanity under the provocation he had endured. He was granted a pension of £250 for his wound. He also rescued the crew of the British barque Premier, which had been wrecked, the crew falling into the hands of the natives, on the west coast of Borneo, and afterwards concluded treaties with the two Sultans concerned. While in those parts he again visited the Madjicosimas, Loo-choo, and Japan, where his communications with the natives were conducted in so conciliatory a spirit that he was most favourably received by the inhabitants. At the Philippines the unprecedented privilege was conceded to him of surveying the different harbours and approaches within the forbidden limits of the batteries. He returned to England in 1847. Sir Edward's last appointment was to the command of the Assistance, in February, 1852, and of the expedition consisting of the Resolute, Captain Kellett; North Star (store-ship), Captain Pullen; Intrepid, Capt. M'Clintock; and Pioneer, Captain Sherard Osborn, which sailed in the following April for the Polar regions in search of Sir John Franklin; and of the Investigator and Enterprise, commanded by Capts. M'Clure and Collinson, which vessels had entered the Arctic Seas through the Behring Strait. In April, 1854, Sir E. Belcher found it necessary after mature deliberation to abandon his ships, and in the following year, having returned to England, he was tried by a court-martial and acquitted for so doing. He was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath in 1867.

Deputy Inspector-General Alexander Eugene Mackay, M.D., R.N., died last week, after a short illness. Dr. Mackay had seen considerable service. He was Assistant-Surgeon in the Vernon, flag-ship in the East Indies, from April, 1845, until July, 1849, when he was transferred to the Medical Establishment at Hong Kong, and in October, 1853, was appointed Surgeon of the Fantome, sloop, on the Australian station. In April, 1857, he was appointed to the Cumberland, on the South-East Coast of America, and in August, 1858, was transferred to the Royal Albert, flagship of the Channel Squadron, from which ship he removed in March, 1861, to the Marlborough in the Mediterranean. He was appointed to Her Majesty's ship Fisgard for special service at the Medical Department of the Admiralty in December, 1872, and in this department discharged most important duties, his chief work being the preparation of the statistical reports of the health of the Navy. Dr. Mackay died at the comparatively early age of fifty-five from typhoid fever, arising from the drinking of poisoned water from a cistern at the office of the Naval Medical Department, Spring Gardens, through which an untrapped sewer-pipe passed.

THE ANTI-OPIUM DEPUTATION.

The Civil Service Gazette has the subjoined remarks on the above subject:—How to prevent the Chinese from poisoning themselves with opium? is a problem as hard to solve by the statesmen of the Flowery Land as is that of how to prevent the English from poisoning themselves with alcohol? by the statesman of this realm of fogs and mists. The newly-arrived Envoy from the Celestial Empire was delicately questioned the other day by a deputation from the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade, and the reply elicited was to the effect that, though sincerely desirous of putting a stop to opium-smoking, the Chinese Government was, as yet, unable to accomplish their wishes. The evil effects of opium-smoking they knew were most deplorable, far more demoralising and pernicious than those caused by the habitual drinking of spirituous liquors, but the cultivation of the drug and the trade in it has become so great that the difficulties of now dealing with the question of demand, supply, and consumption could not easily be surmounted. His Excellency added that it was vain to expect his Government to put down the opium traffic unless they were assisted by the Governments of England and of other countries, such as Holland, for example, which had just begun the cultivation of opium in Sumatra. A general arrangement and co-operation were requisite, otherwise the only result would be that the stoppage of one source of supply would be followed by the opening up of another in a different quarter. Moreover, said his Excellency, significantly, it should be borne in mind that the people of China are likely to be distributed over the earth's surface in large numbers, and if the evil of opium smoking is not checked in time it would be impossible for other nations to escape the contaminating influence of the pernicious habit. In fact, the Chinese Government is as much puzzled how to cure the opium vice as our Government is to cure the drinking vice. If we could point to our success in the suppression of drunkenness we might more confidently urge our demands upon China for the suppression of opium-eating (!) and smoking.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Chinese Envoys are commencing to go about to the various public institutions and other places of interest. They have visited the General Post-office and the Telegraphic Department, being conducted over the establishment by Lord John Manners, the Post-Master General; and on the evening of the same day they were present at Christ's Hospital and witnessed the public supping of the boys. They were much struck when told that this custom had been maintained for over 300 years, a fact which would somewhat shake the Chinese notion that the outer Barbarian has only commenced to become civilised since he came into contact with the Celestial Empire. They expressed admiration at the dress of the boys and their conduct. They were also present at a reception by Lady Derby at the Foreign-office, and another at Lady Egerton of Tatton's, at the latter of which they met the poet Browning and other celebrities. Kwo has himself gained some laurels as a poet, and expressed great satisfaction at meeting Mr. Browning, with whom he had some conversation through one of his interpreters. Lady Kwo —as she is generally styled—has paid a visit to the Art School for Ladies' Embroidery, where she adjusted one of the frames correctly and embroidered a few stitches. On the 23rd the Envoys, accompanied by the Right Hon. R. A. Cross, the Home Secretary, paid a visit to the British Museum.

The Japanese Legation—consisting of Wooyeno Kagenoedi Jushie, Luzuki Kinso, Morimichi Moteno, Sononda Kokichi, and A. Tatsulo—are now on a visit to Brighton as the guests of Mr. James Ashbury, M.P. On the 23rd inst. they partook of luncheon at Sir Albert Sassoon's, and afterwards dined with a distinguished party, including the Mayor (Alderman Charles Lamb), at Mr. Ashbury's residence.

CHINESE LABOUR IN PERU.

The Peruvian Congress has authorised the Executive to contract with Oliphant and Co. for the introduction of Chinese labour into Peru, in conformity with the existing treaty between Peru and China, and voted the law granting a yearly subsidy for this purpose of 160,000 soles. Congress, however, withheld its sanction of the return of guano and nitrate already agreed upon between the Government and Messrs. Oliphant. It was alleged that the Government would, nevertheless, insist upon its right to carry out the original agreement on the ground that Congress has no power to rescind an executive measure entered upon with the authority of the Legislature. It was urged that Peru must be supplied with labour, which it was believed could only be profitably obtained from China.

QUEENSLAND AND CHINESE COOLIES

In the House of Commons on the 19th inst. Mr. Stewart asked if it is the case that there is an Act now waiting for the Royal Assent, passed by the Government of Queensland, for the purpose of restricting the immigraiton of Chinese coolies into that colony; and, if so, whether Her Majesty's Government would consent to the same? Mr. J. Lowther (Under-Secretary for the Colonies) said that a Bill had been passed by the Government of Queensland on the subject, but that it did not profess on the face of it to restrict Chinese immigration. But Her Majesty would not be advised to assent to it, as some of the provisions were objectionable.

THE ENGLISH PRESBYTERIAN CHINA MISSION.

The annual meeting of the Glasgow Branch of the Scottish Auxiliary to the China Mission of the Presbyterian Church of England was held on the 15th inst. in the Religious Institution Rooms. Mr. James White, of Overtoun, occupied the chair; and among those present were Rev. Dr. Bonar, Revs. G. W. Thomson, Ross, Taylor, James Johnston, R. M. Thornton, ex-Baillie Millar, Messrs. James Campbell, of Tilliechewan, Colin Brown, J. C. White, J. R. Millar, James Keay, Archibald Hewat, Rev. W. S. Swanson, of Amoy; Rev. Hugh Ritchie, Formosa; and Dr. Dudgeon, Peking (of the London Missionary Society). Letters of apology had been received from Rev. Dr. Somerville, Rev. Dr. Adam, Dr. James Mitchell, and others.

The Chairman, in introducing the business, referred to the extent of the field presented by China for missionary enterprise, containing as that country did about one-third of the entire population of the globe. It was exceedingly gratifying to find that although there was no special mission to China connected with any of our Scottish Presbyterian Churches, there were branch associations in connection with the English Presbyterian Church Mission in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and Dundee; and it was still more gratifying to find that of the fifteen missionaries sent out the whole were from Scotland. The stations more particularly taken up by the branch of the Association whose interests they were met to advance were Amoy, Swatow, and Formosa. The population of these places was very great, and they could easily suppose that over such a large tract of country a mere handful of missionaries could do but very little for the advancement of Christ's cause, or the promotion of the Gospel amongst the Chinese. At the same time, the missionaries who were settled in China had, during the last few years especially, done very much to bring the Word of God within the reach of the people. It was now estimated that among the 300 stations which were scattered over China there were something like 12,000 members of the Presbyterian Church, and 2,000 of these were in communion with the English Presbyterian Church. The Chairman expressed regret that Glasgow did so little for the support of this Mission. He did not know how it was that, while Edinburgh contributed £1,000 a-year, and Aberdeen £600, Glasgow should send the miserable sum of £460. He trusted that the result of this meeting would be that greater liberality would in future be manifested in promoting the cause of Christ in that distant land than had been done in the past.

Rev. James Johnston, in submitting the report, said it was with regret that he found himself called on to give it his last report of the auxiliary in support of the China Mission, as he was under the painful necessity of resigning his post and leaving a city in which he had laboured for nineteen years. He should perhaps best discharge his duty by stating what the Mission was when he joined it in Amoy twenty-three years ago and what it was now. In 1854 the Mission staff consisted of two ordained missionaries—the Rev. William Burns and himself, and one medical missionary. There was no Mission chapel, and the hospital was closed owing to the ill-health of Dr. Young. It was his (Dr. Johnston's) privilege to organise that Mission station in that year. It consisted of seven converts brought out of heathenism by Mr. Burns. Now the state of the Mission was as follows:—There were three centres of operation—Amoy, Swatow, and Formosa. In these three districts there were last year—first, European agents—12 ordained missionaries, 3 medical missionaries; second, native agents—60 evangelists, 27 students for the ministry, and 4 evangelists; third, [the native churches—50 regular churches and stations and 2,200 communicants. These represented a Christian population of from 8,000 to 10,000 souls. With these facts they left the cause to the intelligent sympathy and liberality of the friends in Glasgow. There was a louder call than ever for both men and money. The cost of the operations was last year nearly £8,000, and of this Glasgow only contributed the small sum of £462.

Rev. W. S. Swanson, who addressed the meeting, spoke hopefully of the progress of missionary work among the Chinese, and said he thought the English Presbyterian Church had acted with great judgment in the selection of their field of operations.

Rev. Hugh Ritchie, Formosa, also addressed the meeting.

Dr. Dudgeon moved the first resolution—"That this meeting, having heard from Rev. W. S. Swanson, of Amoy, and Rev. Hugh Ritchie, of Formosa, of the blessing which has attended the labours of the missionaries, desires to record its gratitude to God, and considers that in the increasing facilities for preaching the Gospel in China there is a loud call for increased effort." As a missionary and a Scotchman he was glad to meet his revered friends from the South of China. To him, in speaking of missionary work, the wonder was not that they had converted thousands but that they had converted one. Mr. James Campbell of Tilliechewan seconded the motion, which was adopted.

It was afterwards agreed, on the motion of Rev. Dr. Bonar, seconded by Rev. G. W. Thomson, to approve of the report and reappoint the committee.

A vote of thanks was then passed to the chairman, and the meeting separated.

THE JAPANESE LEGATION AT NEW YORK.—The lively reporter of the New York Herald, describing the Japanese Envoy and his lady at the installation of the President, says they have fallen so gracefully and naturally into the customs of the country as to appear very little like foreigners from the far away East. "Mrs. Yoshida Kujonari is a dark but very pretty brunette, whose almond eyes and pleasant ways have made her hosts of friends here. The Japanese ladies were similarly attired in black silk toilets with cloaks of the same material and small black hats with cream coloured trimmings and cardinal roses. Conspicuous among the Japanese Legation on the floor was General Saga, an Oriental Adonis, whose Imperial moustache and dark eyes, cut somewhat on the bias, as Oriental eyes are, have made sad havoc among the society belles." The paragraph shows the advantage of Democratic institutions. We have nothing like this among our Court reports here.

TREATIES OF COMMERCE.—Lord Derby has received a deputation from the Associated Chambers of Commerce, who indicated the basis on which it was desirable that treaties with foreign countries should be renewed. The Foreign Secretary, in reply, said it ought not to be forgotten that in dealing with foreign countries on the subject of treaties the Government had only one weapon to work with, and that was argument. They knew that the system of free trade had been successful with themselves, and from experience believed it would be equally successful with other nations. It was the Government of this country which had made almost every concession that was in their power to make. They had lately taken up the treaty question as a matter of bargain, and had told other countries that if they made certain concessions to us we should do the same to them.

WE regret to announce the sudden death of Captain Peter Maxton of the firm of Shaw and Maxton. The deceased gentleman attended the offices of the firm, No. 9, Fenchurch-street, on the 22nd inst., apparently in his usual health, and about 2 o'clock he was seated at his desk having some conversation with Mr. Shaw, when he was noticed to be seized with a kind of fit, and he shortly after expired in the office. The deceased was a member of Lloyd's Committee, and formerly commanded several vessels in the China trade before the days of steam.

THE house and grounds of Manley-hall, near Manchester, lately the property of Mr. Sam Mendel, have been acquired by a public company, which propose to form them into a place of recreation for the teeming population of Lancashire somewhat on the model of the Crystal Palace or the Alexandra Park at Maswell-hill. The scheme includes the idea of a large iron and glass building which may be used as a permanent art gallery, winter garden, and promenade and concert hall.

DR. SCHLIEMANN gave an interesting account of his discoveries at Mycenæ, at a meeting of the Antiquarian Society, on the 22nd inst. He received a hearty welcome from a number of distinguished visitors, Mr. Gladstone taking the opportunity of paying a high tribute to the work of Dr. Schliemann, and to the assistance which he has received from Mrs. Schliemann. Amongst those present was Mr. Alfred Tennyson.

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Surgeon Major Valesius Skipton Goulsbury, M.D., C.M.G., is appointed Administrator of the Government of the Settlement on the Gambia. The appointments of Mr. W. H. Read as Dutch Consul-General for the Straits Settlements, to reside at Singapore; Mr. Federico Herbert Hemming as Consul in London for Venezuela; and Mr. Julio Satorres as Spanish Vice-Consul at Glasgow are gazetted.

AT the next meeting of the Geographical Society a paper will be read, "On the Navigation of Smith Sound, as a Route towards the Pole," by Captain Sir George S. Nares, R.N., K.C.B.

MR. ASHBURY, M.P., repeated his dissolving views entertainment, illustrative of America, China, and Japan, in the Dome at Brighton, before a crowded audience, on the 17th inst.

Sir Thomas and Lady Wade and family have arrived at the Bristol Hotel, Burlington-gardens, son.

LONDON: MONDAY, MARCH 26, 1877.

A STATEMENT of some importance as bearing upon coolie emigration from China to Peru appears in the Panama Star and Herald, and is reproduced elsewhere. It appears that arrangements have been made through Messrs. OLYPHANT and Co. for the introduction of coolies under the new treaty between China and Peru; but that there is some disagreement between the Peruvian Congress and the Executive on the subject, the former desiring, contrary to what the Executive hold to be their right, to interfere with the terms of the contract. It is to be hoped that the difficulty may be adjusted, and that this will be the inauguration of a system which will free emigration from China to Peru from abuses which formerly attached to it, and will prove beneficial to both nations.

WE understand that the directors of the Austrian Lloyd Steam Company have decided on laying down at their building yard at Trieste two screw steamers of 3,000 tons. They have at present on the stocks one of 2,000 tons, and two small steamers for local service. It is rumoured that the line to Bombay will be shortly extended on to the Straits and China. At the yard of the Messageries Company is the Yangtsze (at first named the Tonquin), a steamer of over 3,500 tons and 600 H.P., which will be ready in August. The Sankoi, a similar vessel, will probably be launched early next year.

WE have much pleasure in calling attention to the announcement that HER MAJESTY has been pleased to confer upon Mr. MEDHURST the honour of knighthood. In our last issue we took occasion to animadvert upon the omission of the GLADSTONE-LOWE Government to confer some distinction upon him after his able conduct of the Yangchow negotiations; and we are glad to find that he has been rewarded by a more gratifying, if somewhat tardy, recognition of his services.

TELEGRAPHIC advices, dated Madrid, March 23rd, state that the protocol of a Treaty between England, Germany, and Spain, with reference to Sulu, has been signed. This information is in conformity with that which we have already received on this side, so far as the action of this country is concerned, and with that given by our Hamburg Correspondent with respect to the action of Germany, and it may, therefore, be presumed that the matter will be very shortly settled.

TWO ironclads for the Japanese Government, one of which is under construction by Messrs. SAMUDA, and the other by Earle's Shipbuilding Company, will be launched next month.

THE main army of YAKOOB BEG of Kashgar, 50,000 strong, is reported to be stationed in a fortified camp at Tarfur. The Chinese troops opposed to them are at least as numerous.

THE OPIUM QUESTION.

THE various views which have been expressed upon the Opium question on the reception of the deputation which waited upon the Chinese Envoys on the 17th inst. throw much light upon the subject. We have now a clear enunciation of the manner in which the matter presents itself both to the Anti-Opium Society and also to the Representatives of the Chinese Government in this country; and the result is that the question appears in a form much modified as compared with what have hitherto been understood to be the views adopted by the Society, and with what were generally stated to be those of the Chinese officials. The former, if we may take Mr. MARK STEWART'S statement of them as correct, are by no means of so extreme a character as has been naturally supposed from the title which the Society has assumed, and the object—that of suppressing the Opium trade—which it has declared itself prepared to contend for. The Chinese, according to the statement made by the Envoy, are not only alive to the difficulties which lie in the way of putting down in toto the practice of Opium-smoking and the traffic in the drug, but are prepared to make all fair allowance for maintaining the trade so long as it appears impossible to do away with the consumption of Opium in China, and its production either there or in any foreign country. While deprecating the past history of the Opium trade and the evils resulting from the use of the drug in no qualified terms, Mr. MARK STEWART pertinently inquired how far the Chinese Government was prepared to put down the production and use of the drug within their dominions, and justly observed that any steps which the Anti-Opium Society might take would be useless unless they had the hearty co-operation of the Chinese authorities themselves. The reply of the Envoy, as interpreted by Dr. MACARTNEY, was, though reasonable, not very definite upon the degree to which the Chinese Government was likely to be able to succeed in instituting reforms at home. China is a large country, and the taste is wide-spread; and both these elements are difficult to deal with. It could scarcely be expected that the Envoy would add a third cause which militates very greatly against any effective action, namely, the inherent weakness of the Chinese authorities themselves. But those acquainted with China are aware that the Central Government, though nominally despotic, is not strong enough to force the officials in distant parts of the empire to obey its mandates, and hence it is to be reasonably expected that it would find difficulties of a serious character to contend against in attempting such a step as a thorough and rapid reform in respect to the consumption of the drug. In addition to this, when once a taste such as that for Opium has become established, it is almost an impossibility for any Government to put it down; and the Chinese Envoy laid stress upon this fact as an excuse—and we believe it is a valid excuse—for the inability of the Government of his country to stamp out Opium-smoking at once, though he held out some hopes that this end might be attained ultimately. The most important point which he noticed in his reply was that it would be useless for the English Government to put down the trade in Indian Opium unless other countries agreed that they would not cultivate the drug. This point is so obvious that it would seem to be final on the subject. If the result of giving up our trade and revenue in India should be that some other country obtained them, the only effect of our action would be to do a great deal of injury to India and no possible good to China. Such is the opinion which the Chinese Envoy himself entertains; and while this is the case, we can scarcely expect that very vigorous action will be taken in the matter. In fact, it has now been shown that the suspicions of lukewarmness on the part of the Chinese Government, long entertained, were only too well founded; and that the astute officials at Peking are more than doubtful whether anything they or we could do would have the desired effect. The answer which has been given will certainly take many who were enthusiastic on this subject by surprise. At the same time, the interview which has taken place will be beneficial, as it must tend to elicit more clearly the true merits of this complicated question. But whatever difficulties may exist in the way of putting down the Opium traffic and doing away with the consumption of the drug in China, we think—seeing the strong views which the Chinese authorities are prepared to express upon general grounds against the use of Opium—that the Indian Government would at least do well to put down the Bengal monopoly. Monopolies of all kinds are contrary to the spirit of our laws and constitution; and whatever diverse views may be entertained concerning Opium, there can scarcely be two opinions that it is not desirable that the English Government should be directly interested in fostering the cultivation of the poppy and the manufacture of the drug. If the Anti-Opium Society can attain this end they will have done some good; but more than this it would seem Utopian to hope for.

STRAITS AFFAIRS.

OUR recent advices from the Straits Settlements are not satisfactory. They betray the prevalence of a general sense of uneasiness and dissatisfaction as regards both the affairs of the Colony and our relations with the neighbouring Malay States. The execution of Maharajah LELAH and others for the murder of Mr. BIRCH is said to have had an effect far from favourable on the natives; and the Straits Times, representing the European element of the Colony, complains loudly of the secrecy in which the proceedings of the trial of these wretched men were kept. It does not appear, indeed, that the Court which tried them closed its doors; but a Colonial newspaper could hardly be expected to send reporters to Perak; and the official report ought surely to have been at once published in the Government Gazette for the information of the public, which has a very legitimate interest in knowing all the particulars of the case. To make a mystery of such matters is the surest way of creating a belief that there is something which the authorities have an interest to conceal. If things are kept in the dark, the not unnatural inference is that it is because they are unable to bear the light. Unfortunately, in the present instance, rumours are afloat that a good deal has been elicited to show that the Perak people had much to suffer at the hands which were to guide them in the arts of government and civilisation, and that it was not until after vain appeals for redress at Singapore that they resorted to the desperate expedient which involved so much trouble, misery, and bloodshed. From the outset the Colonial-office and Colonial authorities were repeatedly warned, both here and in the Colony, that the success of their experimental interference with Malay States would depend on the men employed as Residents; and if these warnings as well as the complaints of the Malays were disregarded, those whose duty it was to give them attention have much to answer for. But we trust that Lord CARNARVON will lay before Parliament without delay the fullest particulars about the trial in question, and about Malay affairs in general, and that they will dispel the doubt and distrust which have arisen from the reticence so much complained of. We shall be glad to learn, also, who is now recognised as the Sultan of PERAK, since both ISMAIL and ABDULLAH are prisoners; and how long are those Chiefs to be left in that state? If they are to be brought to trial, why is the trial not proceeded with?

The little Nine States Confederation near Malacca, though at present at peace, is left in a condition of anxiety by a scheme, having for its object the gift of the virtual supremacy over the whole Confederation to the Maharajah of JOHORE. Those who are best acquainted with the history of the Maharajah's title to his own principality and with the feelings entertained by the Malays of the Peninsula towards him, consider such a measure decidedly impolitic, to say nothing of its justice. The Chiefs of the States are opposed to it, and though some of them have been induced to give their formal consent to it, it is said that their real assent is not to be inferred from their attaching their seals to a paper, while one Rajah at least has summoned up courage enough to refuse even his formal concurrence. Surely it ought to be known at Singapore that the ruler of Johore is regarded by the Malays as a mere usurper and tool of our Government. Accordingly, his influence among them is not equal to that of a third-class Colonial official, and to vest in him the supreme control of the Confederate States would only be to sow the seeds of future trouble for ourselves. If they are to be subject to us, we ought to recognise no control and tolerate none but our own. The Queen of ENGLAND is the only Yang per tuan of the Nigri Sumbilan. It should be our policy to encourage all the native Malay States to look to ourselves as their friend and adviser, as the best arbiter in all their differences, and in the last resort as the Supreme authority for the maintenance of peace and good order among them.

The retirement of Mr. DAVIDSON from the Residency of Perak is universally regretted, and has been the subject of some comment and surmise. He was admirably qualified for his post; he had acquired the public confidence in the highest degree, and he was supposed to be fully appreciated in Downing-street. It was therefore with no little surprise that the news was received that he had suddenly thrown up the appointment, only a few months after he was entrusted with it. Reasons of health are assigned; but the public is so incredulous about the maladies of officials that it seems, in the Straits, to think of Mr. DAVIDSON'S health with no more sympathy than is given in this country to General IGNATIEFF'S travels in search of an oculist. The question why he resigned does not seem to have yet received an adequate answer. Perhaps the Colonial-office will be good enough to throw some light on it. How far Mr. HUGH LOW, late of Labuan, will be able to replace him remains of course to be proved; but in selecting such a successor, Lord CARNARVON appears to have been guided by the desire of choosing a man who may be presumed to have some acquaintance with the races with which he will have to deal. We fear, however, that the little rock of Labuan, with its population of less than 4,000 souls, mostly Chinese, has afforded Mr. LOW but a very limited field for learning much of the Malays. It may have been on similar grounds that a Mr. INNES was recently appointed to the Residency of Langat; for if we are not misinformed, that gentleman was once in the service of the Rajah of SARAWAK, an excellent school for learning the art of dealing with Oriental races. We are but imperfectly informed, however, of the nature or length of his services in Sarawak; but if he has entered our service, backed by the recommendation of Mr. BROOKE, we shall probably find in him an efficient public servant.

The financial condition of the Colony cannot be deemed very flourishing if the report current at Singapore is well founded, that a loan of £200,000 was in contemplation. The administration of justice also is another subject of complaint. The Straits Times appeals to Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY to call the Colonial-office to account for its treatment of the Colony in the matter of Judges; and private letters represent the Courts as combining delay with that proverbial uncertainty which is said to be one of the law's glories. If this be true it is inexcusable. The Colony has more Judges than it ever had in Indian times, and we presume the Colonial Minister can find as good Judges as the India Board used to find formerly. The only difference lies in the systems of the two departments. Under Indian rule the Judges were required to remain at their posts, and they did so. But under the laxer sway of the Colonial-office, their Honours, like other officials, get their furloughs and pass nearly a quarter of their time of service at home, and their seats, in their absence, are filled as well as the Colonial resources admit.

Since the above was in type we have heard on good authority that the future Government of Perak and Larut have been decided on, and that a Blue-book will be shortly published giving the details.

PROPOSED WORKING MEN'S MEETING ON THE CHINA QUESTION.

IN another column we give a full report of a meeting of a somewhat novel character. Under the auspices of the Anti-Opium Society, a preliminary conference of working men, convened with the object of organising a future public meeting to enable the working classes to convey to the Chinese Envoys their views as to our relations with China, and with regard to the Opium question, took place at 337, Strand, on the evening of the 22nd inst. Mr. RICHARD, M.P., was voted to the Chair; and in addition to him, Professor SHELDON AMOS, Dr. BRIDGES, Professor BEESLEY and others were among the speakers. The number of working men present was small; but one or two who addressed the meeting expressed their opinion that there would be a larger attendance if a more suitable evening were chosen, and due steps taken to make them acquainted with the nature of the matter to be laid before them, and a resolution was passed with this object. The Chairman, and others who spoke, condemned, in terms which, if not over accurate, were certainly sufficiently strong, what they held to be the high-handed and aggressive policy of Great Britain in her relations to China, and the injustice which she had done in forcing her trade, and especially the Opium traffic, upon the Chinese; and they concluded by expressing their opinion that the advent of their Envoys afforded a suitable opportunity to let the Chinese know that such action as had been taken did not meet with the countenance or approval of a large and influential section in this country. There is accordingly, if it be possible to rouse up sufficient interest on the subject, to be a further meeting at which the working-man is to be enlightened upon the history of our relations with China for the past forty years, and then be called upon to express his ideas to the Chinese Envoys, with the view, as one of the speakers at the meeting put it, of strengthening the Representatives of China in their negotiations with the Government here. The action taken by the Anti-Opiumists shows, it must be confessed, great consideration both for the Chinese Envoys and for the working-men of London. The former, we make no doubt, would be unable to manage their own business without the valuable aid which is quite voluntarily proffered to them, while the latter will, we are confident, be delighted to find out that they are just the very section of the English nation which is specially qualified to judge of the exact merits of a question which has for years puzzled some of the wisest of our statesmen and diplomatists and which involves issues of the most difficult and delicate nature. Seriously, however, we cannot but think that the enthusiastic and well-meaning members of the Anti-Opium Society have not sufficiently recognised the difference between themselves and comparatively uneducated people like the working men of London in ability to judge of a complicated matter, such as the Opium question, was shown to be by the reply made by the Chinese Envoy to the recent deputation; and we cannot but think that they are somewhat presuming upon H.E. Kwo's good nature if they expect him to receive deputations ad libitum from every class which thinks it can enlighten him as to how he should perform his diplomatic duties. The reception of the recent deputation was something very unusual; but the Envoys did well to show a willingness to hear what such influential gentlemen as composed it had to say upon a matter that had been so much discussed as the Opium question; but having done this, they have certainly gone as far as courtesy requires; and can hardly be expected in their position as the responsible Representatives of China to our Government to be in any way mixed up in a quasi-party movement; or appear to be making use of any one section of society as a means of forcing the Government to which they are credited to comply with any demands they wish to make. Such a course would be in the highest degree detrimental both to our own interests and those of China, and we trust that the Envoys will be sufficiently well-advised to set their faces against any attempt to bring pressure to bear either upon them or upon the Government in regard to the delicate and difficult negotiations which they have been appointed to conduct.

THE UNITED STATES AND THE FAR EAST.

THE volume of Papers upon "The Foreign Relations of the United States for 1876" contains some very valuable despatches referring to matters in China, Japan, &c. The following, with reference to the Woosung Railway, throws much light upon the proceedings connected with that undertaking, and practically answers the severe accusations which have been made with regard to it. It would appear from Mr. SEWARD'S statement that originally the idea propounded was that of making a "horse road," but it also seems that the Chinese authorities were from the first aware that a tramway was to be laid down:—

Mr. Seward to Mr. Bradford.

No. 4.] Hong Kong, Feb. 2, 1876.

Sir,—I have learned that an engineer has arrived from England to prosecute the construction of the railroad from Shanghai to Woosung. It is altogether likely that the Chinese authorities will object to the work, and appeal to you to restrain any of our countrymen who may be concerned in it. I think it well, under the circumstances, to state to you my views as to the attitude which you should assume.

The actual situation I understand to be this:—The ground for the line has been purchased and paid for. The termini are Shanghai and Woosung, which latter town is ten miles below Shanghai, at the junction of the Whampoo and Yangtsze Rivers. A line of railroad over this route would serve the convenience of foreigners in going to and from shipping detained at Woosung by a lack of water on the bar. There is a considerable Chinese population at Woosung who would assist in supporting it when opened. The ground was bought ostensibly for a maloo (or horse-road), and I believe that the authorities knew that rails would be laid down for a tramway.

The leading motive of the promoters of the enterprise is a desire to exhibit to the Chinese a railway in practical operation, and thus to hasten the moment for a general introduction of railways into the Empire.

Every step taken thus far has been regular and defeasible, saving, perhaps, that in a strictly moral point of view the ultimate object should have been declared from the outset. That this would have defeated the enterprise there can be no doubt.

I am free to say that I sympathise most keenly with the promoters. They are striving to confer a benefit upon China. Their spirit is such that they will be perfectly willing to vary the plans to meet the views of the Chinese, so far as these are founded upon reason or even upon prejudices, which are strongly held, and saving, always, demands to abandon the undertaking. They believe they have a right to build a road over ground which they have bought and paid for.

The promoters have been largely our countrymen. The corporation has become British.

Under these circumstances our office at Shanghai may now properly withdraw from the leading position which it has heretotore taken. Such position would not indeed be expected under the circumstances, and might be offensive to the British authorities.

But sympathising with the purpose of the promoters as I do, and as I believe our Government will, I advise you to co-operate with the British consul and your colleagues generally in their efforts to secure the peaceable establishment of the line.

The arguments which you can best use will be of an expostulatory sort. You may say to the native authorities, why do you object to the enterprise? It is undertaken for the general benefit. It can harm no one. The procedure which has been pursued need not be considered a precedent for the future. You can always interpose treaty stipulations against the buying of lands towards interior points for other enterprises of the sort. By what right do you attempt to interfere with the use of lands acquired by foreigners? Why will you persist in a course which will seem strange and inexplicable to the people of western countries? Such and other considerations of the sort you can freely urge, and always as a last resort say that if they desire to restrain the enterprise the only practical course is to take legal action in the British court.

There will be no wisdom in assuming more of right in the premises than we can do with justice. I would avoid any declaration which would call in question the sovereignty of the Emperor over the soil and the right of his Government to control works of a public nature. Eastern peoples are sufficiently likely to consider us as aggressive in the pursuit of our purposes and careless of their rights without our giving them actual facts upon which to support such a belief.

I wish every success to your efforts and those of your colleagues, and will do all I can to aid you within the lines I have laid down, and subject, of course, to the views of the Government.—I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SEWARD.

O. B. Bradford, Esq., United States Vice Consul-General.

Mr. SEWARD writes as follows with reference to the discussion upon the Chinese labour question, which, as we recently mentioned, has taken place at Peking:—

Mr. Seward to Mr. Fish.

No. 95.] United States Legation,
Peking, June 29, 1876. (Received Aug. 25.)

Sir,—I have the honour to advise you that I paid a visit yesterday to the Ministers of the Foreign-office.

* * * * * *.

The conversation about the Chinese in California was a long and frank one. I mentioned briefly the difficulties which are experienced there; as, for instance, their competition in the labour markets; their isolation from our people, as a result of differences of origin, speech, customs, &c.; their immoralities, consequent upon the lower grade of society from which they originate, and the absence of women; their inadequate regard for sanitary conditions, &c. I assurrd them of the benevolence of our Government and people, and an indisposition to allow unjust discriminations to be made against any classes resident within our borders. I took occasion to dwell strongly upon the need which they have to establish their proposed legation at Washington, and the almost greater occasion for a consulate at San Francisco. They met what I said with the simple statements that our people ought not to complain if theirs were more skilful in certain avocations; that they had heard of the agitation; that they would despatch Chen Lan Pin to establish the mission at Washington soon; that they would bear in mind what I had said about the need of a consulate at San Francisco, and that they must look to our Government to protect their people. This latter point they reiterated, not unpleasantly, several times during the discussion. They seemed to feel confident that this protection would be extended, and expressed the wish that their countrymen might be treated as well everywhere as we treat them.

It is fortunate, I think, that I introduced this discussion. This will be the better understood when I call attention to a despatch on the subject which they have sent to me to-day, a copy of which I inclose herewith. It may be that they would not have sent it had I not spoken first, and given them, in doing so, a certain assurance of our disposition to deal frankly and fairly with the matter. In such case the grievance would have been alluded to first, probably, at some moment when the grievances of our people here were under discussion. But it may be that they would have sent their letter irrespective of my remarks. The fact that I have spoken first is seen to be fortunate, then, whichever alternative they had followed. Our readiness in the matter can only be construed by them in a way favourable to us.

Having already dealt so fully with the business, I shall do no more in replying to the Prince than to refer to the conversation at the Yamen, and state that I have sent the correspondence to you for instructions.

I recognise the peculiar difficulty and delicacy of this matter, and trust that my course will seem to you discreet.—I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SEWARD.

DEPUTATION TO THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

ON Saturday, the 17th inst., a deputation, consisting of members of the Anti-Opium Society and the friends and supporters of that Association, waited by appointment upon their Excellencies KWO and LIU, the Chinese Envoys, to express their views with reference to the Opium traffic. Among those present were the Earl of SHAFTESBURY, Sir JAMES KENNAWAY, M.P., Sir WILFRID LAWSON, M.P., Messrs. ALEXANDER MCARTHUR, M.P., HENRY RICHARD, M.P., F.W. CHESSON, J. W. PEARSE, Professor LEONI LEVI, J. G. TALBOT, M.P., MARK STEWART, M.P., SAMUEL MORLEY, M.P., JOHN HOLMS, M.P., W. H. JAMES, M.P., SAMUEL GURNEY, M.P., DONALD MATHESON, Sir ARTHUR COTTON, Rev. Dr. LEGGE (Professor of Chinese at Oxford), Major-General ALEXANDER, Sir FRANCIS LYCETT, Professor DOUGLAS (of the British Museum), Professor SHELDON AMOS, Rev. Mr. MOULE, Rev. HENRY WRIGHT (of the Church Missionary Society), Rev. Mr. MORGON (of the Christian Missionary Society), &c., &c.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY, on introducing the deputation, said that it was formed of members and friends of the Anti-Opium Society, who desired to avail themselves of the opportunity to explain to their Excellencies the desire which was felt in this country to see an end to the evils connected with the use of Opium. They were fully aware of the difficulties connected with the Opium question, but they wished to express their views and (if they would be good enough to give them) to hear their Excellencies' ideas with regard to the position of the matter in China. They were also aware of the great difficulties which had arisen between England and China on this subject, and were anxious that some understanding might be come to with regard to it which would tend to the preservation of peace between them. He hoped that their Excellencies would be pleased to reply to the remarks in the same spirit in which they were addressed to them.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY then read the following statement:—

To their Excellencies the Envoys from the Imperial Court of China, Kuo, Chief-Minister, &c., &c., and Liu, Assistant Ambassador, &c., &c.

Before referring to the immediate purpose of this deputation, we have much pleasure in availing ourselves, as British subjects, of this opportunity of welcoming their Excellencies the Chinese Ministers to the British metropolis. Appearing amongst us as Representatives of a great Empire, whose literature and civilisation descend from remote antiquity, whose vast area and multitudinous population make it still one of the most important factors of humanity, the arrival of the Chinese Ministers in the capital of Great Britain is an event of the highest interest. In his Excellency Kuo we rejoice to welcome one whose tenure of important offices in his native land marks his fitness for his present responsible post; and we have special pleasure in recalling the fact that his Excellency, in a time of difficulty and danger, had the moral courage to recommend peaceful counsels to the Throne when others were precipitating China into a disastrous contest. Believing as we do that the unhappy differences between the two countries in past times have been largely attributable to mutual ignorance, we regard with great satisfaction the establishment of this Embassy as a step towards the attainment of a more complete intercommunication of idea between the respective nations, and trust that the relations henceforth subsisting between China and England will be peaceful and mutually beneficial.

In approaching the special subject with which this deputation is charged, we beg to point out to their Excellencies that the Anti-Opium Society was formed solely with the desire of abolishing a traffic which we believe to be seriously injurious both to China and Great Britain. Its formation was due to the conviction that the use of opium, otherwise than as a medicine, is morally and physically pernicious, and that the spread of the habit of opium-smoking in China is a fact for which we unhappily cannot disclaim national responsibility.

During the past forty years repeated efforts have been made to induce the British Legislature to take some action against the Indian opium trade, but these attempts have been always encountered by doubts as to the sincerity of the Chinese Government in their hostility to the traffic. It is said that the Chinese people must like the drug, and find it suits them, or they would not consume it in such vast quantities, that the Government is not consistent in its protests against the importation of opium, while the edicts against its consumption and the cultivation of the poppy are allowed to remain almost a dead letter.

We should, therefore, be glad to hear their Excellencies' opinion, for the information of the British public, whether opium-smoking is really so baneful, and its progress so great a national calamity as we believe it to be; and whether the intelligent and respectable classes in China generally coincide in this opinion.

In conclusion, we beg to assure their Excellencies of our profound regret that the opium trade should have been in the past an occasion (among others), of provoking hostilities between their nation and our own, of our sincere desire that the great Chinese people may not succumb to the fascinating influence of a ruinous vice; and our earnest hope that some means may be discovered whereby Great Britain and China may unite in a mutual effort for the suppression of the trade.—We have the honour to be, &c., &c.

Mr. MARK STEWART, M.P., then rose, and said that he took this opportunity of expressing the satisfaction he felt at being among those who came to present this memorial to the Representatives of the great Empire of China, and to express the regret which was felt in this country at the causes of dispute which ended in the Treaties of Nanking and Tientsin. They (the deputation) trusted that we had now entered upon more peaceable relations, and that good might come of this meeting, both to China and to this country. They believed that great harm had been done to China through the Opium traffic, and they believed further that the blame of the first importation of that drug into China rested with this country, and it was their desire to try and make such redress as was possible at this rather late moment. This country had sanctioned the trade and manufacture of Opium, and the deputation felt we were in a great measure responsible for the evil effects of the same. He assured their Excellencies that they wished their country well, and were desirous to assist in any way they could, as a Society, to eliminate this great evil. They considered the trade in every way bad and highly immoral. They believed there was a strong feeling to this effect in this country generally, and they were ready to protest on such grounds. They felt—and had had proof on many occasions of such a feeling through all grades of society in this country—that it was to be regretted that such a difficulty should exist between two great countries, and that we had imported much misery into the great Chinese nation by the Opium trade. They held that this trade should not, at least, be allowed on any consideration to go on increasing; but that they should do all in their power to cause it to become greatly diminished. At the same time, there were, no doubt, great difficulties. We now export many millions worth of Opium to China, and the trade having become established its abolition would, the Indian Government felt, be attended with financial difficulties. They also learnt from reliable witnesses—and upon this point were especially anxious to hear their Excellencies' opinion — that there had been a great increase in the poppy cultivation thoughout China. In almost every district, they were told, Opium was smoked by many people, and even by officials, and some of high rank in the country. While such things lasted, it would be difficult to bring about any solution of the question, and the deputation were anxious to lay before their Excellencies what they thought on this point. They felt that without material concord between the Chinese Government and England their best efforts would be practically fruitless. They had been told that the difficulties were in a considerable degree due to want of co-operation on the part of China in stopping the trade, and they were desirous of being informed by their Excellencies whether there was a real desire on the part of the Chinese Government to co-operate with ours to put it down; because it would be completely futile and vain for us to call upon the Indian Government to withdraw from permitting the trade unless the Chinese Government were equally anxious at least to withdraw from the increase if not to diminish the cultivation of the poppy.

This address was translated by one of the Chinese attachés.

Dr. LEGGE (in the Chinese language) expressed his great satisfaction in welcoming the Embassy, because a long residence in the East had taught him to respect the Chinese, and to wish that there were a thoroughly good understanding and true alliance of friendship between England and China. The Anti-Opium Society deprecates the use of opium in China. He himself had been familiar with its evil effects. He acknowledged England's fault in pressing the sale of opium on China, but the difficulty of securing a change of policy was the growth of the poppy in China. He had with his own eyes seen hundreds of poppy fields in Shantung. "We want to know," he continued, "from "your Excellency whether the Chinese Government is ready "and able to prevent this. People here say that the evil "effects of opium are exaggerated; and we desire to hear "your Excellency's opinion on this point. We shall do "everything we can to remove this terrible evil, but it is of "little use for us to act unless the Chinese Government is "prepared to take strong measures."

H.E. KWO then replied, his remarks being interpreted by Dr. MACARTNEY, English Secretary of Legation, as under:—

H.E. considered the deputation of great importance in regard to the welfare of China. They asked whether the Chinese looked upon the introduction of Opium as an evil. No doubt they did, and a very great one, and the Chinese Government was perfectly sincere in its desire to put a stop to the use of the drug (cheers); but it was a subject surrounded by many difficulties. In a country so large as China there was almost more difficulty in touching such an evil as Opium-smoking than there would be in putting down the use of alcohol in this country, and it was much less easy to induce a reform when once the habit had got a hold on its victim. The Chinese Government were extremely anxious to see an end to the consumption of Opium and to the Opium trade; but unless they were assisted not only by England but by other countries any steps that might be taken would not be sufficient to attain the end in view. The Ambassador had just received despatches from China, in which it was stated that the Dutch in Sumatra and people in other places were commencing the cultivation of the poppy; and consequently if England were to give it up, the trade would simply fall into the hands of other countries. To attain the end in view it was therefore necessary that an arrangement should be entered into, not only with this country, but with all countries where Opium was likely to be produced. This was a matter which was at present being looked into, and this difficulty was the only serious check upon some measure being adopted. Now that the Chinese Government had taken the step of sending Envoys to England, and intended sending representatives to other countries, it was not likely that the people would remain at home, but would spread over the world, and if they continued to indulge in the vice of Opium-smoking would spread it with them. It was, therefore, important to take steps to stamp it out. The Envoys were fully persuaded that no consideration of revenue would stand in the way of the English Government's putting a stop to the production of Opium in India, if they were really persuaded that doing so would have the desired effect of putting an end to the use of the drug; but, if it did not have this result, China would derive no benefit from it, while the Indian Government would suffer considerably. His Excellency would take steps to inform his Government of the views expressed by the deputation; and it would afford him great pleasure to be the means of bringing those who had the like views upon the matter and were of kindred spirit into communication with each other.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY having thanked their Excellencies for the courteous reception which had been accorded, the deputation withdrew.

TONKING.

The following particulars with reference to the newly-opened ports in Tonking, which we have received from an official source, are of much value in the present incipient state of the trade:—

Hai-Phong, the principal port of Tonking, is not a regular trading mart, but only a depôt, where river junks come alongside vessels to load and unload merchandise. The actual markets are further inland, and the chief of them are Hanoi, Nam-Dinh, Hung-yen, and Hai-Du'ong. Hai-Phong may perhaps supplant them in the future if other ports, presenting greater advantages, be not opened to European commerce. But any such change can only take place after some time, as it will not be easy to go against established trading habits.

The value of declared goods shipped or landed at Hai-Phong from the opening of the port (15th September, 1875) to the 30th September, 1876, amounted, including specie and opium, to f.8,800.000, as follows:—

Imports	f.5,000.000
Exports	3,800,000

These returns are below the real value of exchanges, as the Customs officials have been very liberal in their estimates of merchandise in order to encourage trade—f.10,000,000 would still be under the actual value.

During the period mentioned above (15th September, 1875, to 30th September, 1876) the port of Hai-Phong had shipping to the amount of 26,395 tons, thus composed:—

ARRIVALS.

30 European vessels (united tonnage)	10,513
144 Chinese junks (do. do)	3,284
	13,797

DEPARTURES.

26 European vessels (united tonnage)	9,400
139 Chinese junks (do. do.)	3,198
	12,598

China monopolises almost all the exports from Tonking, but is far from importing as much to that country.

England and our colonies imported to Tonking in 1875-76 goods to the amount of Tls.254,000, as follows:—

Spun cotton	Tls.131,021
Cotton textures...	43,882
Woollen „	8,787
Opium	75,981

Common chinaware, silk for embroidering, and tea are the chief Chinese imports to Tonking.

The principal exports from Hai-Phong are rice, dried vegetables, and cu'nau (false gambier), a tubercle used for dyeing, and which the Chinese employ as we do gambier, cachou, and ankino.

Merchandise comprised under the denomination of medicines occupies an important place in the list of exports. During the year 1875-76 Hai-Phong shipped Tls.41,189 worth to Hong Kong.

Woollen goods are not easily disposed of, although the climate is severe in winter; the inhabitants of Tonking making use of warm and thick but very cheap cotton clothing, similar to that used by the Chinese.

Tonking is capable of furnishing large quantities of raw silk; and the export dues upon this produce being very moderate we may expect that this branch of trade will increase considerably. The defective mode of winding employed by the natives renders this silk difficult of sale upon European markets, but it is to be hoped that sooner or later the Tonkingese will adopt an improved method, or perhaps even the cheapness of raw material and of labour might induce Europeans to start spinning-mills at the open ports.

The imports most in demand are spun cotton and cotton textures, opium, chinaware, and medicines, glass and iron ware, haberdashery, and cheap perfumery. We observe that two or three European firms have already been established both at Hai-Phong and Hanoi.

Monetary and Commercial.

We understand that in view of the approaching opening of the Tea Season large insurance policies have been effected already in Lloyd's and the London offices, at rates which indicate a reduction in premiums to the established China offices, who have had almost a monopoly of this business. The rates adopted are 70s. from Hankow, 60s. from Shanghai or Foochow, and 50s. from Canton waters, subject to a deduction of 20s. in the case of mail steamers, and 15s. for steamers of Holt's and the Glen Line.

We gave in our last a list of the steamers for the new Season's Tea, and it will be observed that the P. and O. Company do not intend to enter any extra or special steamers. This will to some extent reduce the racing element, but considerable interest is evinced in the movements of two very fine new steamers of the Castle and Glen lines which have recently left London for Hankow, and are expected to be the first in the London market. The Loudoun Castle, which has already accomplished the voyage to Hong Kong in less than forty days, including all stoppages, and the Glencarles, which has reached Gibraltar after a passage of less than four and a half days from the docks, promise to prove formidable rivals to the vessels of the old established Ocean Steamship Company.

In the Produce Markets the dull feeling which has of late prevailed continues, and most articles continue to exhibit a downward tendency. There has been an almost entire cessation of business in Coffee, owing to an unfavourable result of the Dutch Trading Company's sale. Sugar is extremely flat, and large offers of China kinds in public sale have been for the most part bought in. Gambier, Manila, Hemp, and Straits Tin are lower in value. There is some demand for Pepper, but little is offered at the low rates now current.

The feeling in the Tea market during the current week has been rather worse than better, as compared with last, the despondency having increased, and a general disposition become manifest to force sales, in consequence of which large quantities having been offered without reserve at Auction. Common Con-gous, however, have maintained their rates, though the better grades have generally sold at lower prices. The weekly sales of one firm, which ordinarily adopts the plan of offering its teas without reserve, continue to exert a very depressing influence upon the market.

The quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week was 3,467,808 lbs., a decrease of 2¼ per cent. on the preceding week. Of this total 2,220,993lbs. was for home consumption; 631,181 lbs. was removed coastwise; 402,349 lb. was exported; 201,008 lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 3,277 lbs. was for ships' stores. During the same period the duty received was £55,525, or an increase on the previous week of about 1¼ per cent. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the warehousese during week :- Coffee, 573,358 lbs.; cocoa 131,418 lbs.; tobacco, 351,010 lbs.; cigars, 15,452 lbs.; wine 165,227 gallons; brandy, 31,323 gallons; and rum, 30,488 gallons.

In the Silk market the feature of the week has been the advice from Lyons of a slightly better tone there; but notwithstanding this, business has continued flat. As yet no reliable information is obtainable as to the prospects of the European crop.

The Chairman of the Agra Bank, at the annual meeting of the shareholders on the 20th inst., made some valuable remarks with reference to the question of Indian exchanges, which has attracted so much attention during the past year, and has had so much influence upon banking and exchange operations. He gave some very important facts in connection with this subject. In the first place, it is clear that the probable production of the Californian and Mexican mines has been much exaggerated, it having been overlooked that they produce gold as well as silver; secondly, the demonetisation of the German silver currency is a cause which, powerful as it is while it lasts, is yet of a temporary character; and lastly a low rate of exchange in India has been induced during the past two years partly by over remittance from this side in proportion to the export trade from India and partly by the peculiar financial operations of the India Council. Taking these facts into consideration, Mr. Thomson is not inclined to believe that any permanent difficulties can arise from the depreciation of silver, upon which so much has been said and written. The report of the Bank, which was unanimously adopted, showed that there was an available net surplus of £98,752. This was appropriated to a payment of the dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum (in addition to the interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent., per annum paid in October last), and in apportioning £40,000 to the reserve fund, raising it to £120,000, leaving a balance of £4,414 to be carried forward.

The meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China is called for the 18th proximo. The meetings of the Oriental Bank Corporation and of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China are fixed for the 19th prox.

The directors of the Indo-European Telegraph Company have decided to recommend to their proprieters the payment of a dividend for the half-year ending 31st December last at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The distribution for the corresponding six months in 1875 was at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

The report of the Credit Foncier of Mauritius (Limited) states the net profit for 1876 at £26,057 3s. 8d. A dividend of 17s. 6d. is now proposed, making 15 per cent. for 1876.

The German Union Telegraph Company of Berlin have declared a dividend of £1 3s. 4d. per share; and the Hamburg-Heligoland Telegraph Company a dividend of 19s. per share, both payable on May 1.

The dividend of the London Assurance Corporation for the half-year ending the 25th inst. will be 45s. per share, or the same as for the corresponding period in the previous year.

The Council drafts on India have found buyers at a considerable reduction (about 3½ per cent.) on the rates current last week. On Calcutta 10 lacs were allotted at an average of 1s. 8.56d., and on Bombay 7½ lacs at an average of 1s. 8.58d. Applicants at 1. 8 9-16d. for bills on Calcutta will receive in full, and at 1s. 8⅝d. for telegraphic transfer, and 1s. 8 9-16d. for bills on Bombay about 75 per cent.

Early in the week the Silver market was flat and unsettled, the Indian and China exchanges coming lower. Bar Silver was sold at 53¼d. per oz., showing a fall of 1½d. Since the allotment of the Indian Council Bills the market became firmer, and transactions have been effected at an advance, viz., at 53½d. per oz. A parcel of Mexican dollars has been disposed of at 53½d. per oz.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. steamer Khedive, from Southampton on the 22nd inst., was:—In gold to Galle, £185; in silver, £75,000; to Penang, £48,600; to Hong Kong, £51,258; to Shanghai, £32,335; total in silver, £207,193.

The facts of the foreign commerce of the United States are succinctly and lucidly presented in the following table, showing how the exports have compared with the imports for the last eight years :—

	SINCE THE PANIC. Imports.	Exports.	Excess of Exports.
1876	$461,092,000 ...	$646,976,000 ...	$185,884,000
1875	525,800,000 ...	589,800,000 ...	64,000,000
1874	577,400,000 ...	642,600,000 ...	65,200,000
	BEFORE THE PANIC.		Excess of Imports.
1873	$589,300,000 ...	$566,800,000 ...	$22,500,000
1872	634,000,000 ...	515,100,000 ...	118,900,000
1871	589,000,000 ...	537,800,000 ...	52,100,000
1870	486,000,000 ...	484,400,000 ...	2,300,000
1869	463,400,000 ...	393,700,000 ...	69,700,000

The figures in the export column are quite unprecedented, for those of 1874 were larger than ever before, yet those of 1876 were more than four millions higher, including specie, and nearly twenty-one millions higher in merchandise alone, while the excess of exports over imports was no less than $120,000,000 higher.

Applications are invited before the 10th proximo by the Union Bank of Australia for £65,000 in 6 per cent. mortgage debentures of the Oamura (New Zealand) Harbour Board, repayable by drawings on the accumulative principle, at the rate of 1 per cent. per annum, commencing in December, 1879.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—There is very little change to notice in our market this week. The low prices of common to good common Black and Red-leaf has led to a better demand for them, and both at auction and by private contract a slight advance has been obtained. All the better kinds meet only with a slow sale at about previous prices. Green Teas are very dull, the large quantities printed for sale being more than the Trade want, whilst export demand is very limited. Scented Teas are heavy of sale. The demand for Indian Teas has also materially slackened, and prices have generally given way. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain firm; common have sold from 7d. to 7½d., fair to good common from 7½d. to 8¾d., fair kinds from 9d. to 10½d. per lb., being a shade dearer; good to fine from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 7d. were much as last week; finest remain firm, being now in a small compass. Pak-lin kinds show no alteration. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common have sold from 7½d. to 8½d. per lb., being slightly firmer prices; fair kinds from 9d. to 11d. are relatively cheap; fair to good medium sold from 11¾d. to 1s. 2d., good kinds from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d., fine from 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d., showing no change in prices on the week. New-make kinds: Common remain as before; fair kinds from 9d. to 11d. per lb., have been in favour of buyers; good from 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 4d. have met with more demand at previous prices. Oolongs are difficult of sale; common to fair have sold, at auction, from 1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 2½d. per lb., and fine Formosa only realised 1s. 5d. to 1s. 5½d. per lb. Souchongs: Common sold at public sale from 8d. to 10d. per lb., fair 10¾d. to 11d. per lb., and good from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6¾d. per lb., being about previous prices. Scented Teas: Canton Capers are dull of sale; common show no change in prices; fair to good are only saleable at low prices. Orange Pekoes remain much as last week. Foochow Capers are much as before. Orange Pekoes are well supported, anything with quality realising full prices. Green Teas are in over supply and are selling at declining prices; common to fair kinds are now at a very low range; about 1,700 packages were sold at auction, and about 4,500 packages are advertised for sale without reserve. The public sales have been rather smaller, comprising 17,655 packages, the whole of which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

Home Consumption	2,220,069 ...	2,086,172
Coastwise...	580,864 ...	753,035
Exports	609,013 ...	1,173,253

SILK.

The market has been very flat during the week, and although transactions have not been done on a lower basis, still the absence of business has a depressing effect on the trade. The approach of the Easter holidays keeps manufacturers from buying just now, or we might possibly feel the effect of the slight improvement advised from the Lyons market; as it is, we shall have now to wait till the second week of April for business, and then we shall begin to talk of the prospects of the European crops. Deliveries are not good.

COFFEE.

Early in the week large supplies of Plantation Ceylon at auction went off with less competition, and prices of grey kinds declined 6d., good coloury being about sustained. Subsequently, however, up to the 20th inst. there was more inquiry, and the decline above noted was recovered. The large Dutch sale held on the 20th having gone off about ½ cent below valuations, good ordinary Java selling equal to about 86s. 6d. per cwt., this market was rather unfavourably influenced, and the supplies at auction on the 21st were all bought in. Up to and including the 20th inst. 986 casks, 104 tierces, 121 barrels, and 373 bags Plantation Ceylon were sold as follows:—Triage at 84s. to 95s. 6d., com. grey to coloury small at 97s. to 101s., low middling at 102s. to 104s. 6d., middling at 105s. to 107s., good middling to fine middling at 107s. 6d. to 110s., bold at 111s. to 116s., pea-berry at 111s. 6d. to 114s. 6d. Of Native Ceylon 740 bags sold, small and broken at 74s., ordinary at 81s., good ordinary at 82s. 6d., pea-berry at 89s. Of other East India the sales have been 90 bags pale Manila sold at 83s., and of 974 bags ordinary Singapore offered, 200 bags sold at 71s. 6d. to 72s. 6d. per cwt. Privately 800 bags good ordinary Native Ceylon have been sold at 82s. 6d., with a few fine ordinary bold at 84s.

The Dutch Trading Company's public sale of 104,834 bags Java held on the 20th inst. in Rotterdam went off at about ½ cent below valuations, but improved towards the close, good ordinary selling at 52 to 52½ cents against 52½ to 53½ cents at February sale.

Privately fine Cochin rules at £42, but Ceylon in pipes is dull and cannot be quoted over £36 to £36 10s.; hogsheads being scarce have been sold at £37.

COIR YARN.—At the weekly auctions there was less demand, and only about two-thirds of the quantity offered found buyers, ordinary and medium sorts at a fall of 20s. to 40s. per ton, but good Ceylon, of which there was a liberal supply, realised full prices, 30 bales sold, medium to good well made £30 to £35 10s., fine pale even £40 to £46 5s.; of 233 tons offered about 130 tons sold, low coarse red and grey £24 15s. to £26 5s., ordinary to good ordinary £26 15s. to £28, low medium to medium £29 to £30 15s., good medium to good £31 to £35 10s., fine even pale well made £36 15s. to £38, a few lots £40 to £43 5s.

On the 19th there was a steady inquiry at previous rates, and for arrival 100 tons, January sailing, sold at 19s., and 50 tons due at 19s., ex ship all faults. On the 20th of 544 bags pale Cubes 250 bags sold, good but rather blocky 29s. to 30s.

HIDES.—At the periodical public sales a few Singapore and Penang offered were only partly sold, without quotable alteration in price. China were in large supply; the demand was almost confined to the extreme weights (those under 8lb. and over 28lb. average), which realised previous values to ¼d. per lb. advance, the intermediate weights, which comprise the bulk, being difficult of sale at fully ¼d. per lb. decline. Singapore Buffalo sold fairly at rates slightly in favour of sellers. Of 27,878 China Ox and Cow offered 4,626 sold: light, average 11⅜ to 13 lb. 6½d.; heavy, average 17 to 18⅜ lb. 6½d. to 6¾d.; extra heavy, average 21¼ to 31⅜ lb. 6¾d. to 7d.; Kips and Skins, average 4¼ to 8⅞ lb. 7¼d. to 8⅜d.; thirds average 11⅜ to 14¾ lb. 4⅞d. to 5¼d. per lb, 5,989 Singapore buffalo offered 3,259 sold; fair to good, first heavy, average 33¼ lb. 5⅜d.; second heavy, average 24⅞ lb. 4¾d.; light, average 10¾ lb. 6¾d.; fair ordinary, first heavy, average 31 to 36⅜ lb. 5½d. to 5¼d.; second heavy, average 27 to 36¾ lb. 4⅝d to 4⅞d.; light average 10⅛ to 11⅞ lb. 6d.; 3rds 4¼d., per lb.

Only 347 bags were offered by auction, which went off as follows:—203 bags Penang sold at 3⅝d.; of 144 bags Singapore 100 bags damaged sold at 3⅝d. to 3¾d. White is slow of sale, and at auction prices were slightly in buyers' favour. MANCHESTER GOODS.

Last week closed with the same very quiet feeling reported no the preceding market day. On the 19th inst. the increased sales of Cotton in Liverpool steadied the tone without improving the demand, and the market has since relapsed into the previous dulness. The inquiry in all departments has been exceedingly limited, and prices varying according to the position of sellers. It is only by the acceptance of the lowest prices that business can be effected, and at these rates the production cannot be sold. The continued decline in the Eastern exchanges adds to the perplexities and consequent caution of merchants. In the present condition of things buyers hold back as much as possible from new engagements. There have been more offers for some makes of Grey Shirtings suitable for China, but the limits named have been almost without exception too low to admit of transactions being carried through. Goods are easier in price, and as regards Yarns some spinners are pressing stocks for sale, but with little result. At the close there has been more inquiry for T-Cloths and Shirtings for China, and some business has been done at low rates.

NEW STEAMER FOR THE BRITISH INDIA COMPANY.—On the 15th inst. there was launched from the building-yard of Messrs. William Denny and Brothers, Dumbarton, an iron screw-steamship for the British India Steam Navigation Company, which was named the Chanda. Length, 315 feet; breadth, 33 feet; depth, 26½ feet; gross register tonnage, 2,040 tons. Her engines, which are on the compound direct-acting principle, are 220-horse power nominal, the cylinders being 63 inches and 36½ inches diameter, and having a stroke of 45 inches.

RAPID PASSAGES ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.—The Inman steamship City of Richmond, Captain R. Leitch, has just made two fine runs out and home across the Atlantic. Leaving Liverpool on February 14, she ran from Queenstown to New York in 8 days 7 hours and 55 minutes, her greatest day's run being 388 miles. She left New York on March 3, and ran back to Queenstown in 8 days 1 hour 25 minutes.

LIFE BOAT SERVICES.—The Duke of Northumberland presided over the annual meeting of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution. The report stated that during the past twelve months twelve new lifeboats had been, or were about to be, placed on the coasts of the United Kingdom, and that the committee were prepared to station others wherever there was a probability of their being useful. Within the same period the institution's lifeboats had saved 515 persons, besides assisting to rescue nineteen vessels from destruction. For those services, and for saving eighty-five lives by fishing-boats and other means, one gold medal, eight silver medals, eighteen votes of thanks inscribed on vellum, and £2,814 had been granted by the institution.

THE following are the P. and O. steamers now in the Victoria Docks:—Bokhara, Surat, Hydaspes, Baroda, Delhi, and Nubia; the three last named are laid up. The Khedive left Southampton on the 22nd inst. with the China mail; the Thibet will follow with the Bombay mail of the 29th; the Bokhara, the China mail of April 5; the Surat, the Bombay mail of April 12; and the Hydaspes, the China mail of April 19.

THE list of missing ships posted at Lloyd's for the last fortnight includes eight vessels, five of which are given up as lost. There were on board these vessels 138 persons in all. The combined tonnage is 4,000 tons register, and the value of the hulls aggregates fully £40,000, while the cargoes represent fully £30,000. There is thus a total loss to underwriters and owners of £70,000.

CAPTAIN O. C. THOMAS, of the ship Cathaya, writes a letter to the Shipping and Mercantile Gazette, in which he complains of the treatment he met with in Kobe in April last year. He states that he was wrongfully imprisoned by the Consul for refusing to recognise writs issued wrongly against him, and that though he got out again after eleven days he had to pay as much as $500 for being extricated from his difficulties.

THE Nederland Company's steamship Madura sailed from Southampton on the 20th inst. for Naples, Port Said, Padang, Batavia, &c. with the Dutch mails, 26 passengers, and a full cargo.

THE steamer Loudoun Castle arrived at Shanghai on the 22nd inst., having made the voyage out in 36 days 19 hours steaming time.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The papers by the present mail bring very little that is new from Peking or the interior of China. Some further details which are given of the means taken in official quarters to relieve the sufferers from the famine are strongly illustrative of the want of centralisation and harmony which so much characterise the Government of China. A decree in the Peking Gazette provides for certain supplies of grain for the Kiangsu Province, with, however, a reservation that their cost is to be made good again, so that in point of fact the Central Government will contribute nothing. Messrs. Baber and Gill, of H.M. Consular Service, have left Hankow for Chungkung, and Mr. Dick, of the Customs' Service, has also left that port for Ichang. It was stated in Peking that Mr. Giquel, late Director of the Foochow Arsenal (who recently arrived here), had been expected to take with him thirty Chinese pupils to study Naval architecture here. The native settlements of accounts at the China New Year are reported to have gone off satisfactorily in Shanghai. The new lekin regulations at that port continue to be much objected to. The alacrity with which the Chinese officials have promulgated rules upon this subject on the strength of the new Convention shows that they perceive considerable advantage in the change which it is proposed to introduce. It may be presumed that this circumstance will not escape the notice of the Foreign-office here. H.E. Sir Arthur Kennedy was to leave Hong Kong for Australia about the 1st March. The statistics published by the Registrar-General show a healthy state of the Colony during 1876. It was expected that the port of Wenchow would be shortly opened officially to foreign trade. Ting Futai has taken the opportunity of his stay in Formosa to make a minute inspection of the Keelung coal mines. Gambling and robberies continue to flourish in Canton. An extensive fire has occurred near Macao. The new Governor of that Colony has shown considerable activity in devising measures for the protection of life and property.

A new coal mine has been discovered in Japan, and the quality of the mineral is pronounced equal to that from the Takashima Mine. The Prince of Satsuma has removed considerable deposits of gold from the Osaka Banks.

YOKOHAMA.

The Japan Gazette states :—The Yokohama Saibansho will be removed to the old French Legation at Gochome, Honcho, which was bought for yen 800 (?), about the end of next month. The Sribansho at Chojamachi will be sold.

Some years ago the Japanese authorities dug an immense hole, about forty feet wide and sixty feet deep, near Tobe, into which the bodies of decapitated criminals were thrown. Between four hundred and five hundred bodies were thus thrown into the pit. Last year the roof began to decay and the sides of the fosse to fall in, and the place was abandoned as a burial ground. Some two months ago the authorities determined to fill up this receptacle of dead men's bones, but before doing so they caused to be extracted all the skulls of the dead. The hole was then filled up and the skulls gathered together and placed over the site in a heap, where they still remain, presenting such a spectacle as one might expect to find in the King of Dahomey's dominions, but which one would not unreasonably be likely to consider as inconsistent with the boasted civilisation of a country like Japan. Some of the skulls have the hair still adhering to them.

NAGASAKI.

The Cosmopolitan Press says the unusally mild weather lately experienced in Nagasaki does not seem to have prevailed in the interior. The country fifty miles north of the Settlement is described as being covered with five inches of snow.—Nagasaki will be one of the three points selected for the establishment of great depôts for storing rice, as a provision against the possibility of future famine.—The Prince of Satsuma, who had some time ago deposited in Osaka banks a large quantity of gold and silver bars, the produce of the mines of Kagoshima, has now withdrawn them and returned the specie to his own province.—The reduction of the salaries of the officials in the different departments seems to have met with a very unpatriotic welcome in Nagasaki, as, it is said, many of the subordinate officers have sent in their resignations. — H. M. S. Thistle returned to this port from Shanghai on the 29th ult., with a formidable addition to her armament, in the shape of a 25-ton gun. It is understood that all vessels of her class in the East are to be similarly armed.—The greater part of the cargo jettisoned at Otate from the Tokio Maru is expected to be recovered, and only a trifling loss will have to be accounted for.

The Rising Sun says :—It is understood that the present Nagasaki Hospital is to be demolished, and a building of double dimensions erected on the present ground.—The native authorities are exerting themselves to make the Exhibition of Japanese antiquities to be opened at Osuwa Temple, on the 15th March, thoroughly successful. Several foreigners have also lent for the Exhibition some valuable specimens of Japanese ancient art.—Owing to the faithlessness of his wife, a Japanese in the employ of one of the principal companies at Nagasaki attempted harakiri. He was, however, discovered in time, and being taken to the hospital, is now recovering.—The U.S. corvette Alert has sailed for Yokohama, her place at Nagasaki being taken by the Kearsarge.

TOKIO.

At Sumomoto, in the province of Awaji, a coal mine was recently discovered. On examination the coal was found equal in quality to that of the Takashima mine, so that it is expected mining operations will shortly be commenced.

The number of conscripts to be enrolled in the army this year will be 14,537. This exceeds the enrolment of last year by 3,840, the increase being rendered necessary by the fact that more deaths have occurred, and more men have been discharged from the ranks for various causes during the last three years than was anticipated.

It has hitherto been the rule that all agreements for the employment of foreigners, either by any Government Department or unofficial Japanese, should be submitted to the Gaimusho for approval before any final arrangement was permitted, but it has been notified that this proceeding may now be dispensed with.

CHINA.

—o—

PEKING.

The correspondent of the North China Daily News writes :—

A change has been announced in the arrangements for the Chinese mission to Japan. Hsü Ch'ien-shên, lately appointed as chief envoy to that country, has been transferred to the Foochow Arsenal; and his place is taken by the coadjutor or "junior envoy," Ho Ju chang. An official named Chang Szekwei, titularly expectant of promotion to the class of Prefects (or officers of the fourth rank), is named as junior or associate envoy in his stead. No date is fixed for the departure of the Mission. A second abundant snowfall, which took place on the 23rd January, has gladdened the hearts of the Chinese, who see in this an infallible presage of a good harvest year to come. It is stated that M. Giquel, the late Director of the Foochow Arsenal, is to leave for Europe early in the Spring, taking with him thirty pupils, who are to be placed in England to study naval architecture, navigation, &c. Other students will probably also be sent to France. The news of the capture of the city of Manas, north-west of Urumtsi, on the 6th Nov., after a siege of three months, and the slaughter of a large number of the Dungani insurgents, has given much satisfaction to the Chinese, who consider that the campaign in the region north of the Tien Shan range is virtually closed, since the direct communication with Tarbagatai is now re-established; but the demands for funds for the army are understood to be very pressing. A force of something over 20,000 men is collected at Urumtsi, or in its neighbourhood, with a view to an advance upon Turfan; and supplies of money from the provinces are urgently called for. The Shanghai Customhouse, it is said, will be required to furnish a considerable quota. Should the Chinese army succeed in reaching and capturing Turfan, it will then have only a strip of desert separating it from the most advanced post of Yakoob Khan's territory; but whether it will be sufficiently rash to venture on an advance in that direction remains to be seen.

The Gazette contains a memorial from the Governor of Kwangsi, reporting the arrival at his provincial capital of the tribute mission from Anuam, to whose departure we lately referred. The members reached Kwei-lin on the 2nd December, and were likely to reach Peking about the middle of February. Learning that they were insufficiently provided with clothing for the long journey before them, the Governor "provided them, at his own expense, with embroidered official robes and with fur and wadded garments." But even with these accessories, the members (inhabitants of a tropical climate) have a sufficiently uncomfortable journey before them, through the length of China, in mid-winter.

In the Gazette of the 12th January the Governor of Kiangsu tells a curious tale of the adventures of some Korean sailors who were picked up in the Hangchow bay. They could neither speak, write, nor understand Chinese, and were adjudged by the Shanghai officials to be Liuchiuans, and sent to Foochow accordingly, for transmission to their home. At Foochow, however, it was found that they were not Liuchiuans at all, but Koreans; so they were sent back to Shanghai to be forwarded north. The Governor reports accordingly that, as the Peiho is closed by ice, he has ordered them to be provided with warm clothing and sent overland to Peking.

CHEFOO.

Lyell, who was charged before H.B.M. Consul for menace of assault upon Her Majesty's naval officers in connection with the wreck of the Annie Grey, has been fined $50. He endeavoured to set up a defence which, however, completely failed, to the effect that the officers in question were intoxicated and threatened him with rifles.

HANKOW.

The North China Herald correspondent says :—

Messrs. Baber and Gill started on the 7th Feb. for Chungking, and Mr. Dick left on the following day for Ichang—both in Chinese houseboats. The weather is bitterly cold, and I do not envy any of the travellers their journey; the ground is covered with snow, and now it is turning to frost. Mr. W. W. King, accompanied by Mr. Octavius Johnson, of H.M. Consular Service, left for Ichang on the 5th February in the gunboat Kestrel. Captain Hardie, of the C.N. steamer Shanghai, accompanies the party. The water is rising hand over fist—a good thing for the Kestrel, as well as for the river steamers.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 16th Feb.; no later mail from London had been received.

According to general report, the China New-year's settling has gone off satisfactorily among the native traders in the settlements at Shanghai.

The Customs' Gazette for the third quarter of 1876 has been published, and shows a slight increase in the number of vessels entered and cleared, and in their tonnage, over the corresponding quarter. The import of Grey Shirtings was double that of the corresponding quarters of the three previous years; and that of T-Cloths double than in 1873 and 1874, and 120,000 pieces over that in 1875. Woollens show a marked decrease in Long Ells and Lustres, and a slight increase in Spanish Stripes and Cloths. Iron, Lead, Tin, and Coal all show a decrease. The export of Hides is more than treble, Great Britain and Japan being the recipients. The revenue shows an increase of Tls. 89,000.

Several steamers which have been detained in the Upper Reaches of the Yangtsze River have managed to get over the difficulty, on the water, which had been unusually low, rising again.

The lekin regulations still continue to be the chief subject of public interest. The North China Daily News publishes a more careful translation of them, but adds that reperusal of them only confirms the first impression that they are obstructive and impracticable. The proposal to stamp foreign goods on ship-board before landing would cause delay in unloading; and the stress laid on the stamp would lead to constant dispute thereafter, while the stamp would not help to identify goods offered for sale in the shops in the Settlement, because these are unpacked; bales are frequently opened to take out musters, and these would be disqualified from inland transit protection. Besides, there are some goods that cannot be stamped on the seam of the packing, lead, for instance; and in such cases there would be danger of the mark being obliterated and trouble ensuing from that cause. As a matter of fact, foreign goods generally bear proof of their origin on the face of them; and any "stamp" identification is unnecessary. The above-named paper holds that the object of the rules can only be to affirm lekin taxation, and procure the recognition of lekin tax-offices in the Settlements; and it is hardly our policy to assist in a process of throttling trade, which we consider detrimental to the best interests of the Chinese Government as well as of merchants.

A commercial case which has come before the Supreme Court has attracted some attention. It arose between the China Navigation Company and Mr. Robert Francis; and was stated specially for the opinion of the Court. It appears from the summary given in the North China Herald, that Mr. Francis was formerly a general merchant at Shanghai and Kiukiang, and at the latter port his business included the agency of the C.N. Company. Residing at Shanghai, he only occasionally visited Kiukiang, where his business was conducted by Mr. W. H. Shaw, who signed the firm of R. Francis and Co., per procuration. It was customary for the general agents of the company, Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, to make advances, on their own account, to Chinese merchants, upon goods intended for shipment by the company's steamers. In March, 1876, the Kiukiang agency was transferred from R. Francis and Co. to R. Anderson and Co. At the same time Mr. Shaw entered the service of the latter firm, but continued to represent R. Francis and Co., which firm went into liquidation. In the final accounts of the agency from R. Francis and Co., signed by Mr. Shaw, Messrs. Butterfield and Swire were debited with Tls. 6,073 as advanced to shippers, and Tls. 57 as brokerage. Shaw, in the name of R. Francis and Co., drew upon Messrs. Butterfield and Swire a draft for these amounts, and the draft was duly honoured. Subsequently, however, Messrs. Anderson and Co. discovered that the money represented to have been advanced had not been advanced, nor had the brokerage mentioned been paid; and upon investigation the only inference to be drawn was that Shaw, who has now left China, had appropriated the money to his own use. The question for the Court to determine was the liability of the defendant to refund the deficiencies of his sub-agent, and the point was lengthily argued by Mr. Wainewright and Mr. Hannen, who respectively appeared for the plaintiffs and defendant. His Lordship reserved his decision,

A Dr. Pichon has apparently been displaying more zeal than discretion with reference to the French Gas Company. He has an idea that the shareholders have been misled, and in pursuance of it, notwithstanding that the shareholders at two successive meetings were satisfied on the point, applied to the French Consular Court for a Commission of Experts to investigate the matter. The application was refused, chiefly upon technical grounds, but there appears no doubt that the matter is almost a pure fancy of Dr. Pichon, and that the shareholders are perfectly contented with the action of their directors.

The annual meeting of the ratepayers in the Anglo-American Settlement was to take place on the 6th March. The last published Municipal minutes state that the prospect of getting the present heavy charge for gas reduced has not been lost sight of. The question of allowing steamers to land and discharge cargoes at the pontoons opposite the Bund has been raised, by the application of Messrs. Fogg and Co. to allow the Paokong to berth opposite their premises. The Harbour-master has referred the question to the Council, and the Council to the ratepayers.

Two very sad accidents have occurred; the first was to the third officer of the steamer Zambesi, who was thrown from his horse on the Bubbling Well-road, and died soon after from the injuries he received. The other occurred on board the British barque John Potts, and was of a very melancholy character; it seems that John Watts, carpenter, and Frank Harris, a boy belonging to the vessel, went into their bunks in a small cabin, lighting a small charcoal stove for the sake of warmth, and that the next morning the carpenter was found dead, and the boy so far gone as to be beyond help, though medical aid was promptly called in. The unlucky man Watts was warned of the danger of asphyxia from the fumes of the charcoal, but nevertheless insisted upon the door of the cabin being shut.

At the annual meeting of subscribers to Holy Trinity Cathedral, held at H.B.M. Consulate, it appeared that the subscription to the spire had already reached more than Tls. 1,000. The question of erecting a larger organ than the present one was discussed.

Among matters of sport and amusement, it is noticed that between $1,400 and $1,500 were realised by the Amateur Dramatic performance at the Lyceum, in which ladies took part; and that, after paying expenses, there will remain nearly $1,000 to be divided between the Hospital and the A.D.C. The Race Club accounts for 1876 show a satisfactory position of affairs; the receipts were about Tls. 700 more than in 1875, and though the year closes with some Tls. 700 less in hand, the expenses have been unusually heavy, through the improvements made to the inner course, large outlay on new posts and rails, and increase to the autumn prize list. There are now 188 subscribers, and there is a balance in hand of Tls. 1,933. The annual meeting is to be held shortly.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald has the following:—

The Chinese revenue cruiser, Ling Feng, arrived in port on the 4th of February. We understand that she will leave for Wenchow with the Customs staff immediately after the native New Year holidays.

Mr. Consul Davenport arrived per Haining from Shanghai, on the 3rd February, and proceeded to Wen-chow on the 6th in H.M.S. Hornet. In a few days, therefore, we may expect to see the opening of that port to foreign trade officially announced.

Ting Futai left Kelung and Tamsui about the middle of January for Taiwanfoo. His Excellency travelled overland, attended, we hear, by the principal Formosan officials. During his stay at Kelung the Futai minutely inspected the coal mines at that place, and appeared to be much interested in the working of the same.

We hear that the China Merchants' Company intend to run one or more of their steamers regularly between this port and Shanghai. The Fu Yuh is announced to clear at Pagoda Anchorage to-morrow, Friday, morning, at daylight. Now it is worth noting that while foreign-owned vessels are compelled to take out clearances at the Custom-house in Nantai only between the hours of ten A.M. and four P.M., this pampered native company is —on the authority of its agent—privileged to clear its vessels at the anchorage at daylight. We feel tempted to inquire, in the words of the illustrious Artemus Ward, "Why are these things thusly?"

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 22nd February; no later mail from London had arrived out.

Sir Arthur Kennedy has finally decided upon taking passage to Queensland in the mail steamer Brisbane, which was to leave Hong Kong not later than the 1st March. Arrangements were being made to give a public dinner in his honour. [A telegram from Brisbane announces his arrival on March 28.]

The report of the Acting Registrar-General for the last quarter of 1876 has been published, and shows that 540 births and 1,036 deaths were registered in that period. During the past year the total births were 1,840, and the deaths 3,438. Of the former 171 occurred among the British and foreign community, and 1,669 among the Chinese. The annual death-rate per 1,000 for the whole population was 28·18, against 25·87 in 1875; for the British and foreign community, deducting non-residents, 22·92, against 25·94 in 1875; for the Chinese, 28·39, against 25·75 in 1875. Four deaths from small-pox occurred among the British and foreign community during the year, and 165 among the Chinese. Commenting upon the above facts, the Daily Press considers they show that the year 1876 was an unusually healthy one, and that the return is very favourable for a semi-tropical climate, and is a much lower death-rate than that of most large towns in the United Kingdom. "Something must, of course, be put down to the exceptionally cool summer; but even taking the rate of the previous year, 25·94, as the average, it is by no means high, and establishes for Hong Kong the reputation of being a fairly healthy place."

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Hong Kong Fire Insurance Company, the report of which we have already given, was held at the office of the general managers, Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., on Feb. 20, Hon. W. Keswick in the chair. The Chairman said that since the report was issued everything had gone well with the company. They knew of no losses that had been incurred in addition to the few that were stated in the report as having occurred in Shanghai in January. The report and accounts were duly adopted.

In the course of the above meeting attention was directed by Mr. Belilios to a want of proper means to put out fires above the level of the Queen's-road. Referring to a letter which had been written on the subject to the papers by Mr. Granville Sharpe, he said they depended a good deal on the fresh water in the Colony to extinguish fires, but it could not be denied that it was not in abundant supply. In the event of a fire taking place in the dry season above the level of Queen's-road, he did not believe there were any appliances to utilise sea water. A resolution was passed that the directors be requested to confer and co-operate with the board of the China Fire Insurance Company and the local Government with a view to the provision of further means of preventing and extinguishing fire. The Chairman considered there ought to be a reserve of water in all the higher levels and a reserve of fire engines always ready at a moment's notice to be brought out. He thought if means were taken to provide such, the risk of fire would be very greatly reduced.

over by the Hon. Mr. Keswick, who said he regretted to say the earnings of the half year had again been dissappointing. The causes of this were well known, and he thought it almost unnecessary to allude more specially to the adverse circumstances with which the company had to contend. Against all these difficulties they are making slow but steady, and he believed certain progress, and that an improvement was likely to take place in the future they have every reason to anticipate. The statistics of the work done by the company were very satisfactory. The figures for 1873 of the number of vessels repaired by the company were 232; for 1874, 285; for 1875, 280; and for 1876, 474. The tonnage of the vessels repaired also showed an important increase. In 1873 it was 126,170 tons; in 1874, 121,450; in 1875, 138,921; and in 1876, 204,667. The report and accounts were adopted, and a hearty vote of thanks passed to the Directors and Secretary for the courage with which they had met the emergencies they had had to face.

The half-yearly meeting of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation took place on Feb. 15, E. R. Belilios, Esq., in the chair. In laying the accounts and reports before the meeting he congratulated the shareholders on the success which had attended the Bank's operations—a success which was even more solid than the balance-sheet, pleasing though they were, would lead them to believe. During the half-year a number of old accounts had been wholly or partially removed from the books, and capital hitherto unprofitably locked up had been made available for the current business of the Bank. The Indo-Chinese Company's estate had been sold, and that account finally closed. They had also sold the Calabar, and disposed of the Bank's interest in the Pier and Godown Company, and had dealt in a summary manner with many other objectionable accounts, which for many years had been a source of anxiety to the Bank. With regard to the dividend he stated the profits would admit their paying a larger one, but the directors believed the shareholders both in China and London considered building up the reserve fund as of first importance. A steadily-increased reserve fund would improve their credit all over the world. The Marine Insurance account was steadily creeping up. It now stood at $72.022.03, and no losses had been made during the year. The chairman's speech was received with applause, and the motion for passing the report and accounts being seconded by Mr. Reniers, was carried unanimously. The formal business of electing the directors and auditors being disposed of, Mr. May rose and said that as eighteen months ago he had risen and expressed an opinion adverse to the manner in which the Bank was managed, it was only right he should now say that he had been wrong, and express the thanks of the shareholders for the satisfactory report now presented.

An official notice has appeared in the Government Gazette, that, in accordance with instructions received from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, all applications made for the direct clearance of British ships to any port whatever of the Sooloo Archipelago will be complied with.

The officers and crews of H.M.'s gunboats Growler, Midge, and Swinger have been paid off, and the vessels recommissioned the same day, Commander Henry G. Salmond again resuming command of the Midge.

The Eastern Extension Company's Cable between Hong Kong and Cape St. James was broken early on the morning of the 18th February.

The flower-show has continued some days open; but has not been so largely attended as usual, owing to unfavourable weather.

The races were to commence the day the mail left. The Daily Press considered that with fair weather and a full card the first day of the meeting should afford good sport. There were eight events sent for decision; and if it was intended to bring them all off, the starts would have to be effected with more than usual promptitude, as, with only seven races on the card on the first day last year, the last was run in the dark. The Australians had three items to contend for, the other events being open to Manila, China, and Japan ponies, except the Hong Kong Derby, a griffin's race for China ponies only.

CANTON.

The Daily Press Correspondent writes under date of Feb. 17th:—

The Chinese New Year's Day passed off very quietly in the City of Rams, judging from the firing of crackers, which was not so vigorously sustained as on former occasions. This was owing in part, perhaps, to the bad and unfavourable weather, but also in some measure, no doubt, to the dulness of business.

It is reported that the Lieutenant-Governor has memorialised the Throne to allow him to retire from office, on account of his age and constant ill-health. He will probably obtain leave of absence in answer to his petition.

Gambling is flourishing again as an institution, and robberies are as prevalent as ever. The efforts of the authorities to put down these social pests are too spasmodic to be productive of lasting results.

A house in the Northern suburb was nearly burnt to the ground the other day through the firing of crackers. It is a marvel to me that so few accidents occur at this period, considering the reckless manner in which the crackers are let off.

MACAO.

The correspondent of the Daily Press writes on the 18th Feb.:—

Last night, a little after seven o'clock, the steamer White Cloud arrived at the wharf here with more than one hundred and thirty people from Hong Kong to witness the annual Nosso Senhor dos Passos religious procession, which passed off much as usual. The procession commenced about half-past four o'clock in the afternoon, and was an imposing sight. There was a large number of spectators, and the streets presented an animated appearance for Macao.

Shortly aften seven o'clock P.M. a great fire broke out in the village of Colowan, opposite the Taipa fort. This village is under the Portuguese Government. It is believed that more than one hundred houses must have been burnt. I saw the fire from my house burning vigorously up till twelve o'clock. The wind was blowing hard from the north, and I fear there is little left of the villages. The Governor, I believe, sent assistance from here.

Yesterday morning a Chinaman who murdered a countryman of his in this port, about two months ago, was sentenced, after a long trial, to transportation to Timor for fifteen years, in addition to four hundred lashes to be administered in the public thoroughfare in the Chinese quarter.

The fire which occurred here on the 13th instant only destroyed one shop, nearly opposite the Gaol.

The new Governor has shown a great deal of activity, and has done much to render life and property secure in the city. During the past fortnight he has been out at various and unexpected hours of the night to watch the police and see that they were doing their duty. This kind of supervision has proved very salutary in its effect. He has also increased the numbers of the force, and requested all the volunteers to turn out punctually at the alarm of fire.

The Independente has stopped for a time, why I can't tell you. I suppose it will re-appear shortly.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

The Independant of the 15th Feb. notes that the Municipal Council has commenced its sittings, and objects to the proceedings being kept entirely secret, even the secretary of the Mayor being excluded. The Council always publishes a procès-verbal after a few days, and this extreme secrecy in the interim is considered to be useless. The Independant gives a translation of the text of the Chefoo Convention, and of Sir Brooke Robertson's report on the trade of Tongking, but does not make any comments upon them.

The Courier of Saigon publishes a précis of the regulations issued under Royal proclamation for the Government of Cambodia. Among other reforms slavery is to be gradually abolished, and the law courts are to be remodelled.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siam Weekly Advertiser of Feb. 1 has the following:—

As will be observed by the official notice of the vigilant U.S. Consul, he has at length "cut the gordian knot" by fixing a definite period when the infamous consular certificates issued by the ex-U.S. Consul will cease to be respected by him if found in the hands of anybody in Siam. This bold and determined policy of Consul Sickels strikes a death-blow at the vile traffic which has so long been under the protection of the Government of the United States, by virtue of Consular authority, and every American who desires to have the honour of his country's good name upheld in foreign lands will rejoice that the United States has one representative at least in the Far East who cannot be induced to swerve from the line of duty by the bribes of rum-sellers or the threats of others.

The King returned last evening from the visit to the Tennessee. His Majesty must have been accompanied by a large number of the Royal family, the nobility, and gentry; there were many steam yachts.

Rear-Admiral Reynolds, accompanied by his lady and the officers of the Tennessee and Ashuelot, have taken their departure from Bangkok on board of the latter vessel, after a visit of two weeks to our "Oriental Venice."

On their return from Ayuthia, where they spent a few pleasant days amid the historic scenes of Old Siam, they were again greeted by the American and European residents and honoured with a series of ovations such as few distinguished personages have ever enjoyed in Bangkok.

SARAWAK.

The Sarawak Gazette of the 15th Feb. writes:—

We are pleased at being able to say that little as we have to chronicle, that little is all of a cheerful aspect. No misfortune, no great loss has clouded the interval between our last issue and this. Perhaps the most important news meriting the first place in our brief résumé of occurrences is, that we are enabled to announce authoritatively that the expedition undertaken by the Hon. the Resident of Pontianak against the Dyaks of Upper Kapuas has been completely successful, and that all the inland villages which supplied head-taking parties are destroyed. The Batang Lupar tribe, which only two years ago was so strong and troublesome, is now humbled and broken. The vigour and thoroughness with which they have been at last reduced to order must without doubt have given them a severe lesson, and we may fairly hope now to see all the various contending tribes turning their energies into the more peaceful paths of commerce and agriculture, in place of their previous predatory pursuits. This result cannot fail to give a stimulus to trade; we must, however, guard ourselves against over-estimating what has been done and falling into the delusion that no further minor disturbances will take place between the different tribes that occupy the inland border. We may be assured that such disputes will inevitably arise for many years to come, and will have to be dealt with and opposed by prompt and decided action. What has recently occurred will however do much to facilitate this task in the future.

The rains of the N. E. monsoon appear to have somewhat abated, not too soon, as Sarawak has certainly had quite enough during the last two months, as may be seen by reference to the report of the rain gauge. It is as well to state, however, that considerably more rain falls in Kuching than in other parts. It would seem that the low thickly wooded basin lying between the side of Matang mountain and the Sarawak river singularly attracts the clouds. By all accounts the inland stations, and even closer localities, have not had much more than half the fall that has been experienced at Kuching.

JAVA.

SUMATRA.

Regarding the East Coast of Sumatra the following intelligence has been made public:—

"The judicial inquiry by a commission sent from Batavia into the ill treatment of coolies laid to the charge of two Europeans has ended; against one of the two no witnesses for the prosecution could be found on the spot. During the inquiry charges of a similar nature were made against three others. Several capitalists interested in East Sumatra tobacco estates have formed themselves into a committee in order to bring forward and further their interests and those of the planters with the Government, both in Netherlands-India and the mother country. Mr. P. J. van Hemert is counsel for the committee. An address to the Governor-General has already been drawn up and sent to Deli for the signatures of those interested, in which there is urged a better regulation of the relations between employer and employed."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present (French) mail brings advices from this port to the 1st March; the French mail from London Jan. 26th was received on the 26th Feb. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

At the half-yearly general meeting of the shareholders of the Tanjong and Pagar Dock Company, held at the Company's offices, the report of the directors was approved, and a dividend of 6 per cent. for the half-year, or at the rate of 12 per cent. for the whole year, 1876, was declared. The Hon. Mr. Adamson, and Mr. Isaac Henderson, the retiring directors, were re-elected without opposition. Messrs. H. T. Powell and R. O. Bryce were elected auditors for the current year. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and to Mr. E. M. Smith, the manager. After the close of the half-yearly meeting, the shareholders present resolved themselves into an extraordinary general meeting, called together for the purpose of altering Article XXII. of the Articles of Association, which requires the sanction of a general meeting of shareholders representing three-fourths of the capital of the Company in person or by proxy to increase the capital of the Company. It was proposed to alter this Article so as only to require two-fifths of the capital of the Company to be represented at a meeting competent to sanction the increase of capital. Some discussion took place as to the competency of the present meeting, which did not itself represent three-fourths of the capital, to alter so fundamental a point in the constitution of the Company; but the legal adviser of the Company (Mr. Bond) said that the meeting was quite competent to make the alteration mentioned, and after a division the same was carried. [A telegram in regard to this will be found in our Commercial.]

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, FEB. 23.

Present:—His Excellency the Governor, the Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Auditor-General, H. A. K. Whampoa, C.M.G., W. H. Read, W. Adamson, J. R. MacArthur. Mr. A. M. Skinner took the oath as Acting Clerk of Councils.

Mr. Read gave notice that he would inquire at the next meeting of Council what steps have been taken to effect the necessary reforms in the Judicial Establishment.

The Colonial Secretary moved the first reading of a Bill for the raising by debentures a loan of one hundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling, and referred for further explanation of the purpose of the measure to the objects and reasons printed at the end of the Bill. The motion was seconded by the Treasurer, and agreed to.

The Governor: As the Bill which is now proposed is in a great measure rendered necessary by the advances which have been made to native States, and by war expenditure incurred at the end of 1875 and beginning of 1876, it is perhaps as well that I should make one or two observations with respect to our financial position in regard to these native States. As regards the two States of Salangore and Sungei Ujong, the financial position is decidedly satisfactory. The revenue of the State of Salangore in 1875 was $115,655; in the year 1876 it was raised to $193,476; and the Estimate for 1877—which I do not consider to be at all in excess—is $241,000. That State repaid debt in 1875 to the amount of $46,000; in 1876, $54,000; and it is calculated that, in 1877, it will repay $65,000 more of its debt. Then, again, in Sungei Ujong, the revenue of 1875 was $66,472; in 1876, $93,825; and for this year it is estimated at $114,000. This State is now paying $24,000 a year towards the debt due to the colony, besides paying its own expenditure for public services, and incurring considerable outlay on roads, so far as regards the States of Sungei Ujong and Salangore.

With regard to Perak, although I cannot give so good an account, yet still, having gone carefully into the question of the probable revenue and necessary expenditure, I see no reason why next year that State should not be in a position to bear its own expenditure, and pay a portion of its debt. As has been stated in the objects and reasons for the Bill, the amount due on the 31st December last was $165,000,—it now exceeds that sum, because we have had to incur expenditure on account of the Perak Inquiry Commission. Then there is the war debt of $248,000, a portion, however, of which, it is understood, will be paid by the Imperial Government. But, as I said before, the probability is that Perak will gradually pay off all its debts. I do not think that any further remarks are necessary regarding the proposed loan, the objects and reasons generally being fully stated on the Bill.

It is proposed by the Colonial Secretary, seconded by the Treasurer, that a Bill to make provision by law for the protection of Chinese Immigrants was read a first time.

The Hon. Mr. Read gives notice that at the next meeting of Council he will move a resolution that before proceeding further with the Bill for the protection of Chinese Immigrants it is expedient that a measure be introduced by Government for the suppression of the Chinese Secret Societies.

On the motion of the Colonial Secretary, seconded by the Treasurer, the Bill to amend the law relating to Crimping and for the better Protection of Emigrants was read a first time.

As a reward for good conduct, and in token of the proclamation of Her Majesty as Empress of India, a large number of Indian convicts have been released, and most of them return to India. This will cause a loss to the Public Works Department of many of its best workmen. This class of prisoners has been of great service in past days to the colony. Nearly all the roads in the island were made by Chinese, Indian, and Malay prisoners under these men as overseers and guards, and seldom did any escape. Most of the public buildings were built by convicts, from Government House down to the country police stations. Her Majesty's clemency will cause a loss to the colony.

The news from Deli furnished by the Batavia mail is to the effect that all is quiet there, and no further disturbances are apprehended.

We understand that should the Bill for the Protection of Chinese Immigrants become law, Mr. Pickering will be appointed Protector of Immigrants.

The French war steamer Duchaffant, Captain Alquier, arrived here from her cruise to the westward, during which she visited the French Indian possessions, Calcutta and Maulmain, and is now en route to Saigon.

The Ulysses, one of Holt's line, broke down a short distance from this, and was towed back. After repairing she proceeded on her voyage to Hong Kong.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Cornabe and Co.'s Circular says:—Our last circular was issued on the 4th Jan., and we now beg to continue our market advices. Cotton goods have been entirely neglected, and we cannot look now for any improvement until after the Chinese New Year. Money is very scarce, and the natives require all their available cash for the purchase of food. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron unsaleable at quotation, and prices have an improved tendency. For Lead we have but little inquiry, and prices are weak.

Digitized by Google

SHANGHAI.—Piece Goods: The usual settlement of accounts and preparations for the festival of China New Year, which commenced on the 13th February, had chiefly occupied natives, and a very trifling business had been passing. There had been really no inquiry for goods, and the few settlements reported had been of a rather forced character. A few auction sales of Woollens are reported at slightly lower currencies; privately 4,250 pieces 7 lbs. Mexican T-Cloths at Tls. 1.17 per piece; 5,000 places Dewhurst's Eagle 9-12 lbs. Grey Shirtings at Tls. 2.43 to 2.45; 8,000 pieces ditto 8-4 lbs. at Tls. 1.80, and about 5,000 pieces 8-4 lbs. common chop at Tls. 1.35 per piece, prices which also marked a decline of 2 to 3 candareens per piece under quotations for last mail. Business was not likely to be actively resumed until about the 23rd of February. In metals business was entirely suspended until after the holidays; quotations remained unaltered.

SAIGON.—The improvement which recently occurred had been lost, and the market had become flat. Transactions since the Chinese New Year had been very limited, as the demand from the interior had hardly set in. At present the only inquiry was for T-Cloths and superior Grey Shirtings, whilst Supers were neglected. Quotations for average qualities were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lb., $1.80 per piece cash; ditto, 7 lb. $1.65; Grey Supers, No. 1, $1.65 to 1.67½; ditto, No. 2, $1.75 to $1.77½; ditto, No. 3, $1.95; T-Cloth, 6 lb., $1.22 to 1.32½; ditto, 5 lb., $1.05; ditto, 5 lb., $1.05; ditto, 4½ lb., $0.98; ditto, 4 lb., $0.85.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—Black: The market had been virtually closed during the week, China New-year's Day falling this year on 13th February. There was still a demand at former rates both for London and New York, and the stock had been brought into so moderate a compass that even were the demand to slacken teamen were not likely to press sales. The common Hohows, of which the settlements consisted, would lay down in London at 8½d. to 10¾d. Green: There was a fair business done before the holidays, amounting to—Teenkai 900 ½-chests at Tls. 29½; Moyune 2,400 chests at Tls. 26 to 31½ Fychow 200 chests at Tls. 21; total 3,500 ½-chests. The market had assumed a firm appearance, and now that the teamen would have no difficulty about finance, no reduction in prices was expected.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—There have been no arrivals or settlements of Tea during the past week. The season now being entirely ended, this report will be discontinued until the remaining Teas awaiting shipment have been sent forward, when the final Export figures will be given. The Export to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe is 57,201,925 lbs., against 63,094,100 lbs. To the Colonies, 16,064,987 lbs,. against 15,099,603 lbs. To America, 708,121 lbs., against 974,665 lbs. at the same time last year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHEFOO.—Sugar: No business had taken place in this article, but it was expected that a good inquiry would occur as soon as the New Season's Formosa staple comes to market. For this kind the opening price was expected to be about Tls. 2.60 per picul. Export produce remained very scarce, and no decline in values was expected to occur until the surrounding Gulf ports are open to navigation, and supplies arrive more freely.

SAIGON.—With reference to the Rice Market, Messrs. Behre and Co.'s Circular says:—Throughout the month under review our market has evinced much firmness, the increase in supplies from the interior having been fully counterbalanced by a brisk demand for our staple, chiefly from Hong Kong. As advices from the latter quarter now report a quieter disposition in that market, values here have likewise experienced a slight decline. The market closes, however, firm again at $1.50 (equal to about 5s. 8d. per cwt. f.o.b.) for ready grain, dealers making no concessions in price for forward delivery. The subjoined report upon the market for other articles of export is from Messrs. Kaltenbach, Engler, and Co.'s Circular:—Hides: Scoured cow are 50c. per picul lower, whilst unprepared cow have advanced $1 per picul and buffalo maintained its former value. Quotations stand at $16 per picul for scoured cow; $11.50 per picul for unprepared cow, and $7.50 per picul for buffalo hides. Horns: Unchanged, quoted $8.50 to 8.75 per picul. Gamboge: Slightly lower, and obtainable at $48 to 50 per picul, according to quality. Pepper is a shade higher, and quoted $8.50 per picul.

BATAVIA.—Arrack: Nothing doing. Coffee: Some forward engagements had been entered into at f.65 per picul for choice blue bean, and at a like figure for pea-berry; latterly there had been less inquiry, and forward business was virtually suspended; the Government would sell publicly during this year 100,000 piculs. Padang: The quarterly auctions during the current year will be held at Padang on the arrival uo the steamers leaving Batavia on the 23rd March, 26th June, 25th September, and 21st December; by advices dated 10th Feb. the quantity then in store for the March sale was 10,569 piculs, and the total antity to be offered on that occasion was not likely to exceed 20,000 to 25,000 piculs; the leaf disease is reported to have broken out in Sumatra, but the yield was not likely to be affected thereby to any material extent. Sugar: Of immediately available Sugars the market was virtually cleared. Ex next crop sales had been made on a fair scale at figures ranging between f.16¼ and f.17.60 per picul first cost, according to conditions and port of delivery, usual basis; at the close f.17 was offered, but planters held out for more money. In Grocery Sugars nothing had been done; raw kinds commanded such full prices that growers generally preferred confining themselves to these descriptions. Rice; Free shipments from Saigon and Bangkok had had a weakening effect on the value of Java grain, but good white Batavia continued exceedingly scarce, and was scarcely to be had at any price.

COURT OF APPEAL.

DUDGEON V. PEMBROKE.

This case is one of considerable importance, the question being whether when an insured ship has been sent to sea in an unseaworthy state, though not known to be so by the owner, and has been lost through unseaworthiness, the owner can recover on the insurances. The action was brought to recover a total loss upon a time policy of insurance for twelve months effected by the plaintiff on a steamship for the sum of £5,800, on a ship valued at £8,000 and machinery of £4,000. The defence set up was that the loss did not arise from the "peril of the seas," which are the perils insured against, but from the unseaworthiness of the vessel, and, further, that the plaintiff, well knowing that the ship was unseaworthy, sent her to sea in such unseaworthy state without justifiable cause, and that the loss was occasioned thereby; and, further, the underwriters set up as a defence concealment and misrepresentation. The cause was tried at the London Sittings at Guildhall before Mr. Justice Blackburn and a special jury, when the ury, in answer to questions put to them, found that the statements made by the shipowner's broker were substantially correct; but there was no concealment of anything material, and that the absence of a certificate was not material; and that, if the ship was unseaworthy, it was not known to the plaintiffs. But they could not agree as to whether the ship was unseaworthy, or whether, if she was, the unseaworthiness was the cause of the loss. Upon this the learned Judge discharged the jury, and directed the verdict to be entered for the plaintiffs, and the Court, constituted of the same learned Judge, with Mr. Justice Quain, upheld the ruling and gave judgment for the plaintiffs. The case was taken to the Exchequer Chamber, which reversed the decision of the Court below, and gave judgment in favour of the defendants. On the appeal, their Lordships, after a careful review of the facts, reversed the judgment of the Exchequer Chamber, and gave the appellants costs of the appeal. The Court was composed of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Hatherley, Lord O'Hagan, Lord Penzance, Lord Blackburn, and Lord Gordon.

A valuable addition has been made to it in the form of a list of the various Governors of Colonies, the dates of their appointment, places of residence, and salaries; and a list of the various Colonies, giving their area, population, revenue, debts, and form of Government.

THE ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

Captain Sir George S. Nares, R.N., read a paper at the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society on the 26th ult., "On the Navigation of Smith Sound, as a Route towards the Pole." After glancing at the expeditions similar to that which he commanded in 1875, and which, it will be recollected, taking this route, succeeded in reaching the head of Robeson Channel, where they were stopped by the ice, he went on to give, in some detail, the results of the explorations by the sledge parties. The winter was passed in the western corner of this channel, whence they were enabled to examine the whole neighbourhood. They determined the existence of an extensive sea, but, like their predecessors, they were unable to transport navigable boats for any great distance across the ice away from the land during the short season when exploration by means of sledges is possible. At the head of Baffin's Bay the climate is mild, and Arctic life is there found in abundance, so that he regarded this neighbourhood as an important basis for exploration, and the most northerly position where abundance of game was attainable within a restricted area. Advancing to the north by Kennedy Channel they found sea life to diminish rapidly, and the bears preying upon it were found in decreasing numbers. Throughout the whole area north of Smith's Sound the migratory birds in small numbers rear their young in favoured valleys and plains during the short summer. The sun makes his appearance later in the season the nearer the Pole is approached, and consequently the spring and the reanimation of the non-migratory Arctic life are more backward, so that at the extreme North the birds could have very little time to spare between the late spring and the returning autumn in which to rear their young. All these circumstances pointed to the conclusion that as they approached the North less dependence could be placed on obtaining an appreciable supply of winged fowl. This (remarked Sir George Nares, amid applause) opened the question as to whether large numbers of necessarily ruthless sportsmen who last year hunted the district between Lady Franklin Land and Cape Joseph Henry had not devastated the district for a time by destroying all the parent birds. In Robeson Channel and in the Polar Ocean to the northward immediately in its neighbourhood there are no icebergs, but Kane's Sea is thickly studded with floating icebergs. Because Robeson Channel was open nearly all the winter of 1871-72 it did not in his opinion necessarily follow that the ice in the Arctic Sea was also in motion, and yet he could not take upon himself the responsibility of suggesting that the ice in that sea always remains unbroken as late in the season as it did last spring. Were they perfectly certain that the ice in the Polar Ocean always remains stationary until even the end of June, sledges unprovided with boats might be despatched, and the possibility of reaching a higher latitude would then be very considerably increased. It would be gratifying to all interested in Arctic matters, remarked Sir George Nares in conclusion, to hear that in the United States it was contemplated to send out an Arctic expedition to extend our knowledge of those seas which might be said to belong peculiarly to themselves. There was still a wide field there for geographical and scientific research, but he was afraid that great difficulty would be found in advancing much nearer to the Pole, either in ships or by boats or sledges, by that route than has already been attained, unless, indeed, the coast of Greenland, contrary to his expectation, trends to the northward, beyond lat. 83.20.

Admiral Collinson said his experience in the Arctic regions led him to agree with the view that the game diminished as you proceeded further north. Any attempt to go into the ice to navigate it would be utterly futile, as the ship would be dependent on the current, which would carry it and the ice together. Admiral Richards said there had been good reason to believe that the land trended to the north from Smith's Sound, and had this been the case the North Pole might have been reached. A sledge could not travel over a frozen sea, and when Captain Nares found there was no land to the north he at once knew that it was impossible to reach the Pole. He maintained that sledge expeditions with the object of reaching the Pole had now become useless. He thought no mode of reaching the Pole existed. Admiral Ommanney said the discovery of the real Polar Sea was one of the most valuable results of the Expedition. He believed the conditions of the North Pole were somewhat similar to those of the South Pole. Captain Fielding, naturalist to the Expedition, quite agreed with Sir George Nares, both as to the paucity of animal life in the extreme north, and as to the few animals being permanent residents. It would appear, however, that there must have been a change within a comparatively recent period, for they had found on Ellesmere Land residences which had been inhabited in former days by Esquimaux, who had now all left that part of the world. Dr. Rae said that the experience of ice travelling was but a single experience, and it was known that the ice had not been found for two years in the same condition. He had himself conducted a surveying expedition with sledges upwards of 300 miles. He had never been much in favour of the Smith Sound route as a means of reaching the Pole. He thought that in the calculations as to the Polar regions notice had not been taken of the effect of the Siberian rivers in breaking up the ice. He thought that if sledges on his plan had been used the expedition could have got 100 miles further than they had done. Sir H. C. Rawlinson, who had been president of the society when the memorial in favour of the expedition had been sent to the Admiralty, said that the expedition had shown that if any further attempt to reach the Pole were made it must be by way of Spitzbergen.

The proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to Sir G. Nares.

FOREIGN IMPROVEMENTS IN CHINA.

The Morning Post, after enumerating the various articles of foreign manufacture, &c., which have been adopted by China, goes on to say in conclusion:—But whilst recording this progress in one part of the Empire we find elsewhere that the old leaven of dislike to foreign inventions still obtains. Our Consul at Chefoo gives an example of this as having been furnished in Weihsien, a town about eighty miles from that place, where coal abounds, and mining has been carried on as it might have been in the Patriarchal ages. A foreign merchant here introduced a mining pump, to be worked by mules, "and in an undemonstrative manner, by which means it was hoped that the susceptibilities of the officials would not be offended." But ere the machine arrived the latter notified that the mineowner for whom it was intended would not be allowed to purchase it, and the prohibition has never been removed, the only mode of obtaining relief from it being an application to the local magistrate—a process from which a native would be deterred by knowing that, should he present himself at the Yamen for the purpose, he would be mulcted so severely, if not also beaten and imprisoned on some plea or other, as to be left a ruined man. Nevertheless it is evident that the Chinese are beginning to look on foreign appliances and foreign enterprises as sources of greater wealth, and more extended means of supplying their wants, and they have given practical proof of this in the outlay they are making not only in mining companies, but in ships, guns, forts, as well as in the formation of steam-ship, banking, and insurance companies. They are not a stupid race, and in proportion as they find that the balance of advantage from intercommunication is largely in their favour they may be expected to grow less inimical to the presence of, and intercourse with foreigners.

CAPTAIN COOK.

A report has been received at the Admiralty from Commander Long, of Her Majesty's ship Fantome, giving a detailed description of the measures carried out by order of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty for the improvement of the site of the monument erected in Kealakekua or Karakakoa Bay, in the Island of Owhyhee, to the memory of the great circumnavigator, Captain Cook. Rear-Admiral the Hon. Arthur Cochrane, late Commander-in-Chief on the Pacific station, after visiting the islands in 1875, drew the attention of the Admiralty to the state of the monument, and on his application the Princess Likéliké (now Mrs. Cleghorn), the sister of the King of the Sandwich Islands, who originally presented a piece of ground as a site for the memorial, added to her former generosity by bestowing an additional plot of about half an acre for an enclosure. At the admiral's suggestion, the Admiralty, with the concurrence of the War-office, gave directions for twelve old 32-pounder guns, which were in store at Esquimalt, being conveyed to the Sandwich Islands for the purpose of forming a suitable fence. The monument is a plain obelisk of concrete, 27ft. in height, erected on the shore, and close to the spot where the great seaman fell. The expense of its erection was mainly borne by English subscribers interested in the island, amongst whom were Lady Franklin, Rear-Admiral Richards, Mr. Follett Synge, &c. The seaward base of the obelisk bears the following inscription:—

In memory of
The great Circumnavigator,
Captain James Cook, R.N.
Who discovered these Islands on 18th January, 1778.
And fell near this spot on 14th February, 1779.
This monument was erected in November, 1874,
By some of his fellow-countrymen.

The guns used for the enclosure of the site were conveyed from Esquimalt to Owhyhee in Her Majesty's ship Fantome, in September last. They have been fixed in the ground vertically at intervals, and connected by a chain, thus enclosing an area of ground of about 152ft. square, in which flowers and shrubs, kindly provided by the Rev. M. Davis, of the Church of England Mission, have been planted; also seeds of the algaroba tree, which is most suitable for the dry and rocky soil. Commander Long states that the appearance of the monument has been greatly improved, and that it is now quite sufficient for so disadvantageous a site. He suggests that if it should be desired to erect a better memorial, the addition of a "Captain Cook's Ward" to Honolulu Hospital would be an appropriate arrangement, and well fitted to perpetuate the memory of the distinguished discoverer of the islands, one of whose greatest cares was the health and comfort of his men.

THE SUEZ FRESH-WATER CANAL.

The inauguration of this work, which is destined to become an important adjunct to the Maritime Canal, is announced to take place on the 9th of April. The enlarged Fresh-Water Canal, when completed, next month, will be of much more considerable proportions than when first constructed and handed over to the Viceroy, with the lands which the Company were forced to retrocede twelve years ago. The idea of a branch connecting Lake Timsah, about the centre of the ship canal, with the Nile at Cairo, formed a part of the original scheme. It was intended to serve three purposes—to provide fresh water to the company's establishments in the great canal, and for the shipping using it; to serve for the navigation of boats and barges; and, lastly, to irrigate and bring under cultivation the large tract of country between the ship canal and Cairo. With respect to this last use, the results were so successful that when the Company were forced to relinquish this possession in 1864 it had already created the thriving estate of the Ouadi, for which the arbitral sentence of the Emperor Napoleon III. accorded to the Company an indemnity of 10,000,000 francs in the compromise with the Egyptian Government. The Fresh-water Canal was then a small rivulet compared with its present size. In length it was the same as at present, about 88 miles from Cairo to Ismailia, on Lake Timsah, but it was only 26 feet wide and 1 metre deep (3 feet 3 inches), although during the floods on the Nile the water in the Canal would rise as high as two or two and a half metres. The hostility of which the Company was the object in 1863 and 1864 will not have been forgotten. Some of the European Powers began to fear that it was acquiring so great a domination in Egypt—which might be exercised in the interest of France and to the prejudice of other countries—as to endanger the sovereign rights of the Viceroy, and after some negotiations the Company was compelled to give up its domain, and restrict its operations to the construction and working of the Maritime Canal. The Fresh-water Canal, which was then terminated, formed part of the property surrendered; but as the water was absolutely necessary for the establishments of the Company, the Egyptian Government, in taking possession, engaged to maintain the Canal in proper order, to keep up the banks and engineering works on it, and to keep the channel at its proper depth. That engagement was, however, so far neglected that in a short time the banks began to give way and the bed to become choked up with weeds, so that the navigation was not only stopped, but even the supply of water began to fail, although the Egyptian Government had engaged to keep up a flow of 70,000 tons daily at Ismailia. The utility of the Fresh-water Canal had, however, been sufficiently proved, for during one year that it had been navigable, even with its limited draught of water, the traffic on it by barges had amounted to over 100,000 tons, of which the principal imports were 20,000 tons of coal, and the exports 30,000 tons of cotton and 60,000 tons of cotton seed. In consequence of representations made by the Company, the Egyptian Government undertook to restore the Canal, and at the same time to widen it to 26 metres (180 feet), to deepen it to 3½ metres (11½ feet), and to maintain it at that depth at all times by locks. The works were contracted for by M. Brocart at the price of 2f. 50c. per cubic metre; but this contractor, instead of executing them himself, sublet them at a reduced price to other parties. The result was that they advanced very slowly, and, after the Viceroy had expended about 40,000,000f., nearly two-thirds of the Canal still remained to be executed. That contract was, in consequence, terminated, and M. Paponneau, who had formerly been charged with works for the Company, was recommended to the Viceroy by M. de Lesseps, and undertook the work at the rate of 90 centimes per cubic metre, or less than one-third of the price paid to the former contractor. At this moment commenced the financial difficulties of the Khedive, and although it was a condition that the payments should be made regularly in consideration of the low rate at which the contract was taken, the Egyptian Government is in arrear for a sum of about ten millions of francs, and the work would not now have been completed but for the assistance of the Company by advances to M. Paponneau. The Canal is, however, now nearly ready, and has been dug throughout to its entire depth. The official inauguration will take place on the 9th of April, and the Canal will be open for navigation in May, after the construction of some of the locks, which will not be quite ready at the former date. A Convention has been signed between the Egyptian Government and the Company, which will be charged with receiving the tolls, to be applied first to the extinction of the debt on the Canal. The Company is not interested in the work beyond the traffic it will bring to the Maritime Canal, as this will now become the highway between Cairo and the western part of the Delta and the Mediterranean and Red Seas. It is estimated that the consumption of coal at Cairo, and in that part of the country watered by the Fresh-water Canal, amounts to 190,000 tons annually. This is at present brought from Alexandria by barges or by rail, at a cost of f.13 per ton by the former mode and f.30 by the latter; by the new Canal the coal may reach Cairo without reshipment. As vessels will only use one half of the Maritime Canal—from Port Said to Lake Timsah—the tolls on it will be reduced in the same proportion. A large outward freight of corn, cotton, and cotton seed may also be counted on, as the Canal runs within fifty or 100 miles of the most distant parts of the four richest provinces in Egypt, or from one-half to one-fourth of the distance from Alexandria.

PRESBYTERIAN MISSION TO CHINA.—The annual public meeting of the United Presbyterian Student's Theological Hall Missionary Society has been held in Queen-street Hall, Edinburgh. Dr. Dudgeon, of the London Missionary Society, congratulated the Church on having at last seen its way to send a missionary to China. The great want in China was that the missionary societies should be more distributed, but that individuals should be more concentrated. Mission stations should be centres of light—seminaries, so to speak; for though all the missionaries in the world were to go to China they would not suffice to convert that country. That must be done by the Chinese themselves. The doctor went on to speak of the characteristics of the Chinese, their filial reverence, their patience, sobriety, frugality, industry, and their high civilisation. The two foreign evils in China were Roman Catholicism and the opium trade. He saw no reason why Roman Catholicism should not flourish, for it was exactly like Buddhism, the popular religion in China, but for the fact of its foreign connection and political aims. Denouncing the opium trade, he said that we deliberately inflicted curses on China from a selfish apprehension of possible evils to our own country. Missions had not been a failure in China, but a great success, more especially the medical missions.

Mr. WALTER BAGEHOT, the editor of the Economist, died on the 24th ult., after a few days' illness. He was born on the 3rd of February, 1826, and had therefore recently completed his fifty-first year. Mr. Bagehot contributed many essays to magazines and reviews, and wrote several works, of which the chief are his book on "The English Constitution," "Physics and Politics," and "Lombard-street." Mr. Bagehot was a Fellow of University College, London, and he was for a time Examiner in Political Economy in the University of London. He was more than once a candidate for a seat in Parliament, but never obtained one. Mr. Bagehot was proprietor and editor of the Economist, and conducted it with great ability up to the time of his death.

CHINESE PRINTING.—With reference to the forthcoming Caxton celebration, the Rev. G. E. Moul, the well-known missionary, writes to The Times contradicting the statement of Sir Charles Dilke that the Chinese language is one that can only be printed by their common method of woodcuts, or by some analogous plan with engraved surfaces. Mr. Moul says that, notwithstanding the multifarious word-signs which go to make up a Chinese book, millions of pages have been printed in the best style during several years past with metallic movable type. Early in the seventeenth century the use of movable type had been made known by the Jesuits to the Chinese Government, and a very costly and magnificent edition of the Imperial Lexicon was printed from copper types.

THE JAPANESE EMBASSY.—On the 27th ult. the Japanese Minister and Madame Wooyeno entertained the Dutch Minister and Countess de Bylandt, the Persian Minister and Princess Malcolm Khan, the Chinese Minister and the Chinese Vice-Minister, the Right Hon. W. E. Willans occupied the chair, and amongst those who took part in the meeting were Dr. Moffatt and Sir Charles Reed.

Naval and Military.

Field-Marshal Sir John Forster Fitzgerald, G.C.B., Colonel of the 18th Royal Irish, has died at Tours at the age of ninety-one. He was the son of Mr. Edward Fitzgerald, M.P., of Carrigoran. On the 29th of October, 1793, when only seven years old, he obtained a commission as ensign. In 1794 he was promoted to a lieutenancy, and in 1800 he was gazetted a captain of the 46th Regiment. He joined that regiment for duty in the following year, when only in his sixteenth year, and in 1803 became brevet major. He was present with the 60th Rifles at the siege of Badajos, and the battles of Salamanca, Vittoria, and the Pyrenees, together with many minor affairs. He was taken prisoner by the French at or after the battle of the Pyrenees, but subsequently exchanged. In 1830 he became a major-general, and in 1841 a lieutenant general, having in the interval commanded a division in the Bombay Presidency. He became general in 1854. In 1850 he obtained the colonelcy of the 18th Royal Irish, and in 1862 was created G.C.B. He sat as M.P. for Clare in the Liberal interest from 1852 to 1857. By order of the Minister of War the military honours paid to French officers of his rank were rendered to his remains, and the whole of the garrison escorted the body to the grave.

The Torpedo vessel Lightning made one of her rapid voyages down the river on the 23rd ult., with a view to giving the Naval Lords of the Admiralty an opportunity of inspecting her under steam, and of experiencing the somewhat novel sensation of being carried through the water at the rate of nineteen knots per hour. The party on board consisted of Admiral Sir Hastings Yelverton, Admiral Lord Gilford, Sir Massey Lopes, Sir Charles Adderley, President of the Board of Trade), Mr. Egerton, M.P., Admiral Stewart (Controller of the Navy), Admiral Boyes (Director of Naval Ordnance), and several other gentlemen. Owing to the crowded state of the river it was found impossible to go at more than half speed until nearly opposite Woolwich, when full steam was turned on, and a speed of about nineteen knots per hour maintained for half an hour. The vessel was then put about and brought back to London. Sir Hastings Yelverton and the other visitors expressed their entire satisfaction with the working of the little vessel, which will now receive the finishing touches at the hands of the builders, and be despatched to Portsmouth without delay.

Instructions have been issued from the Admiralty to the various dockyards at home, and also to Malta, Bermuda, and Hong Kong dockyards, for all ships having deep bilge keels as they come in hand to be fitted with hauling-down lines or chains for placing in position the service collision mats lately ordered to be provided. The hauling-down lines are to be fitted so that they can be rove through holes cut in the webs of the bilge keels, and they are to have their upper ends secured so that they may readily be made available for placing in position the mats referred to. These lines are to be placed about twelve feet apart over the length occupied by the engines and boilers, and passed under the keel from gunwale to gunwale. The lines need not be kept permanently in place, and arrangements are to be made for stowing them in suitable and convenient positions on board. The commanding officers of ships thus fitted are to take care that these hauling-down lines are rove occasionally for practice; they are also directed to take care that before going into action these lines are in their place ready for use should they be required.

Lieutenant-General C. A. Edwards has been appointed to the regimental Colonelcy, left vacant by the death of General J. Spink. General Edwards served with the 18th Royal Irish throughout the war in China (medal); was also present at the attack upon Canton, the taking of Amoy, Chapoo, Woo Sung, Shanghai, and Chin-Kiang, and at the concluding operations before Nanking; was employed on the Staff during the war, and afterwards appointed by Lord Gough Assistant Quartermaster-General to the force in China. He served also with the 18th Royal Irish in the Burmese war from July, 1852, to the conclusion; and in the Crimea from December, 1854, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol (medal with clasp, C.B., Brevet of Colonel, Knight of the Legion of Honour, Third Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). He also saw considerable service during the suppression of the Indian mutiny, and received the thanks of the Governor-General.

ship of Vice-Admiral Ryder, Egeria, Growler, Himalaya, Hornet, Midge, Swinger, and Sylvia. The Fly, gunboat, left on the 3rd Feb. for Foochow to relieve the Hornet. The Audacious went out of harbour on the 20th of February for gun practice, and returned on the 21st of February. The Vigilant left on the morning of the 20th for Canton. The Hornet arrived from Foochow on the 21st of February, and will be paid off on the 24th of February, and re-commissioned the same day by Commander Hippisley. The Midge was paid off and re-commissioned on the 17th by Commander Salmond. The Swinger and Growler were also paid off and recommissioned on the 17th of February, the latter vessel by Commander Willcox. The American gun-vessel Ashuelot arrived from Bangkok on the 19th of February. The foreign men-of-war in harbour were, the German gunboat Nautilus, American gunvessel Ashuelot, and the Portuguese gunboat Tejo.

Advices from Malta give details of the disablement and rescue of the Thetis. When fallen in with by the Devastation she had been out twenty-five days from Port Said, and having been only provisioned for six days, officers and crew were on quarter allowance, and in three more days nothing eatable would have been left on board. Soon after leaving Port Said the Thetis encountered very heavy weather, and while steaming head to wind her engines suddenly began racing round. They were promptly stopped, and then it was found that her screw had slipped completely down. Fortunately it was caught by the framework, but when docked at Malta every one was astonished that it had not been altogether lost. It was also discovered that she had lost a large portion of her keel, and the lower part of the rudder, when she recently grounded on the East African coast. The Devastation supplied the Thetis with provisions and towed her into Malta.

Commander James Alexander Gordon died last week, at the age of eighty-nine years. He entered the navy in 1804, on board the Ville de Paris, bearing the flag of Hon. William Cornwallis, in the Channel. He then served in the Mediterranean for four years, principally at the blockade of Toulon. He afterwards joined the Laurestinus, in which ship, having first visited the Rio de la Plata, and escorted a convoy to Halifax, he took part, as master's mate, in the hostilities against the Americans in the Chesapeake, and was present in the attack upon Crany Island. The Laurestinus was wrecked, on the Silver Keys, off the Bahamas, on the night of August 21, 1813, and Mr. Gordon came home, but soon after was appointed lieutenant of the Manly. He served in that vessel until paid off in September, 1815, and was again employed in the Chesapeake, and accompanied the expedition to New Orleans.

On the 22nd ult. the annual sessions of the Institute of Naval Architects were opened, and papers were read by Mr. N. Barnaby, C.B., the Director of Naval Construction for the Royal Navy, Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., and Mr. Michael Scott, the first upon "The Fighting Power of the Merchant Ship in Naval Warfare," the second "On Citadel Ships," and the third relating to the defence of ships against torpedoes. The meeting was held in the room of the Society of Arts. Lord Hampton presided, and, in addition to representatives of the German, French, and Italian Governments, there were present Admiral Sir Spencer Robinson, K.C.B., Admiral Sir F. Grey, Sir Travers Twiss, Mr. MacIver, M.P., Sir James Ramsden, Sir John Bennett, Mr. Bedford Pim, Mr. C. H. Wigram, Admiral Selwyn, Mr. J. D'A. Samuda, M.P., &c.

The engineering firm of Napier and Sons, on the Clyde, which has built many ships for the navy, and also engined them, have undertaken to repair the defective machinery supplied to the Opal. A foreman of the works is to be sent out to Callao to meet the Opal, and to assist in making such alterations as may be considered necessary, and new valve gear and other parts of the engines will be sent to be fitted. We believe the offer to undertake this work was voluntarily made by the firm, by which the whole of the expense connected with it will be borne, for they naturally feel that the constant allusions to the break-downs of the Opal is a matter which concerns the reputation of the constructors of the machinery. The original cost of the engines was £27,000.

A few days since the heavy iron rudder, weighing nearly thirteen tons, belonging to the armour plated ship Téméraire, was being lowered into the dock to be placed in position, when a new hawser 5½ in. in diameter, without any warning, snapped asunder, and the rudder fell with a crash into the bed of the dock, but fortunately without injuring any of the men standing beneath it. An examination of the rope, which had been tested at more than the weight of the rudder, showed that it had been cut half-way through, apparently with some sharp instrument, after it had been placed round the rudder, but whether maliciously or by accident is not known.

Captain Charles E. Stevens, commanding the Buracouta, is now on trial by court-martial, on eight charges, including, amongst others, overbearing and scandalous conduct. The Court has assembled on board the Duncan, flagship, at Sheerness, under the presidency of Rear-Admiral Fellowes, C.B., superintendent of Chatham Dockyard. Mr. W. Easclake, Deputy Judge-Advocate of the Fleet, has been appointed to officiate in that capacity, and Mr. G. P. Martin, R.N., barrister-at-law and Deputy Judge-Advocate at Portsmouth, is the Admiralty prosecutor.

Dr. Peter Suther, Deputy-Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets, the oldest medical officer of Her Majesty's Navy, and one of the few remaining Trafalgar heroes, has just died at Southsea. He entered the service early in the present century, and was surgeon of the Swiftsure at the famous battle in 1805. He was the last survivor of ninety-eight medical officers who were present on that eventful day. There are still, however, on the Navy list the names of five officers under Nelson and Collingwood at the battle in Trafalgar Bay.

An Admiralty notification states that letters have been received from Vice-Admiral Ryder, in the Audacious, at Hong Kong, up to the 1st of February. The Nassau, having thoroughly refitted, had left Hong Kong for the Haitan Straits, to commence surveying the coast between Shanghai and Hong Kong. The Sylvia had arrived at Hong Kong to refit. The Midge and Swinger were at Hong Kong refitting; the Hornet and Growler were close at hand for recommissioning. The Juno, senior officer, was in the Straits of Malacca.

A difficulty has arisen, and considerable correspondence has taken place, with regard to the services in the garrison church at Portsmouth. Objection has been taken by some members of the congregation to the following practices:—First, the placing of a movable cross on a ledge, called a retable, at the back of and above the Communion Table; secondly, that the officiating chaplains have assumed "the eastward position" during portions of the Communion Service.

The Active, which was commissioned by Captain Sir W. N. W. Hewett, in October, 1873, arrived at Spithead on the 28th ult. from the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa. During her commission of three years and a half the Active has rendered a good deal of service, her officers and crew having furnished the greater part of the naval brigade during the Ashantee war, and having also taken part in the more recent expedition up the Niger River.

Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Webster, late of the 78th Highlanders (Rosshire Buffs), a Military Knight of Windsor, on the Royal Foundation, died on the 25th ult., at his residence, the Upper Ward, Windsor Castle, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. Lieutenant-Colonel Webster went through the Indian Mutiny, served in Canada, and was awarded two medals and clasps. He was elected a Military Knight four years ago.

Rear-Admiral W. Houston Stewart, C.B., has assumed the superintendence of Portsmouth dockyard for a period of six weeks, for the purpose of enabling him to complete his sea-time for promotion. He will be then succeeded by Rear-Admiral the Hon. F. A. C. Foley, the late Captain-Superintendent at Sheerness, for the ordinary term of five years, Admiral Stewart returning to the Admiralty.

Damage to the extent of more than £1,000 has been done to the new pier of the Royal Arsenal, by the Messageries Maritimes steamer Copernic. During a dense fog, the steamer ran, stem on, into the pier; and destroyed much of the hydraulic machinery connected with the cranes, and carrying away her own figurehead.

Arrangements have been concluded with Sir William Armstrong's firm at Elswick for mounting the guns on the Spithead forts on hydraulic carriages, the invention of Mr. George Rendel. The forts will be armed with eight 38-ton guns, the muzzle-pivoting of which will enable them to be worked through small embrasures.

Lieut. de Zubovitz, of the Austrian army, whose ride from Vienna to Paris may be remembered, has just performed the fresh exploit of crossing the Danube at the former city, where the river is very wide, mounted on a horse provided with a floating apparatus of which he is the inventor.

Major Montgomerie, 20th Hussars, succeeds Lieut.-Colonel Barker, 64th Regiment, appointed Assistant-Director of Military Education, as Professor of Military History at the Staff College. Major Montgomerie served throughout the suppression of the Indian Mutiny.

On the 10th inst. Lord Napier of Magdala paid a visit to the Chinese gunboat Gamma, at Gibraltar, being received on board by the officers of the ship. The Gamma and Delta sailed the same day for China.

Owing to the decease of Sir T. F. Fitzgerald, the Duke of Cambridge and the Prince of Wales are now the only two Field-Marshals in the British army.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, MARCH 20.

The political "evenement" of the past week has been the journey of General Ignatieff and his visit to London. Many people are sanguine enough to take this visit as an indication of a peaceful solution of the Eastern question, but I can scarcely think that we can take this for granted. The better instructed people here look upon the journey of General Ignatieff only as an attempt to delay the military operations till better weather sets in, and the Russians are enabled to commence hostilities with more chance of success. The weather here during the past week has been of a more spring-like character, which has been of very much benefit to the soil, as the high winds are drying up the accumulating moisture.

The Imperial Minister of Marine at Berlin, General Von Stosch, has resigned, owing to a difference between the Minister and Prince Bismark. The Minister, who during the last war was General Intendant of the Army, is at present fifty-nine years of age, and well-known for his organising talents. It must be acknowledged that he has brought into perfect order the administration of the German Navy, which was not at all the case with his predecessor, Vice-Admiral Jachmann. The 22nd of March will be a holiday all through Germany, being the eightieth birthday of the Emperor. Great preparations are being made everywhere, and especially at Berlin, to celebrate the day.

I learn upon good authority that the negotiations between Spain and Germany regarding the Sooloo affair have progressed very satisfactorily, and that a treaty on this subject is on the eve of being signed by Spain, Germany, and England. It appears that this treaty stipulates that all the Sooloo harbours which are not actually under Spanish control shall be opened for trade to all nations; but in the ports which are already under Spanish authority (flying the Spanish flag) foreign vessels will have to pay certain dues when in harbour. This treaty, of course, will benefit all seafaring nations, and at the same time put an end to the many vexations hitherto experienced. Any damage which may have been done to foreign vessels by Spanish men-of-war in bringing such vessels to, is to be paid in full.

Prince Heinrich, the grandson both of the German Emperor and of the Queen of England, will next month enter the navy at Kiel, and will be conducted thither by his father, the Crown Prince, who on this occasion will also pay a visit to Hamburg. As the Prince intends to stay here a few days our Senate is making preparations for a suitable reception of the future Emperor. Amongst other festivities a grand banquet will take place. Whether the Crown Princess will accompany her husband and son is not yet decided. The Imperial Parliament during the last few days has been earnestly debating the Budget. In regard to this it is noticeable that the German Empire has arrived at that position which for a good many years has been the standing rule with all, or most civilised Governments, viz., a deficit. The estimated expenditure is for the first time heavier than the receipts, and some means must be found to balance the account. Prince Bismark's advice is to increase the contributions of the Governments of which the German Empire is composed, but a final conclusion has not yet been arrived at.

In order to contribute as much as possible to the abolition of piracy in China waters, our marine authorities have given orders for the building of a new gunboat, of a special description. To enable this vessel to pursue the Chinese pirate-craft into shallow water, it will be constructed with a so-called false keel, so as to be of exceptionally light draft when the latter is taken up. The vessel will be built by Mr. Lohichan at Elbing, at whose establishment many orders have been executed to the full satisfaction of the Marine Board.

The International Rank of Hamburg has fixed its annual meeting of shareholders for the 19th of April. The dividend to be declared has not yet been advertised.

The English steamship Consolation, 770 R.T., of Leith, with engines of 150-horse power, has been chartered by Messrs. Dieckmann and Co. for a voyage to the Amoor river, on private terms, and is now loading in our harbour. It was first intended by the charterers to send one of the steamers of the Deutsche Dampfschiffs Rhederei, but the latter Company, whose vessels are of large size and consequently of great draught, while the Amoor river contains many shallow spots, declined the charter, and selection was therefore made of the Consolation, which is a fine boat of 250 feet length and only four years old.

Some attention has been directed of late to the Eastern Siberian Trading Company. The annual meeting of shareholders is to take place shortly, and some interest is felt with regard to it, in consequence of its manager and founder, Mr. Luhdorf, having gone to the Amoor to investigate the establishment, one of the chief managers having resigned.

HAMBURG, MARCH 27.

The political situation is regarded here as well as all through Germany as dark as possible, and it cannot be denied that some ill-feeling is perceptible here and there against the leaders of the English politic. The last week on our Exchange therefore was a very agitated one. At the commencement of it the hopes of a peaceful settling of the pending questions between Russia and England brought all the papers to a raise, and the business during several days was very animated, but at the end of the week, when the telegraph reported the departure of General Ignatieff from London, without any material success, rates again went rapidly down, leaving the Exchange in such a state of decided desperation that notwithstanding the bad consequences by which every war is followed, still anyone would prefer a full, burning war, to the present fatal hanging between heaven and earth, which cannot fail at last to ruin the business of whole Europe altogether.

The Imperial Parliament last Saturday has commenced the Easter holidays, and will not re-assemble before the 10th of April.

The Deutsche Dampfschiffs Rhederei at Hamburg, trading between our town and the China ports, issues its report and balance-sheet for the past year, and states in it that a dividend for 1876 cannot be distributed. The whole net profits only reach the small sum of m.9,910 (or £500), and the directors take it as necessary to make the usual rebates, in consequence of which a total loss of m.437,228 is the result of the year. The Company has at present eight large steamers, viz., Atalanta, Bellona, Cassandra, Egeria, Feronia, Galatea, Hesperia, and Olympia, in addition to which the establishment owns the lighter China. The new steamer Hesperia was delivered in the beginning of last summer, and has taken immediately her place among the other ships of the line; the first voyage of this vessel to Shanghai and return has proved her to be very convenient for the purposes of this company. The Board states the position of the company as a healthy one, notwithstanding the considerable loss of the past year; as this loss is only the consequence of the very low rates of freight and the remarkable competition in the trading with China, an improvement in this respect —say the directors—is very probable to occur, and the company will undoubtedly participate in it.

The Hamburg American Steamship Company shows in its report just issued a gross profit of m.2,256,453 for the past year; the company has sold four of her large steamers in 1876 and thus suffered a loss of m.680,498, in addition to which charges for preference shares had to be paid to the amount of m.721,908, in consequence of which a net profit of only m.854,076 remains. The directors have considered it as necessary to make considerable rebates of value of her fleet, and by these not only the above mentioned net profit is absorbed, but the balance-sheet shows a total loss of m.3,449,871. A dividend for the past year therefore cannot be distributed, but the directors are stating the position of their company, now that all rebates and writings off are made, as a quite healthy one.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Business in our Produce Markets has been of very limited extent during the past week, a speculative demand did not exist, and the consumption held itself aloof as usual before the Easter holidays. The Money Market remains well supplied.

TEA has been quiet, the following first-hand parcels changed owners, viz., 365/8 boxes Congou and 104/8 boxes Souchong.

Of COTTON only a few American lots have been sold.

SPICES.—Nutmegs m.5.60 to 6.20, Mace m.5.40 to 40 per kilo.; Cloves are firm, Zanzibar quality m.142 to 145; Pepper dull, Singapore quality m.39 to 39¼; Penang quality m.36½ to 37 per 50 kilo.

Exchange: London three months, m.20.37 to 20.31 per £.

SHIPPING.

Shipping has gone on on a middling scale, but for East India and China neither arrivals nor departures are to be reported. The steamship Galatea (Deutsche Dampfschiffs Rhederei) is advertised to leave on the 5th April, to be followed on the 10th May by the Atalanta, s.s., both to the usual route to Penang, Singapore, and China. Of sailing vessels have taken the berth:—Anna, Moennich, for Singapore; Gerhardine, Hansen, for Singapore and Penang; Ino, Mahn, for Bangkok; Vesta, Schoemer, for Manila; Vega, Norditvedt, Adolph, Horn, and Woodvilles, Nelson, all three for Hong Kong; and Bernhard Carl, Lueders, for Hiogo and Yokohama.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MARCH 26.

The Members of the Second Chamber have at last passed the ninefold Judicial Bill by 39 against 26 votes. This matter has, therefore, become an accomplished fact. The Minister Van Lynden has obtained a complete success, though he had great trouble with les résistances de détail. As a political intermezzo we were entertained amidst this judicial debate with a very long discussion about the very trifling question that, upon the order of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, the board of the Papal-consul at Amsterdam was taken away. I need not add that this matter was brought up only with the aim of addressing some vehement hostilities to the Minister for Foreign Affairs. The M.P.'s will remain together still some days, in order to deal with some Bills to be laid before them, but then they will start definitely to enjoy their recess. In the meanwhile, the Members of the First Chamber have been convoked again to hammer up several Bills which were carried by the Second Chamber. In consequence of the decision to defer the examination in Committee of the Bill modifying the electoral law until after the Easter recess, this measure cannot be passed in due time to be applied at the general elections in the month of June next, which was desired by the Government. The Cabinet has thus been placed under the necessity of introducing, independently of the Electoral Bill which was already presented, a measure to increase the number of members of Parliament by four. This measure is already brought forward in the Council of State, and will be passed by the Members of Parliament before they start to enjoy their recess.

A good deal is said in the papers about the fact that Mr. G. De Vries Az, M.P., was appointed a member of the Council of State. He being a Liberal, this fact has caused a good deal of surprise, and was applauded as much as the appointment of Mr. Baumhauer as inspector of the lower class education in North Holland was condemned. The last-named gentleman has thought it his duty not to accept the honour given to him.

The Minister of the Colonial Department has replied to the report from the Committee on his Bill to reorganise the monetary question in Java. He still doubts whether it is desirable to introduce gold coin into Java, even if it were accepted in Holland; but at the same time he does not think that any troubles would follow, if the ten-guilders pieces become a standard coin there. He says further, that it will be of no use to introduce into Java gold pieces of twelve guilders (sovereigns).

A revival in business on 'Change took place last Friday, especially in Russian and Austrian funds, which advanced from 2 to 4 per cent. A trifling demand prevailed for shares, or rather the shares of the Dutch Indian Trading Bank made the exception. They are preferred to the shares of the Trading Company, because the capital is not so large that it can be used even in times such as the present, when it is very difficult to find ready employment for it. Since the enlargement of the capital, which took place last year, the shares met with a good demand, so that now a price is paid for them of 125 per cent. It is rumoured that the dividend for last year will be declared at 12 per cent., whilst there are some who foretell a dividend of 15 per cent. I really do not know which figure may be trusted, but it seems that the lively demand of the last few days must be adhered to the items which were received from Java by the last mail.

The report has been published about the state of the Rotterdam Bank, the capital being fixed at f.6,327,375. The operations in bills have given a net profit of f.470,000, of which 6 per cent. can be paid to the shareholders. The business of the Bank attained to the figure of 325 millions.

The Dutch India Gas Company held some days ago an extraordinary meeting of shareholders at Rotterdam. The managers stated that endeavours had been made in order to secure manufactories in Sourabaya and Zamarang, and that they had been successful. The general state is most satisfactory. A dividend of 10 per cent. will be announced for the year 1876. To meet the monetary wants the 1,200 bought-in shares will be offered at a minimum rate of 132 per cent., ex-dividend of 1876. The subscription will be opened here, as well as in India.

Mr. G. Kolff has issued a circular to ask contributions in behalf of the instruction of Javanese of much promise.

The Society for Promoting the Welfare of the Javanese has been dissolved. A permanent committee has been established, in order to promote the lower class instructio. amongst our natives in the East.

H.M. has granted an honourable dismissal to Mr. D. de Clercq, on he 1st of May, as secretary of the Trading Company.

Prince Frederick started for Berlin, in order to attend the festivals which will be given in honour of the eightieth birthday of H.M. the Emperor of Russia.

The transactions in our markets for Colonial Produce have been very dull. Only some demand prevailed for direct wants and for export. Most of the second-hand produce maintained a fair price.

PERAK AND LARUT.

MR. ADAMSON deserves the thanks of all who take an interest in the Malay Native States for the good use he made of his time during a recent visit to Perak and Larut. The results of the information collected and the observations made in the course of that trip were published at length in the Singapore Daily Times on Feb. 12. Mr. ADAMSON'S Notes, in themselves full of interest, throw a great deal of light upon the present state of things in Larut and Perak; but they will not do much, we fear, to help Lord CARNARVON. Peace and good order have been restored, and cultivation is being steadily resumed, and the one thing again made clear —a thing already perfectly well known to those acquainted with Malays—is that native races are very easily governed; the Chinese immigrants of course must be firmly controlled, and no oppression by the chiefs can be allowed; but the mass of the people are quiet and inoffensive, and if only left undisturbed, govern themselves. Mr. ADAMSON, after pointing out that the natives were grossly oppressed by their chiefs, great and small, pertinently asks what these gentry had ever done to merit the good will of the people? They were rulers, they were Malays, they were Mohammedans, and they were put away by the white man; these causes may combine to feed some sympathy for their fate; but the people seemed on the whole in different, and there appears every reason to suppose that in a very few years the sympathy excited will pass away, and only the less easily effaced recollection of continuous oppression and extortion will survive. This view would be very encouraging if a policy of annexation had been adopted; but if we appoint a new batch of chiefs, morally no superior to their predecessors, and exposed to the same temptations, will not the old evils reappear? A few main roads are being opened up, and a readjustment of taxation is in prospect; all this is very wise, if only too many changes are not attempted at once, if slowness, judgment, and caution are displayed. We should be glad also to feel sure that the risks to be apprehended from a sudden ill-controlled influx of Chinese into new districts are being kept well in view. The slavery difficulty is perhaps the most dangerous question; the public at home will not hear of recognition in any form, yet in fact we cannot abolish slavery unless we annex the country, which we are not prepared to do. As Mr. ADAMSON rightly hints, debt-slavery can only be got rid of by revolutionising the laws of debtor and creditor, and the establishment of a system of police. It is a pity that some conclusion has not been arrived at, with respect at least to Perak and Larut, for as long as it remains uncertain whether we are going to withdraw our protectorate or permanently take over the control of the country, cultivation, immigration, and the outlay of capital are all retarded, the people wait the turn of events, and commerce is paralysed by uncertainty.

THE HONG KONG CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND THE BLOCKADE QUESTION.

UNUSUAL as it is to make a special protest against the appointment of a tried official to a given office, and unpleasant as such a duty must necessarily be, we think the Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong have acted with equal courage and temperance in expressing a strong and definite opinion against Sir BROOKE ROBERTSON being on the Commission to inquire into the Blockade question. No one who is acquainted with Sir BROOKE, either officially or as an individual, can fail fully to endorse the eulogium which was passed by the Chairman and by other speakers upon his high character and upon the rectitude of his intentions; but, on the other hand, no one who has had occasion to study his voluminous despatches and memoranda with reference to the Customs Blockade can be unaware of the very strong bias which he has in favour of the Chinese view of the subject, or fail to be convinced, in consequence, of his unfitness for taking part in the proceedings of a Commission whose functions are of a semi-judicial character. There was a great deal of truth in the remark made by a legal gentleman at the meeting of the Hong Kong Chamber that it would be as inconsistent for Sir BROOKE ROBERTSON to sit upon the Commission with reference to the Blockade as it would be for a man with a bias to sit upon a jury; and we can only trust that Sir BROOKE will have the good sense and good taste to decline a post which ought never to have been offered to him.

The remarks made by the Chairman of the Hong Kong Chamber upon the manner in which the report of the Commission which sat some years back in the Colony, to investigate this question, was treated, were undoubtedly well called for. Abundant evidence, well confirmed by collateral proof, in the form of facts notorious to every one in Hong Kong was at that time forthcoming; but because this testimony was not of an entirely conclusive character, it was rejected as spurious by the very people who were ready to accept almost without question the bare statement of the Chinese Mandarins. The latter of course had the charm of being "official;" but what value this may be in China can be easily judged of by the admissions of those as, for instance, Sir THOS. WADE, who are most inclined to give them very patient treatment. Had more attention been paid to the facts set forth in that report there can be no doubt that the subject would not be by any means so complicated as it is at present. According to the information which has been by degrees dragged forth, there is no question but that the Hoppo of Canton obtains a large amount of taxation on the trade of Hong Kong; which looking, at the matter in any possible light, is entirely in excess of what he is entitled to levy. It is hoped, however, that, under the Chefoo Convention, the matter may at last be adjusted upon a reasonable and fair basis; and there can be no doubt that some understanding with the Imperial authorities on the subject will be the best means of arriving at a satisfactory solution of the difficulty. It is not to be overlooked that one element in the matter is the independence of Imperial authority of the Hoppo's local revenue. This, that official has so far as the internal Government of China is concerned, an undoubted right to, and he is, as has been abundantly proved, quite prepared to maintain that right, even if in so doing he has to go counter to the treaties between his own Government and foreign countries. This difficulty can be overcome only by action on the part of the Central Government; and we make no doubt that this plan will be attempted when due arrangements have been made. It is, perhaps, more than doubtful whether the Peking authorities could do this without our aid in one form or another; and it will be essential, in finally coming to an understanding, not to overlook that we shall, in any arrangement for the collection of duties in Hong Kong, or for giving returns of the trade with the Colony to the officials at Canton, be doing more than merely co-operating in the ordinary sense of the word. We shall virtually be supplying the moral, and to some extent probably the physical force necessary to enable the Central Government to stand against an undue stretch of the prescriptive rights of the Canton Hoppo. It is satisfactory to note that the Hon. Mr. RYRIE, the Chairman of the Hong Kong Chamber who has for years studied this subject very closely, looks hopefully upon the steps which are to be taken under the new Convention, and should that document be ratified, and prove successful only in putting an end to this much-vexed question, it will be of essential service to our trading interests in the south of China.

THE Aborigines Protection Society have for some time back intended to wait upon H.E. POPE HENNESSY, the Governor designate for Hong Kong, but, owing to a misapprehension as to the date of his departure, the projected interview did not take place. We learn, however, that the Secretary of the Society has called his attention to some statements which had been brought under their notice to the effect that schooners fitted out at Hong Kong had been engaged in kidnapping natives at the Pellew Islands, and requesting him to ascertain whether these allegations were true. If anything of the kind be attempted at Hong Kong it can probably be put a stop to under the strong local Ordinances which were passed in that Colony some time back with a view to putting an end to vessels fitting out there to be employed in conducting the coolie traffic at Macao. Should the provisions of the existing Ordinances not be quite wide enough, a short supplementary Ordinance extending their range of action could be easily introduced.

THE new rates of postage for Ceylon, the Straits, Labuan, and Hong Kong, which came into operation on the 1st April, are as follows:—Viâ Southampton or viâ Marseilles: Letters, 6d. per ½ oz.; post cards, 3d. each; newspapers, 1d. per 4 oz.; other printed papers, legal and commercial documents, and patterns, 2d. per 2 oz. Viâ Brindisi: Letters, 8d. per ½ oz.; post cards 4d. each; newspapers, 2d. per 4 oz.; other printed papers, legal and commercial documents, and patterns, 3d. per 2 oz.

OUR attention has been directed to an error which has been made in the version which appeared in these columns of the remarks made by H.E. KWO to the deputation from the Anti-Opium Society which recently waited upon him. He was reported to have said that the Dutch intended cultivating opium in Sumatra; but we are informed his intention was to convey an opposite impression, and to state that the Dutch regulations aim at restricting the use of the drug.

WE learn that no confirmation has been received in official quarters of the telegram, which is reproduced elsewhere, to the effect that the Sultan of PERAK had been forcibly arrested.

THE Treaty between England, Germany, and Spain, with reference to Sulu, will, we understand, shortly be laid before Parliament.

LECTURING THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I entirely endorse the remarks which you have made in your paper with reference to the deputation from the Anti-Opium Society to the Chinese Envoys, and the proposed meeting of working-men to express their opinions upon the China question. I have long ceased to have any direct interest either in China or in the Opium trade, and have therefore no concern, except as a lover of justice, in upholding either our relations with China generally, or the Opium traffic in particular. But I know enough of both to be only too painfully aware that their true nature is constantly misrepresented by those who have either had no opportunity of studying the subject or are blinded by prejudices with regard to it. People so influenced go far beyond the views of the Chinese officials themselves in their advocacy of Chinese wrongs; they have done infinite harm to our relations with China by their intemperate harangues, and will assuredly do more if they be allowed to thrust themselves forward here, and in respect to the most delicate and complicated questions, "rush in where angels fear to tread." Could anything be conceived more ridiculous than the exhibition at the recent deputation of the Anti-Opium Society? Lord Shaftesbury, Mr. Mark Stewart, and the Rev. Dr. Legge, assured the Envoys that the Chinese had been and were being dreadfully treated by our Government and this country, and that it was our undoubted duty to put down the Opium trade with India. The Envoys were evidently only very slightly impressed with the tremendous wrong that was being done to them, as well they might be, seeing that £10 import duty and any amount of local taxes go into the Chinese coffers upon every chest of the drug imported, and that the Chinese as well as the Indian Government derive a handsome revenue both from the imported drug and that which is grown in China. I could not help being reminded of an old story of a criminal, who, while he was being tried for a brutal assault, was weak enough to burst out crying, to the discomfiture of the learned gentleman who was defending him. On being remonstrated with, his excuse was, "why, Sir, until I heard you a-speaking so beautiful I did not know what an injured man I was." The Chinese Envoys were evidently intended to be melted into tears in a similar way by the deputation, but had a little more fortitude and diplomatic coolness than to display any such weakness. The plain fact is, they are acquainted with the merits of the question, but, unlike the anti-opiumists, they are sensible enough to know what is possible and what is not; and if they consider opium-smoking open to abuse, are, I suspect, pretty well aware that, however desirable it might be to put it down, it would, especially in the present state of China, be at least as difficult to do so as it would be to put down dram-drinking in England. But upon one point I think it highly necessary to enter a protest against the declamations of the Anti-Opium Society, the friends of the working men, and others who consider themselves called upon to take up the China question. Both the Anti-Opium meeting and the working men's meeting desired to disclaim "national responsibility," as if they were the whole nation. If they represented the Queen and the conjoined members of the Houses of Lords and Commons, they could not very well assume more. Surely it is possible to take up such a subject without offending the self-respect of their fellow countrymen. One would imagine that they actually gloried in clothing themselves in sackcloth and ashes. It is surely enough to have expiation when we have really offended, without indulging in it when the imputations made against us are false. What but a morbid love of self-accusation and repentance could possibly have induced Mr. Mark Stewart to assert that the blame of the first importation of the drug into China rested with this country, when even if his reading comprehended only the literature of the best-known Blue-books on the subject he would have found it does not? The Chinese are perfectly well aware that the drug first found its way into China from Assam, and that the Portuguese trafficked in it before the English. This is a fact which ought to be known, even if it should stint the commons of those who cannot sleep unless they have supped upon dust and ashes.

I think it has been made abundantly clear by the answer of the Envoy that the Chinese are far more sensible than those who wish to lug out worn and useless "skeletons in the closets" as to our past relations with China. The accusations as to forcing Opium upon the Chinese are gross exaggerations, if they are not entirely unfounded, as some of those most strongly, but more wisely, opposed to Opium smoking are prepared to admit. Most assuredly the Chinese of their own motion would never make so ridiculous an assertion, though they may do so in some instances when foreigners put the words into their mouths. The merits of the Arrow war may be doubted; but it was certainly not without grave provocation; but the Chinese are aware that since the time when the last treaty was ratified, that is in 1860, or now nearly seventeen years ago, they have been treated by us with fairness and forbearance; and they have the common sense to see no good in raking up past grievances, upon which the more enlightened have long ceased to have any deep feeling. Nothing, therefore, can be more ill-advised than to drag to the front old and forgotten troubles, and especially to seize every opportunity to do so in a manner unfavourable to ourselves; and above all, in a way which, as you justly pointed out in your article, is calculated to increase the difficulties on the part of the Chinese Envoys in conducting the negotiations they have to bring to a conclusion in connection with the Convention, and in respect to other difficult and intricate questions. If such a meeting as the proposed meeting of working men took place with a view, as one of the speakers at the preliminary conference suggested, of strengthening the hands of the Chinese Envoys, in negotiating, is it not just possible that Her Majesty's Government will be less inclined to yield on points upon which they would otherwise be disposed to give in, when by doing so it might appear to the public here, to the Chinese Envoys, and to the officials and the people in China, that they had allowed themselves to be influenced by a quasi-mob demonstration in the conduct of the negotiations. If Mr. Gladstone and his supporters could not move Lord Derby with respect to the Eastern question, we may be pretty certain that the Anti-Opium Society, even if supported by the "working men of London," will not be permitted to "bring pressure to bear" upon him on the China question.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

OUR POSITION IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The rejoinder from your correspondent "D." to my recent communication is so temperate, courteous, and well-considered, that it demands a full reply; but in order not to weary your readers by lengthening out an abstract argument, I will endeavour to be as brief as possible.

It is clear, as "D." states, he is fully entitled to claim me as an associate, and I feel honoured that he should do so. The difference between us, as between most people who argue about Chinese progress, is only one of degree; and I doubt whether this difference is likely to exist as to practical matters though it is frequently found in abstract discussion. I ventured to assert that if the Chinese obtain the rights and privileges of citizens in other countries it would be reasonable that the same privileges should be accorded to us in China. To this your correspondent objects that exterritoriality stands in the way, and such privileges cannot be granted so long as that is the case; and he assumes that I desire a one-sided opening up of China based on exterritoriality. This does not precisely represent my view. All I hold is that as legal reforms are proverbially the slowest, we must endeavour to induce the Chinese to adopt more material improvements before the time will have arrived for removing the protection now afforded to foreigners under the Treaties. These improvements themselves will, if introduced judiciously, be the most natural step towards such improved administration as will render exterritoriality unnecessary. This done away with, there is nothing between me and your correspondent "D.;" we both desire to see a gradual assimilation of China to a European standard of civilisation. He considers that the removal of exterritoriality would be the means of attaining this, and I, that it would be the result of doing so. If we take Japan as an example, we there find that legal reform has come last, and that while the Japanese have advanced considerably in every other department, they are still labouring to obtain a suitable code of laws, and have not yet attained to the point where exterritoriality could be given up. The same problem has to be solved in China, and we may reasonably suppose that the order of events will be much the same. If we wait for progress in China until exterritoriality can be abandoned, we shall have to wait for ever; as, until some material progress has been made, the legal and administrative reforms necessary to make it safe for us to yield up our exterritorial privileges will be also delayed, and so long as this is the case the protection which is now accorded by the Treaties cannot with safety be abandoned.—Your obedient servant,

A GOOD CLEARANCE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I came across the subjoined little clipping in my San Francisco files:—

The Governor of Hong Kong, by an act of grace before his departure from office, liberated 100 Chinese prisoners on condition that they leave Hong Kong for ever.

I remember when in Hong Kong that Sir Richard Macdonell used to be pretty free with his conditional pardons—the "condition," by the way, being that the criminals should be branded—but I never heard even of him sending off a hundred at a time. I am afraid the correspondent must have drawn just a little on his imagination.—Yours truly,

THE WORKING MENS MEETING.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Excuse my pointing out that the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade cannot claim the credit as your leader of yesterday's date would lead your readers to suppose, of originating and conducting the Working Men's movement, which was inaugurated by the meeting of 22nd inst. In fact, the Anti-Opium Society, as a society, has no responsibility in the matter, and only a few individual members of the Society have, as yet, any knowledge of it. The circular of invitation, of which you had a copy, bears the names of the secretaries of three societies, viz., the Peace Society, the Aborigines Protection Society, and my own. Five out of the seven speakers announced in that circular are not connected with this society. Honour to whom honour is due. The Anti-Opium Society does not include all the opponents of our past and present policy toward China. Many distinguished men believe that our hitherto treatment of China has been seriously blameworthy, and heartily desire to place the alliance of the two countries on a better and surer basis, who do not see their way to a practical treatment of the Opium difficulty, and have not joined our Society. We have broken into China by violence, we have established Treaty relations at the cannon's mouth, we have forced our trade, calicoes as well as opium, upon a reluctant Government by the bayonet. Every one who knows China is well aware that our present position there rests upon the basis of physical force. Some of us are well content with this state of things; others are heartily ashamed of it as a disgrace to our civilisation and to our Christianity. So far from admitting that there was an inevitable necessity for the production of this undesirable state of things, they believe, after retrospect of the facts, that the shortsightedness and blundering of the British Government, the selfish impatience of the British mercantile community, are equally with Chinese arrogance and exclusiveness responsible for it. While the past can never be undone, they do not regard the existing state of things as utterly incapable of amelioration, and they desire to terminate the policy of coercion and substitute for it a policy of conciliation. A few gentlemen animated by these sentiments started the movement among the working-men, and they will not be discouraged by a thin attendance on a night of sleet and snow in this "roaring moon of March," at a very imperfectly advertised meeting; but mean to persevere in the work they have taken up.

One word more. It never entered anybody's imagination that this working-men's movement would issue in a deputation to the Chinese Envoys, or in any direct communication with the Embassy whatever. It is meant to encourage the Envoys by assuring them through the reports printed in the newspapers that there is a spirit of justice and goodwill toward China, among the British public, and not by any direct approach to H. E. Kuo. Whether or no the British workman is, more than any other portion of our community, a proper person to be invited to such a meeting may be a disputed point. At least he is tolerably free from prejudice in the matter, and his true interests lie in the direction of the extension of peaceful and legitimate commerce in China.—I am, &c., F. S. TURNER, Secretary Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade.

HONG KONG GENERAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

[Summarised from the China Mail.]

The annual general meeting of the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce took place on 12th February, the Hon. P. Ryrie in the chair. There were present the Hon. W. Keswick, H. H. Nelson, Kahn, Belilios, Hoppius, MacKenzie, Thompson, Mendel Welsh, Pustau, G. Sharp, and Nissen. The matters of general importance noticed in the Report are as follows:—

The Blockade of the Port of Hong Kong by Chinese Customs' Cruisers—It is noted that under the Convention concluded between Great Britain and China at Chefoo, on September 13th, 1876, it has been arranged that a Chinese Official, a British Consul, and an Official selected by the Hong Kong Government shall meet to discuss, and, if possible, satisfactorily arrange, the points at issue. The Parliamentary Papers published, prove the correctness of the statements put forward from time to time by the Chamber, even Her Britannic Majesty's Consul at Canton admitting (contrary to all his previous statements in defence of the Blockade) that extra and excessive duties were irregularly levied on the trade of the Colony. The Committee learn with regret that Her Majesty's Minister at Peking has appointed Sir Brooke Robertson a member of the Blockade Commission.

Opening of the Ports of Hoihow (K'iungchow) in Hainan, and of Haiphong in Tonquin.—The Chamber consider both ports will probably, in the course of time, become centres of a moderate trade; but under present circumstances improvement must necessarily be slow. Were the working of the mines known to exist permitted, it would no doubt tend to develop them more rapidly.

Opening of Pakhoi.—The Committee note with satisfaction that amongst the ports to be opened to trade under the Chefoo Convention is that of Pakhoi. Although but little is accurately known of its capabilities, its repute amongst the Chinese bears testimony to its tradal activity. It is, however, right to add that recent reports from European visitors describe Pakhoi as but a small town, containing not more than some ten thousand inhabitants. Its importance in Chinese eyes probably arises from its proximity to the important prefectural city of Leen-chow-foo, and its convenience as a landing-place for goods passing to the interior. The local business is described as having materially fallen off during the past three years, owing to additional exactions on the part of the native authorities. As a port, it is undoubtedly superior to any other known to Europeans on the South Coast.

Telegraph Tariffs.—No reduction of the tariff has followed the recommendations put forth by the Committee to the home directors of the Eastern Extension Company, but it is hoped they will not be without effect.

Chinese Merchants and the Native Duties levied on Goods coming from and going to the West Coast.—The native merchants of Hong Kong, having forwarded to the Registrar-General a petition, by the native traders of Macao to the Government of that city, proposing the establishment thereat of a Chinese Custom-house, and having suggested that a similar arrangement be introduced into Hong Kong, his Excellency the Governor requested the Chamber to state its opinion on the matter. The Committee arrived at the unanimous conclusion that, under present circumstances, it would be very unadvisable to take any steps in such a matter.

Reuter's Telegrams.—The Chamber has taken the local monopoly of Political telegrams, and this branch of the service bids fair to be efficiently started shortly. An amended form of the Commercial telegrams has been drawn up.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said the most important matter touched upon in it was the Blockade question. He considered that a hope might now be entertained that a settlement would be arrived at before long. He noticed that Sir Brooke Robertson's own statement of the affair admitted the levy of excessive, in fact often double duties upon the trade of Hong Kong. He considered that the evidence of the Commission which sat some time back ought not to have been discredited; but its truth was now amply admitted by Sir Brooke Robertson. The Hoppo of Canton kept up an idea of uncertainty as to whom the island of Hong Kong belonged, and so succeeded in levying double duties. This was a very pleasant view of the situation for the Hoppo, but one which the Chairman was glad to say does not satisfy Lord Carnarvon, and he did not think any of the Chamber would approve of the dual status which this unscrupulous individual had assigned to the colony. Mr. Ryrie went on to say:—"As far as regards exports from the various ports of the province of Canton to Hong Kong, he might have some little show of reason on his side for charging rather more than Nee-ti-shui on these, as I believe it was the custom in old times to charge some little extra duty on goods which were exported to places outside of China, such

Annam, Singapore, &c.; but this extra duty was something small, perhaps a third or a quarter of Nee-ti-shui. But here the rapacity of the mandarin shows itself, and he imposes the foreign tariff export duty, this being nearly double the amount of the Nee-ti-shui. In the case of exports from the colony to places in the Canton province he has not a shadow of reason or right on his side, as take for instance a cargo of Indian cotton, Straits produce, Manchester goods, he cannot by any reasoning, however subtle, sustain his right to charge two import duties. If it is finally decided by the high authorities that the Treaty of Tientsin applies to the trade in native craft from this colony, then he could charge the foreign tariff and no more; but if the foreign tariff is not applicable, he can only charge the native duties, so that whatever conclusion is arrived at he stands convicted of unwarrantable squeezing." Mr. Ryrie expressed his hope that the Commission – as agreed in Sir Thos. Wade's Convention—may soon commence their labours, and that the end of these labours may be that the Colony may be freed from the many evils which the present system entails upon it. With respect to the appointment of Sir Brooke Robertson on the Commission, he expressed a high opinion of that gentleman's personal qualities, but held that the published correspondence clearly showed that he had a strong bias on this subject. Referring to the opening of Hoi-How, the Chairman said it was a misfortune that it was opened so late last season that there had not been many opportunities as yet to prove its capabilities; but he thought he could safely say that we might look for some improvement there in the trade for the coming year. As to the opening of Pakhoi, that certainly was a concession to the wishes of a number of people in this Colony, but he did not think we could say much about it yet, until something was known of the place. After referring to the Telegraph tariff and other details, he moved the adoption of the report; and this motion being seconded by Mr. Kahn, was carried unanimously.

In the course of the discussion, Mr. Bililios spoke against the appointment of Sir Brooke on the Committee on the Blockade question. With all deference to Sir Brooke Robertson—no doubt all that he had done and written had been in good faith, but it was human nature to err—it had become clear that his view of the question was not free from prejudice, and therefore he would urge that a person of independent and unbiassed mind should preside at this Commission. Mr. Sharp, speaking in the same direction, said he should think Sir Brooke would hardly feel himself equal to accepting the appointment; a right-minded man would not go on a jury in a case with a mind prejudiced against either the one side or the other.

The ballot for the new committee resulted as follows:—

The Hon. P. Ryrie, the Hon. W. Keswick, Messrs. Nelson, Kahn, Belilios, Dalrymple, Hoppius, Mendel, and Jackson; the Hon. P. Ryrie and Mr. Mendel being chairman and vice-chairman respectively, Mr. Kahn having declined to accept the latter office.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The tenth ordinary general meeting of the above Company took place at the Cannon-street Hotel on the 28th ult., the chair being taken by Capt. Holland, the Chairman of the Company. The report showed that the Company's receipts for the year 1876, after making full allowance for bad and doubtful debts, amounted to £80,775 3s. 5d., as compared with £76,864 18s. 1d. for 1875, thus showing an increase of £3,910 5s. 4d. The expenditure of the year, exclusive of maintenance charges, amounted to £19,695 11s. 7d., against £17,813 6s. 10d. for the previous year, or an increase of £1,882 4s. 9d.; and after charging the item of £6,254 12s. 7d. per centage upon profits, payable to Messrs. Siemens under their maintenance contract, and taking credit for £808 19s. 3d. brought forward from 1875, and deducting income-tax, there remained on the transactions of the Company for 1876 a balance of £31,118 7s. 1d. The directors having already declared and paid an interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, for the half-year ending the 30th June last, amounting to £10,625, proposed to declare a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, for the half-year ending the 31st December, which would absorb £12,750, and leave a balance of £7,743 7s. 1d. In pursuance of the policy unanimously recommended by the board, and adopted by the shareholders last year, they recommended that a further sum of £6,000 be added to the reserve fund, which would then amount to £12,000. This left £1,743 7s. 1d. to be carried over to the account of the year 1877. In laying the above report before the meeting, the Chairman pointed out that a portion of the receipts was due to the interruption of the Red Sea telegraph, and now that that line was duplicated, they would be dependent entirely upon their own energies to keep up their business. He was not, however, afraid that the company would not prove in a position so well-established as to be able to work the line so as to secure a reasonable share of profits. With respect to the actual working of the line, they had not, it was true, yet attained perfection. That had not been reached in telegraphy more than in anything else, and it could not be absolutely attained, but we might approach towards it by degrees, and he considered they had at least made considerable strides in the right direction. The report showed that the average rate of transmission over the Company's line from London to Teheran for the last eleven months, since the establishment of the new station at Emden, has been twenty-two minutes, and between London and India fifty-seven minutes. From this it would be seen that the Emden station, as had always been anticipated, had proved a great advantage. With regard to the working of the line generally it was now under such good control that within a few minutes the manager could follow up and trace to its origin any fault or delay in the transmission of a given message. The power of the Company to deal promptly and accurately with very large quantities of telegraphic matter was sufficiently evidenced by the voluminous despatches sent every week from India, and published in the columns of The Times. He had more than once had the observation made to him that no doubt those messages were sent in cipher, and the actual quantity of matter transmitted was much less than appeared. He could, however, state that the messages were sent word for word, which was a sufficient proof of the effective working power of the line. If the Government would only recognise the fact that time was money they would no doubt take a hint from what was done by the leading paper, and use the telegraph instead of sending those voluminous despatches which were a source of so much trouble and so much wearisome anxiety to their clerks. Should they ultimately do so, it would be only reasonable for them to show their appreciation of the Company making the suggestion for them and sending their messages over their wires. With respect to the policy of the Company in dealing with the public, the Chairman said they had adopted the principle of as much as possible removing restrictions on transmitting messages, which they considered in common with all restrictions on trade to be undesirable. Formerly messages were limited to not less than twenty words, next than ten, and now they could be sent of a single word. Respecting the amount of £6,000 passed to reserve fund, he pointed out the advantage of that course in strengthening the position of the Company, observing that the days of companies with large dividends and small reserves were now past. With these remarks he moved the adoption of the report and accounts. This was seconded by Mr. Barlow.

Mr. Grimston (the former chairman of the Company) cordially endorsed the views of the Chairman with respect to the necessity of increasing the reserve. He said he could speak with experience, as when he was connected with the Electric Telegraph Company he had found that so soon as the public found them steadily increasing their reserve the shares had commenced advancing, and finally when they had a snug amount in the Three per Cents. had reached 240 per cent. He expressed a warm appreciation of the manner in which the affairs of the Company had been conducted by the Chairman, and the indefatigable Manager, Mr. Andrews.

The Chairman, having acknowledged the compliment, put the motion, that the report and accounts be passed to the meeting, which was carried unanimously, and H. H. Meier, Esq., Major-General G. B. Tremenheere, R.E., and J. Herbert Tritton, Esq., having been re-elected directors, and Messrs. C. F. Kemp, Ford, and Co., public accountants, auditors, the meeting separated.

CHINA AND TURKESTAN.

The Standard, referring to the latest news from the above quarter, observes that the battle that is about to be fought between Yakoob Beg and a Chinese army in the solitudes of Eastern Turkestan will probably not only decide the fate of the recently-formed State of Kashgar, but also produce an important change in some of the existent circumstances in Central Asia. Whilst it is in the first instance a life and death struggle for the desperate Mussulman who has of late years played so prominent a part in Asia, it may in its outcome affect in so many ways civilised communities that it becomes of interest also in countries far removed from the little known and barren region in which it is being decided. After recapitulating the events which have led up to this crisis, it goes on to observe that the Russians are keenly interested in the matter. A special embassy had followed Yakoob to Akasu on his road to the front, and, as it is stated that it was sent out to watch the progress of the war, we may presume that it has proceeded with him to Turfan. This indicates a considerable change in Russian policy. It had been supposed, indeed, that long before this a rupture would have occurred between Russia and Kashgar, and that that State would have been crushed between the two assaults of Russia and China. The result is, however, quite different. Russia, despite the refusal of Yakoob to surrender Katti Tura, the rebellious son of the Amir of Bokhara, is inclined to let the Chinese try conclusions with him, and to let them settle their differences between themselves, while she observes an attitude of watchful neutrality. It cannot be doubted that in doing so the Russian Government is very prudent, for, whatever settlement may ensue from this war, a complete Chinese victory would be the most distasteful matter to it. The successful occupation of Kashgar by the Chinese would be naturally followed by the demand for the cession of Kuldja, of which Russia, in the interests of China, has for some time been in possession. The result of the campaign is, thus, of importance to us, as it will cause a change in the status quo, either by the consolidation of the power of Yakoob Beg or by the appearance of China as an immediately concerned and important factor in the consideration of Central Asian politics. Whoever be successful, the maintenance of some settled and respectable Government in Eastern Turkestan tends to our advantage. The most ardent admirer of Yakoob Beg cannot deny that the Chinese Empire would present a preferable settlement of the question to the continuance of a rule that is dependent on no recognised principles of just government, and that will pass away, in all probability, with the breath of its originator.

In the Produce Markets the near approach of the Easter holidays, combined with the continued uncertainty as regards the settlement of the Eastern Question, has added to the dulness previously existing. The Tea Market has shown no important alteration, the public sales having consisted chiefly of common Congous, which have maintained their previous value. Silk has continued dull, and quotations have receded. Plantation Ceylon Coffee, being in heavy supply, has sustained a decline; but Native is firm. Sugar continues dull, and China has been sold at a further reduction in value. Spices continue extremely inactive. Black Pepper has partly recovered the recent decline, but White is lower. Rice continues dull, and exhibits a declining tendency. Straits Tin has sustained a further fall.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week was 3,395,010 lbs., which was 45,209 lbs. in excess of the deliveries during the corresponding week of last year. Of the quantity cleared last week, 2,106,357 lbs. went for home consumption, the duty on which was £52,658 18s. 6d., an increase of £1,327 16s. 6d. on the sum received from the same source during the corresponding week of 1876. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week. Coffee, 557,624 lbs.; cocoa, 93,815 lbs.; tobacco, 390,499 lbs.; cigars, 15,659 lbs.; wine, 173,156 gallons; brandy, 30,610 gallons; and rum, 44,970 gallons.

At the annual meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, to be held on the 18th April, the directors will recommend a dividend of 3½ per cent. for the second half of last year, making 6 per cent. for the year (free of income-tax), to transfer £65,000 to reserve fund, raising it to £110,000, and leaving £6,300, to be carried forward. The distribution for 1875 was 5 per cent., and £25,000 was added to reserve.

The Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China announce that for the half-year ended 31st December last a dividend of 4 per cent. will be paid. This makes the distribution for the whole year 1876 8 per cent., or the same as for the previous year.

The directors of the Oriental Bank Corporation announce a dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year, making, with the dividend previously paid, 10 per cent. for the year ended Dec. 31, 1876.

The Eastern Extension Telegraph Company will pay for the three months ended 31st December last a dividend of 2s. 6d. per share, making in all a dividend of 5 per cent. for the year 1876. This corresponds with a distribution of 5½ per cent. in 1875.

The Eastern Telegraph Company (Limited) gives notice that an interim dividend of 2s. 6d. per share will be paid on April 14 in respect of the profits for the quarter ended Dec. 31; and that the dividend of 3s. per share on the Six per Cent. Preference Shares for the quarter ended March 31 will be paid on the same date.

At the general meeting of the Great Northern Telegraph Company, to be held at Copenhagen on the 28th ult., it will be proposed that a final dividend of 2s. 9d. per share be paid. This makes, with the 5 per cent. already paid, a total dividend of 6⅞ per cent. for the year 1876. It will also be proposed that about £16,300 be added to the reserve fund, and about £19,400 be carried forward.

A telegram has been received by Messrs. McTaggart, Tidman, and Co. from the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company, Limited, Singapore, under date 23rd ult.:—"Extraordinary meeting to-day; capital raised to $800,000."

Our attention has been called to the fact that the deduction in the rates of insurance for Holt and Glen Lines is by the Companies 10s., instead of 15s., as stated in last issue. Some policies have, however, been done at Lloyd's at a reduction of 15s. for those lines.

The statement of affairs of Mr. H. G. Erichsen, of Great Winchester-street-buildings, has been submitted to the meeting of creditors. The total liabilities are set down at £59,510, irrespective of "other liabilities on bill holders not known," £12,505. The unsecured creditors rank for £23,370; and those partially secured, after deduction of the estimated value of securities held, rank for £13,539. The fully secured creditors hold an estimated surplus of £6,198, which forms on the other side over 30 per cent. of the whole assets. "Other liabilities" amount to £22,365; and with those for rent, wages, &c., the total is raised, as we have said, to £59,510. As against this, property is set down as worth £8,471, and book debts are estimated to produce £4,917 (53 per cent. of the gross total of this item. Altogether, inclusive of the balance from securities held by creditors, a total of £19,643 is produced on the credit side. A majority of the creditors agreed to wind up the estate under inspection.

An important meeting of representatives of employers and workmen in the cotton manufacturing districts has been held in Manchester, in support of the agitation for the repeal of the Indian import duties on cotton goods and yarns. On the motion of Mr. R. Haworth, seconded by Mr. Kilner, it was resolved,—"That this meeting, although lamenting the distress of our Indian fellow-subjects, and the strain upon the revenues of India caused by famines, does not accept these facts or any other Indian financial exigency as a justification for the continuance of a protective duty injurious alike to the Indian population and the cotton trade of Great Britain."

The tenders for the Indian Council drafts have been at a slightly higher rate than last week, and the price obtained a about ⅛ per cent. better. On Calcutta 10 lacs of rupees were allotted at an average of 1s. 8·69d., and on Bombay 7½ lacs at an average of 1s. 8·687d. Applicants for bills on Calcutta at 1s. 8⅞d.; and telegraphic transfers at 1s. 8 11-16d. will receive about 75 per cent., and on Bombay for telegraphic transfer at 1s. 8 11-16d., about 42 per cent.

Bar Silver has gradually improved in value, owing to Continental orders for immediate shipment; there has also been great scarcity of silver during the past few days, and this has helped the rise; the market is cleared of all supplies, and the price may be quoted at 54⅛d. per oz. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 53⅝d. per oz. for China, thus showing a slight rise in the price.

Tenders for £2,200,000 Treasury Bills, issued under the provisions of the Act of Parliament just passed, were opened on the 23rd ult. The applications for three months' bills amounted to £2,384,000, and six months' bills £970,000. Tenders for bills at three months at £99 10s. 8d. will receive about 80 per cent. of the amount tendered for, and above that price in full, and tenders for six months' bills at £98 17s. 3d. and above will be allotted in full. This gives the rate for three months' bills at £1 17s. 4d. per cent. per annum, and six months' £2 5s. 6d., showing that no immediate advance in the value of money is expected.

The report of the Canada Company for the year 1876 states that the receipts were more than those of the previous year, notwithstanding the depression of trade and partial failure of crops in Ontario. The average price of land sold and leased was 5s. 9d. per acre more than the average obtained in 1875. The shipments of phosphate of lime, though giving a small profit, are not to be continued, but the plan of working the deposits by responsible parties on payment of a royalty is to be adopted. The dividend paid last year was £3 10s. per share, and a similar amount was distributed to the proprietors in return of paid-up capital, which is now reduced to £4 per share.

The first annual report of the Cheque Bank (Limited), under its reorganised constitution, states that great efforts have been made to develop the sale of single cheques, which is a remunerative kind of business, and the bank has now 400 agents for the purpose, including seventy-seven banks. There is also a large connection with foreign banks. The result of the year's working is a turn-over of £663,000, and a gradually accumulated balance now amounting to £69,000. Business has not yet reached the paying point, however, the monthly expenses being about £697, while the earnings have only got up to £500. A further £200 a month must be earned, therefore, before the bank is able to exist on its revenue.

The balance-sheet of the Direct United States Cable Company for the year 1876 shows that the revenue was £144,684, and after paying expenses and making allowances for the 1875 balance, the sum of £52,265 is left to the credit of profit and loss. As the repairs of the cable, so often broken after its submersion, necessitated an expense of £52,061, it is proposed to write off half of this, and a balance available for dividend of £26,234 is left.

The report of the British American Land Company for the year 1876 shows that the profits admit of a dividend of £1 per share, carrying forward the remainder to profit and loss account, to the credit of which there was a balance on the 31st December of £24,120. Further remittances having since been received it is proposed to make a payment to the proprietors in April of 10s. per share in return of capital.

The directors of the New London and Brazilian Bank have declared an interim dividend of 5s. per share for the half-year ending Jan. 31 last, being at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, corresponding with the distribution at this time last year.

The case of Messrs. Thomas Richardson and Sons has been brought before the Bankruptcy Court. The debtors were engineers and ironfounders, of London and Middleton, near Hartlepool. Their affairs now came before the Court in connection with some claims, amounting to about £180,000, which had been made against their estate by the liquidator of the West Hartlepool Iron Company (Limited), and it was announced that a compromise had been agreed to upon the footing that the liquidator should be allowed to prove for £120,000, no order being made as to costs.

A 13th dividend of 1s. in the pound (making 17s. in the pound) is now payable to the creditors of the Oriental Commercial Bank (Limited) at the offices of Messrs. Cooper Brothers and Co.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—The market remains much as last noticed. The public sales have been rather larger than last week, comprising a large proportion of common to good common Red-leaf Congous, which met with good competition at fully previous prices and in some cases showing a further slight improvement. Privately, business has been limited, the near approach of the Easter Holidays tending to curtail purchases. Prices, on the whole, show no material alteration, but good Teas sell only slowly. Congous : Red-leaf kinds : Siftings are still firm : common at 7¼d. to 7½d. are a shade dearer ; fair to good common have realised from 7¾d. to 8¾d. per lb., the lower grades showing a slight advance ; fair kinds show no alteration ; medium kinds have been rather more in request ; good to fine sell slowly at previous rates. Pakling kinds remain much as before. Black leaf kinds : Common at 7½d. to 8d. per lb. are rather firmer ; good common at 8½d. to 9d. show no change ; fair kinds from 9½d. to 11d. per lb. are relatively cheap ; fair to good medium at 11½d. to 1s. 2d., good from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d., and fine from 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. per lb., show no alteration ; finest are firmly held. New-make kinds : Common show no change ; fair to good kinds have sold at about previous prices. Oolongs remain as before, the demand being inactive ; at auction the few parcels offered went rather lower. Souchongs : Common to fair kinds only realise low prices at public sale. Privately there is but little inquiry. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers : Common kinds remain steady, but for all the better kinds a very low range of prices is now established, good to fine only selling from 1s. 0¾d. to 1s. 4d. per lb. Orange Pekoes remain much as before in prices, but the demand is quiet. Foochow kinds, both of Caper and Orange Pekoe, are without change. Green Teas : The large public sales went off better than had been expected. Good Teas sold steadily, but common to medium kinds at irregular and generally lower prices. The public sales have comprised 25,125 packages, the whole of which were sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz. :—

	1877. lbs.	1876. lbs.
Coastwise...	517,742	674,077
Exports	534,019	432,046

SILK.

The market has again relapsed into a very dull state, and in the absence of demand prices of most descriptions have become weak and irregular. The deliveries to date are 2,622 bales, against 2,552 bales at the same time last month, being from 1st to 27th inst. inclusive. China 1,526 bales, Canton 564, Japan 398, Bengal 134.

COTTON.—The excessive stock at Liverpool, now reaching 1,070,000 bales, against 777,000 bales at the corresponding date last year, in combination with ample receipts at the United States ports, has kept the market in a severely depressed state, and prices have almost continually given way, American showing a further decline of 3-16d. per lb., or about 1¼d. from the highest point in January. Operations have chiefly consisted of American, and sales of East India have been limited, prices closing ⅛d. lower.

SUGAR.—A depressed feeling has continued, the supply being far in excess of requirements. Speculative inquiry continues absent, and the trade having restricted their purchases to present requirements, business has been on a small scale, and the downward movement in prices has continued. On the 23rd inst. privately 450 bags good China sold at 22s. to 24s. On the 24th privately 600 bags good cane China sold at 22s. 6d. to 23s. 6d. MANCHESTER GOODS.

Last week closed with a rather better enquiry, but business still on a small scale owing to the low prices offered. This week the market has again relapsed into dulness, the unfavourable accounts from Liverpool, and absence of any encouragement from Foreign markets, tending to a further contraction of business. The transactions that have taken place have been effected at irregular prices both in Goods and Yarns, and quotations are nominal.

TRIAL TRIP.—The Tambora, an iron screw steamer lately launched by Messrs. Caird and Co., shipbuilders, Greenock, and built to the order of the Netherlands-India Steam Navigation Company, took her trial trip on the 24th ult. She measures 255 feet keel, 32 feet breadth of beam, and is 25 feet deep below the main or tonnage deck. Above this deck there is a spar deck, running the whole length of the vessel from stem to stern. The steamer is intended to carry goods and passengers, and to ply between the various ports in the Dutch colonies in the East Indies. The whole of the space below the main deck, excepting the portion utilised for the engines and boilers, is devoted to cargo, and the main and spar decks are arranged for the accommodation of passengers. The Tambora attained an average speed of 12 knots per hour, with engines going at 70 to 72 strokes per minute. She will shortly proceed to Batavia.

THE BESSEMER.—This steamer, which has undergone extensive alterations, has had a trial trip, Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P.; Lieutenant Razkazoff, of the Russian Imperial Navy; Mr. Sugden, the owner, and several nautical and engineering gentlemen being on board. The two low ends of the vessel have been built upon, so that an unbroken line is now presented from stem to stern. The swinging saloon has been removed, and steam steering gear substituted for the hydraulic apparatus. While the vessel was steaming amid the heavy ground swell along the Yorkshire coast, her weather paddles being often completely out of the water, she attained by the patent log a speed of 14 knots per hour, and at the measured mile in the Humber, in smooth water, with only 22lb. of steam, she steamed at the rate of 15 knots.

TORPEDOES IN THE BLACK SEA.—The Russian Government has given notice that as torpedoes have been placed in the roadsteads of Soukhoum and Poti, on the coast of Circassia, vessels approaching these places must communicate with the guardship stationed in the outer road, in order that information may be obtained as to the course to be steered in proceeding to an anchorage. Vessels are also warned not to enter Balaclava Harbour until informed of the position in which they are to anchor. The notice has been circulated in this country by the Hydrographic Office of the Admiralty.

AT the Glamorganshire assizes a shipowner, named Watts, has been fined £100 and sent to gaol for one month for sending a ship to sea in a state dangerous to life.

THE Messageries Company's extra steamer Volga leaves on the 31st for Singapore, Hong Kong, and Yokohama, with a general cargo and three passengers.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER

dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Hornifgsham, near Warminster, Wilts:—

"I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am 78 years old.

"Remaining, Gentlemen, yours very respectfully, "L. S."

To the Proprietors of
NORTON'S CAMOMILE PILLS, London.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

TWENTY-THIRD REPORT of the Court of Directors to the Ordinary YEARLY GENERAL MEETING of Shareholders, held at the CITY HALL, HONG KONG, on the 15th of February, 1877.

To the Proprietors of the HONG KONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION.

GENTLEMEN,—The Directors have now to submit to you a general statement of the affairs of the Bank, [illegible] ending Dec. 30 last.

The net profits for that period, including $33,085.43 brought forward from last account, after paying all charges, deducting interest paid and due, making provision for bad and doubtful accounts, and for difference in Exchange between the rate at which the Dividend is declared and the current rate of the day, amount to $502,802.72, of which, after taking out Rebate on Bills not yet due, and remuneration to Directors, there remains for appropriation $488,824.91.

From this sum the Directors recommend the payment of a Dividend of One Pound Sterling per Share, which will absorb $177,777.78.

The Directors recommend placing $300,000 to credit of the Reserve Fund, which will then stand at Half-a-Million Dollars, and carrying forward the balance, viz., $11,047.13, to credit of new Profit and Loss Account.

The Directors have to renew their congratulations on the prosperous condition of the Bank.

DIRECTORS.

Mr. J. F. Cordes resigned his seat at the Board on leaving the Colony, and Mr. Edward Tobin has been appointed in his stead; the Hon. William Keswick has also joined the Board.

In conformity with the provisions of the Deed of Settlement two members of the Court, Messrs. H. Hoppius and F. D. Sassoon, retire from the Direction, but they are eligible for re-election, and offer themselves accordingly.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The complication with reference to the lekin duties and the Convention is increasing, and appears to have arrived at a stage which is tolerably complete as a specimen of diplomatic confusion. While the Convention is still unratified here, we receive by the present mail news from China, first that it came into operation on the first day of the China New Year (the 13th Feb.); secondly, that the Tsungli-Yamen (the Foreign-office at Peking) has issued instructions to the effect that lekin duties are not leviable on foreign goods (with the exception of opium) in the Foreign Settlements—or, in other words, that they are leviable upon opium within the Settlements; and lastly, that the foreign Consuls at Shanghai have refused to recognise the regulations issued by the Taoutai (the local Chinese official), with respect to the levy of lekin duties there in any form. It would require some ingenuity to improve upon this very peculiar game of cross purposes, which would certainly seem to call for some kind of explanation. The reports from the Missionaries who proceeded into the interior of Shangtang to assist the famine-distressed inhabitants confirm the accounts previously received of the extent of the distress. No less than 2,000 cases had to be relieved within three days. Some harrowing particulars are given for the first time of the barbarous execution some two years ago of the chief of the Miao-tsze rebels in Kweichow. If the report is to be relied upon, it goes beyond anything that has yet been published of the kind. Hong Kong has been chiefly occupied with the races, and in festivity connected with the departure of the late Governor. The census returns show an increase in the total population of 17,000 since 1872, the figures being 139,000, against 121,000. The value of property in the Colony is reported to be considerably on the rise.

The details which are given by the Japan papers concerning the insurrection are very conflicting, and are evidently but little relied upon by the editors of the local papers. The interest in them is, however, considerably diminished, it being already known here by telegraphic advices that the Government have succeeded in making head against the movement. So far as can be gathered from the accounts which are given, it appears that the whole body of the Satsuma clan joined in the insurrection, and that General Saigo has headed the insurgents. It was reported that Hayashi, the Representative of the Central Government at Kagoshima, had been barbarously cut to pieces. This statement was, however, subsequently denied, but it was considered doubtful, at the date of the mail's departure, whether it was true or not. This uncertainty as to the actual news results from the Government having taken stringent measures to prevent the publication of intelligence concerning the rebellion. It seems, however, generally accepted that up to the date of the mail advices, the engagements between the Imperial troops and the Rebels had been only paltry affairs, involving but small loss on either side. The Japan papers state that news has been received to the effect that a famine is raging in the Korea.

The news from the Straits contains nothing of special importance. The Government Gazette notifies that fifteen months' leave of absence has been granted to the Hon. W. W. Willans, Colonial Treasurer, and that Mr. H. Trotter, Postmaster-General, has been appointed to actas Colonial Treasurer during Mr. Willans's absence; also that Mr. A. P. Talbot, Cadet, acting temporarily as Assistant-Superintendent, Province Wellesley, has been appointed a Justice of the Peace.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 20th Feb., and we have advices by the Pacific Mail Company's steamer City of Peking, via San Francisco, seven days later, viz., to the 27th Feb. The French mail from London, Dec. 29, arrived out on the 19th Feb., and the following French mail of Jan. 5 was received on the 23rd Feb.

The various rumours which had been for some time in circulation with respect to probable disturbances were confirmed at the date of the mail's departure. The Herald gives the following particulars:—

We mentioned on the 10th February that within the last twenty-four hours rumours of troubles in the Kagoshima ken had been current. These unfortunately turned out to be true, and a most serious outbreak has occurred. The Satsuma clan, although some of the highest positions in the Government are filled by its members, has long been dissatisfied with the present national policy, and has been a source of much anxiety to the authorities who have done their utmost to placate the clan, partly from fear and partly from policy. This has, however, been all but fruitless, and the whole body is now in a state of insurrection. For some days Government appeared to be in a state of doubt as to what course to adopt, and it was known that grave differences of opinion existed in its councils; persuasion was at first to be had recourse to; eventually, however, the advocates of force appear to have prevailed, and on the 19th a proclamation was issued stating the fact of there being an insurrection, and that an expedition would be sent against the rebels. Meanwhile the Government has been pouring all its available forces into the disturbed districts, and the Mikado's uncle, H.I.H. Arisugawa-no-miya, has been appointed to the chief command. Stringent regulations have been issued with regard to persons carrying arms, &c., the newspapers have been forbidden to publish information, no native messages are transmitted by telegraph, and even foreign messages in cipher to local ports have been forbidden. Under these circumstances nothing is allowed to transpire but from official sources, and it is therefore extremely difficult to ascertain the exact facts. It has, however, oozed out that the insurgents have quitted their own province and penetrated some distance into the neighbouring one, where they appear to have encountered the imperial forces in several skirmishes, in two of which, at least, the government troops have been defeated. It appears also to be a fact that General Saigo (elder brother of the one who was one of the commissioners to Philadelphia), who has for a long time been residing on his estates, has joined the rebels. As he is a man of very great influence not only in Satsuma but throughout Japan, and has previously given proofs of capacity, his defection is of great concern to the Government. What also tells against it is that many of the troops and the greater portion of the navy are Satsuma men, and it yet remains to be seen whether they will fight resolutely against their clansmen. The situation is a serious one, and inspires the gravest apprehensions, especially as later rumours serve to show that the insurgent feeling is spreading. It must, however, be remembered that the present rising is not against the Mikado, nor his family, but solely against his ministers, who by their late treatment of the samurai have made themselves very unpopular with that class. Our latest news reports that Saigo and two other generals who have joined the insurgents have been deprived of their rank in the army. Consequent on this insurrection the Mikado has remained at Kioto, which may at present be looked upon as the seat of government, of his Ministers being there. Even there, however, there seems perfect safety, as a party of men entered the palace the night of the 16th inst. armed with naked swords. They were, however, discovered by the guard, but managed to effect their escape.

The latest news received from Kagoshima was that the representative of the Central Government, Hayashi, whilst holding a conference on the 9th February there, was set upon, and cut to pieces. Troops were being actively sent by the Government to the seat of the disturbances. The Tokio Maru, which sailed on the 14th February, took over 600 troops, and the Hiogo Maru sailed the same evening with 1,000 more. Four other steamers of the Mitsu Bishi Company had been chartered by the Government as transports. It was reported that the M. B. M. S. S. Taihei Maru was, on her arrival at Kagoshima from the Loochoo islands, captured by the rebels. Kawamura, Minister of the Naval Department, having collected several men-of-war at Nagasaki, proceeded with them to the province of Bingo near Satsuma.

The editors of two native papers were summoned to the Saibansho for publishing certain information from Satsuma. They were requested to produce their authorities, and were informed that the Government disliked having the Satsuma difficulties discussed.

Mr. Kumagai, of Akita ken, who formerly held a position of the fourth rank in the Finance Department, has been made chief manager of the bank which the kuazoku purpose forming with half the money derived from the capitalisation of their pensions, in June next. The postal service has been stopped west of Kumamoto. Mr. Ebihara, editor of the Buma Shinshi, and a native of Kagoshima, was arrested on the 14th inst., it being suspected that he was in league with the Kagoshima insurgents.

The report of Hayashi's death in Kagoshima given above was subsequently denied, and it was stated that he left Oita ken on hearing of further trouble in Kagoshima, but before entering that province a report reached him that eighteen Government officials who were not natives of Satsuma had been imprisoned; consequently he returned to Yamaguchi, from whence it is said that he telegraphed to the Naimusho on the evening of the 13th Feb. The Herald, however, is not satisfied with the denial, and states that there are still many who believed in its truth.

Mr. E. M. Satow, Japanese Secretary to the British Legation, who had been on a visit to Dr. Willis, at Kagoshima, made his way overland, without molestation, and was, at the date of last advices, at Nagasaki, en route for Tokio.

The Modeste has been ordered to Kagoshima, for information, and to afford protection, if necessary, to the few Europeans fulfilling engagements there.

The Government appears almost to have slid back to Kioto, its ancient seat. The Emperor, Empress, and Empress Mother, and most of the Court and officers of the household were there, and all the members of the Government, with the exception of Iwakura and Okuma, who remained at Tokio to give directions there.

A Chinese theatre in the settlement, which, it seems, also did duty as a gambling-house, has been surrounded and entered by the Japanese police, who captured fourteen Chinamen and a score of Japanese, and brought them to the police-station, where they were locked up. An unlucky Japanese, who at the time the police invaded the gaming-room wanted to make his escape through a window in the upper story, had a fall, and died in consequence of the injuries received.

A native paper, the Mainichi Shimbun, referring to the oversupply of silkworms' eggs, which results annually in a large number being destroyed, suggests that the Government ought to prohibit for a time the export of eggs, except to carry out orders from abroad. It adds that as it would be much more inconvenient for foreigners to give orders for silkworms' eggs than to buy them when offered for sale in the market, and when they can beat down the price, a prohibition as above-mentioned would for a time cause the export of silkworms' eggs to be entirely discontinued; but this need not be regretted until the Japanese have ascertained whether the silkworms' eggs of France and Italy are inferior to their own or not. If they are superior to theirs the export of silkworms' eggs from Japan would cease by itself, without the aid of any Government prohibition, because French and Italian dealers will not travel many thousand miles to fetch an article that is inferior to what they already have got at home themselves. But a Government prohibition would nevertheless have the good effect that it would hasten that state of things, and turn the attention of Japan merchants from silkworms' eggs to silk thread.

The examinations of the principals in the recent attempt to forge notes of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank has been continued in the several Consular Courts, and some of the prisoners have been committed for trial.

YOKOHAMA, FEB. 27.

Another insurrection, and one which beyond a doubt and without any exaggeration is the most serious the Government of the Mikado has yet had to encounter, has broken out in the province of Satsuma. It was not unexpected: indeed, the probability is that the most farsighted among the Ministers looked upon it as inevitable, and its advent as a mere matter of time. On the 12th of this month intelligence was received at the capital and at Kioto, where the Mikado and his Court are now sojourning, of an armed rising at Kagoshima. That rising has now matured into a thoroughly concerted and armed revolt. Since then all the energies of the Government have been devoted to measures for repressing it. All the vessels of the Mitsu Bishi Company, over which, it will be remembered, the Government reserved control, have been availed of as transports, and by this time from twenty-five to thirty thousand men of the Imperial troops have been assembled on the frontiers of the insurgent province, the coasts of which are closely watched by the men-of-war. Since the outbreak, until two days ago, nothing had been heard of Saigo the elder, the titular Commander-in-Chief of the Mikado's armies. It was said that he had refused to have anything to do with the insurrection ; had used, indeed, all his persuasive eloquence to induce his clansmen to disperse ; and that, failing to influence them, he had withdrawn to some solitary fastness in the interior of the province. Now it appears that he has been to Kioto, and had there an interview with the Emperor, to whom he presented a petition containing eleven articles the demands of which were each and all categorically denied. On this he returned to Satsuma, and is now at the head of the insurgent shizoku. Prince Arisugawa-no-miya, cousin and probable heir to the Mikado, is in command of the Imperial troops. Some so-called engagements, really mere skirmishes of outposts, are already reported ; but their result is unimportant. Although startling news is hourly expected, hopes are still entertained that a sanguinary issue may still be avoided. Indeed, the sympathies of many foreigners are with the Satsuma men, who, if in power, it is thought would open the resources of the country, with a view to their development, to foreign capital. Some of the foreign representatives, especially Sir Harry Parkes, are said to be in favour of counselling the Government to compromise matters. The chief demand of the insurgents is, no doubt, the dismissal of several members of the Ministry, Sanjo, for instance, the Premier, and Okuma, the Finance Minister. At the present moment it might be rash for any foreigner to express a decided opinion as to the issue of the matter ; so I will only say that I think that the Government can put down the insurrection, provided they can depend upon tho fidelity of the army; but how far that fidelity can be counted upon after Saigo's defection and his dismissal from his post as commander-in-chief (the notice of his dismissal has just been published) remains to be proved. Meanwhile it is a little strange that almost simultaneously his brother should have been appointed Acting Minister at War ; and in view of all the complications of Japanese policy, and the thorough reticence preserved by all in authority, foreigners have nothing to do but to keep quiet, and await results—pending which all business is virtually at a standstill.

OSAKA, HIOGO, &c.

There has been a storm in a teacup—in one aspect, however, undoubtedly of some importance—raised at Kobe, in consequence of Mr. Newwitter, the Chairman of the Municipal Council, having on his own responsibility offered an address in the name of the Council to the Mikado. The affair seems to have set Kobe all a flame, and the Hiogo News contains a correspondence from which it would seem that Mr. Newwitter had no authority whatever either to draw up, or present the address to the Mikado, who, if his Majesty ever received it, was imposed on by the supposed concoctor and alleged presenter, who at all events is responsible for the printing of the address in the newspapers, as he personally handed it to the press for publication. The Japan Herald observes that the "action taken by members of the Council is by no means superfluous, as the conduct of their Chairman rendered it necessary that the Council should vindicate itself from the disgrace which would otherwise attach to it,"—a vindication all the more necessary from the fact that the address, though very loyal, was not over grammatical.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The correspondent of the Celestial Empire, under date Feb. 1, writes :—

The foreign residents in Peking have been doing their best to endure cheerfully the shutting out of the outer world. Just before the New Year a very successful theatrical exhibition was given by the British Legation. More recently Mr. Mayers has given a lecture on Chinese literature. Paper hunts have been in vogue this season for the first time in Peking. The loose, dusty soil of this neighbourhood makes riding safe even in the midst of the frost ; still, there have been the usual number of tumbles, but though the effects of one or two have been unpleasant enough, there has not been any serious damage done. Apropos of your criticism of Dr. Schereschewsky's criticism of the Chinese mandarinate, I have just heard of a Che-hsien in a neighbouring town who was in the habit of going about in various disguises to detect gambling-houses. He joined in the gambling, pawned a garment, and came next day with his attendants to redeem it and capture the proprietors of the establishment, who generally got a severe bambooing. Drunkards at fairs were arrested and treated in the same way. Gambling and drunkenness became scarce in that region during this magist-ates tenure of office. Having never heard o such another case, I came to the conclusion that Dr. Scheres chewsky's criticism is substantially correct, and that the instances of incorruptible officials cited in your article form just about the number of exceptions which are necessary to constitute a rule.

The Daily News gives the following with reference to the lekin duties question :—

A proclamation is issued from the office for the collection of likin duties on foreign merchandise :—

"All foreign goods imported into the foreign settlements of Shanghai, and sold to native merchants, have hitherto been subject to likin duties for the support of troops (or other State purposes) ; but now despatches have been received from the Tsung-li Yamen announcing his Imperial Majesty's gracious assent to the arrangement in virtue of which, from the 1st day of the 3rd year of the Kuang-su, all bonâ fide imports of foreign origin, with the exception of opium, may be sold in the foreign settlements of Shanghai without paying likin taxes. In addition, therefore, to the instructions given to the heads of the Likin Tax-office, this Proclamation is jointly issued by us, in order that from the day when the change takes place all merchants may order themselves accordingly. But this immunity from taxation only applies to foreign goods (excepting opium) while in the foreign settlements. Opium, native produce, and foreign goods being sent into the interior for sale, which have not paid the regular half-import duties, cannot be exempted. These will all be subjected to likin taxation, exactly as before. Let no understanding arise ! Let there be no confusion ! This is devoutly to be hoped. —A special proclamation !"

A proclamation is issued by the office for the collection of likin taxes on opium :—

All importations of opium have been subject to the conditions laid down in the opium clause of the Treaty, and not classed with the importations of other foreign goods. Now, a new code of regulations has been issued by the Tsung-li Yamen, according to which, from the 1st day of the 3rd year of Kuang-su, all bona fide imports of foreign origin will be exempted from likin in the foreign settlements of Shanghai. But, as regards opium, we have received a despatch from the Comptroller of the Northern Treaty Ports (Li Hung-chang) to the effect that, in pursuance of arrangements arrived at by Pah (von Brandt) the German Minister, it is not included in the immunity from likin taxation extended to other foreign goods. Moreover, this office has been informed by the Superintendent of Customs that all foreign goods are henceforward exempted from likin taxes in the foreign settlements, with the exception of opium, which will be subjected to taxation as heretofore. Therefore, besides the instructions thus given to the likin opium office, this Proclamation is now immediately issued, for the guidance of other Yamens and the information of every merchant engaged [in the trade]. All opium at Shanghai and Chinkiang will be taxed, as has been the case hitherto. It is not included in the exemption of other goods. Let there be no confusion !—A special proclamation !"

TIENTSIN.

The North China Daily News correspondent states that Her Britannic Majesty's Consul at the above port notifies that a Chinese subject cannot become a landrenter in the British Concession without the special permission of Her Majesty's Minister, and undertaking, with the officially certified consent of his national authority, to obey all regulations made for the good government of the Settlement. Apropos de quoi? It would be interesting to know.

The Courier's correspondent says :—

A story is in circulation that at one of the rice dispensing establishments for women, an effort was made some weeks since to kidnap a young girl, who was taken to a house of bad reputation outside the North-gate, whence in due time she was rescued. It is now reported that this establishment has been seized by the officials, and converted into a soup-house, by way of reprisal. The man Yun, who poisoned the millet grain of the poor, to render it uneatable, that his revenues might be augmented, is not yet known to have received any other punishment than incarceration.

Three members of the English Methodist Mission are now in the interior of Shantung, and they report that they have never before so directly confronted misery from famine. It is terrible to witness the scenes resulting from it, heartrending to hear the stories of suffering. Within a single period of three days more than two thousand cases were relieved, and one morning more than a thousand starving creatures thronged the gates before breakfast. The method which has been adopted is that of sending intelligent natives into the villages, who confer with the headmen in regard to the number actually destitute in that place, and to these persons tickets are issued, entitling to millet at the town occupied as a head-quarters. Notwithstanding the great distress, there has been no signs of violence or lawlessness. By the appointment of fixed times for distribution, systematic relief has been secured to many destitute districts. The applicants come from all quarters, many of them walking most of the night, and returning to their distant houses, overflowingly grateful for a small supply of grain. The weather continued cold, and the snow which fell on New Year's Eve is still much of it on the ground.

KWEICHOW.

The Correspondent of the Celestial Empire gives some interesting particulars concerning a new religious society called the Tsing-Sien-Kian, on which it appears the authorities have recently been making a raid, and have imprisoned eight or ten of its members, most of whom are defenceless women, widows, &c. The members of this society are very strict in abstaining from all kinds of animal food and sexual intercourse, as well as from opium and wine. A book called the Kwan-yin Kyin is their guide in religious matters. This book appears to me to be a corrupted history of the Blessed Virgin Mary; but however that may be, the members appear to be very orderly and well conducted people, whose principle aim is to do good in way of alms and other assistance to those who need it, and to release all animals they can afford to pay for. The members of this society are very numerous in this province, and the present persecution may do a great deal of harm to the tottering Government which appears to be afraid of its most peaceful subjects, while the Municipal authorities feel much annoyed at this interference with their liberty by the officials.

The North China Herald has the following :-

The following is a description of the manner in which the insurgent Chief of the Miao-tsze Aborigines in Kweichow, Kao Ho by name—whose capture and execution "with the extreme of torture" was celebrated in an Imperial decree in 1872– was put to death, as reported at the time by an eye-witness :—"The criminal judge, attended by executioners, in the presence of the assembled armies, ordered Kao Ho to be stripped and wound around with strong iron wire, each coil being a few inches apart, and drawn so tightly that it caused the flesh to rise between the coils. When this was done and he was securely bound to a stake, the executioners began their work of slowly picking the flesh from the bones with sharp iron instruments something like a three-pronged fork. . . . To give a little variety to their amusement, the executioners beheaded several inferior rebel chiefs while Kao Ho was left standing, and then returning to him, they cut off the head from the still living skeleton of bones." who can help admiring the ancient civilisation and classical lore which produce such results?

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 23rd Feb.; the French mail from London Dec. 29 was received on the 16th Feb., and the following P. and O. mail of Jan. 5 arrived out on the 19th Feb.

The Treaty Consuls have refused to give their assent to the lekin exemption rules which have been proposed by the Taoutai and have been the subject of so much discussion. The Sinpao, however, publishes a series of proclamations by the Taoutai, and by the Offices for the collection of lekin on foreign goods and on opium, affirming the exemption of foreign goods from lekin within the Settlements of Shanghai, on and after the first day of the New-Year. "From the first day of the third year of Kwang-su (13th Feb., 1877), all bona fide imports of foreign origin, with the exception of opium, may be sold in the foreign Settlements of Shanghai, without paying lekin taxes." Opium, the North China Daily News observes, is of course in the same position as before, having been specially excluded from the benefit of the new arrangement by the third Clause of the Trade section of the Chefoo Convention, which appears to have been since agreed to by Mr. von Brandt and the other foreign Ministers.

According to the North China Herald a salutary step in the direction of progress has been taken by the Chinese. It is stated that orders have been issued by some "large mandarin" in the North—presumably Li Hung-chang, from whom all things seem now to emanate—that junks trading between Shanghai and Tientsin are to carry red and green lights affixed, like our own sailing lights. A gentleman in Shanghai was asked the other day to describe these lamps, where they should be placed, which colour, on which side, &c., by the owner of ten junks, who announced that he was going to procure them, and have them ready against the re-opening of the Peiho. The other junk owners will, it is presumed, have to follow suit by the same time, and the danger of collisions, which is so frequent under the present system, will be thus greatly diminished. Of course, if they can, the Chinese will exhibit the lights on the wrong side, hinder part before, or in some other way than they are intended; but it is understood the sockets of the lamps used in English ships are so constructed now that the lamps will not go in their place otherwise than properly. In any case the appearance of lights will show steamers that there is some object which is not a steamer, and which it is their business to avoid; and we know too well how very imperfectly the old system of burning paper, or of waiving or hoisting a feeble Chinese lantern, conveyed this warning.

From the above paper we take the following :—

An incident has happened at the Mixed Court, which will hardly be allowed to pass without some official notice. George Ford summoned two of his servants for making a disturbance—arising as usual out of a dispute about wages. But Chen, saying the Chinese authorities were of opinion justice had not been done in a case where Ford was tried before the Supreme Court for murdering a Chinese—declined to hear any complaint brought by him in the Mixed Court. We are not going to argue whether Chen is right or wrong in his opinion; that is beside the question. But the justice or injustice of a sentence once passed on the complainant does not affect the guilt of the defendants; and what Chen is asked to do is to try his own countrymen, not Ford.

Judgment has been given in the case of the C.N. Company v. Francis, in favour of the defendant as regards the larger amount of Tls. 6,073.30, and in favour of the plaintiffs as regards the Tls. 57.18. The Judge held that, although a principal is liable for the tort or negligence of his agent, yet we are to understand the doctrine with its just limitation, that the tort or negligence occurs in the course of the agency. A principal is not liable for the acts of his agent in matters beyond the scope of his agency unless he has expressly authorised them to be done, or has subsequently adopted them. Shaw was certainly acting beyond the scope of his agency in misappropriating money. The Tls. 57.18 was altogether another matter. It was simply a brokerage which Shaw entered as paid, but which he had never paid; and in being required to repay it, Francis and Co. are simply required to rectify an erroneous entry. Shaw may or may not have contrived to pocket the sum himself, but he at any rate neglected to pay it, and plaintiffs could not be debited with it in their general account with Francis and Co.

The Marine Engineers' Institute, which was opened at the Temperance-hall about twelve months' ago, may now be regarded as a permanent institution. At the annual meeting of the members the Secretary reported that there were now sixty paying members on the books, and a balance in hand of $89. The library consisted of over 500 volumes of books, and during the year the reading-room had been well supplied with home and foreign newspapers, magazines, and periodicals. The Very Rev. Dean Butcher delivered an address, and Mr. Buchanan, the President of the Institute, presented Mr. Nesbitt, second engineer on the steamer Europe, with a valuable microscope as the prize for the best essay on "The Chinese; their Capabilities as Engineers," which, it may be said, was not flattering to the Celestials.

A general meeting of members and friends of the N.C. Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society has been held. There was a more than usually numerous attendance, several ladies being present. Mr. T. W. Kingsmill, the newly-elected president, occupied the chair, and opened the proceedings by reading the farewell address presented to Mr. W. H. Medhurst, the late president of the society, on his departure for home, together with that gentleman's reply. In accordance with the new rule the following were declared duly elected members of the society :—His Excellency the Hon. J. H. Ferguson, Drs. Krauel, Hopkins, and B. Christiensson; Messrs. Schmidt, Wade, Meller, Schultze, Rochet, R. Starkey, H. J. Fisher, A. Davenport, and G. G. Lowder. The President explained the non-production of Mr. Martin's Museum Report, which through pressure of business he had himself forgotten to bring, but he was certain the meeting would join him in offering a cordial vote of thanks to Mr. Martin for the same. This was agreed to unanimously, and there being no other business, the President proceeded to deliver his inaugural address. Although lengthy, the address, which embraced a review of recent geological researches, bearing especially on the glacial theory, and an expression of opinion on the period immediately antecedent to history, was listened to with attention throughout, its interest being considerably heightened by the exhibition of numerous organic remains found, we believe, in Szechuen. The Rev. J. Thomas proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Kingsmill, which was carried by acclamation, and the proceedings terminated.

The annual meeting of the Shanghai Race Club has been held. After the passing of the accounts, which showed a balance in hand of Tls. 1,933.89, plans for the rebuilding of the stables at the Grand Stand were examined and discussed. The cost is not to exceed Tls. 5,000 and the reconstruction is to be proceeded with gradually, so as to avoid getting into debt. The plans were ultimately agreed to unanimously.—The next business was the election of stewards. Messrs. Hitch and Fergusson retired, and it was understood that Mr. Paterson would be likely shortly to do so. The following were elected, Messrs. Hart, Low, Wainewright, Overbeck, Boyd, Coutts, and Ringer. A conversation, raised by Mr. Love, took place as to the expediency of expunging the fifteenth by-law, and a vote, taken by way of an expression of opinion merely, resulted in favour of doing so. The power to deal with the by-laws rests with the stewards, but it was thought better that they should be guided by the opinion of the members present. A suggestion by Mr. Waller that the annual meeting of the club shall in future be held in January, will be considered at a special meeting.

The Celestial Empire has the following items :—

A question of no small importance is to be submitted to the consideration of the next Ratepayers' meeting,—whether steamers shall or shall not be permitted to load and discharge upon the English Bund. We expect there will be a warm discussion upon the subject. If the precedent were once established, covered wharves and sheds, similar to those at Kin-lee-yuen and upon the Hongkew side, would follow as a matter of course, and the pleasant promenade be at an end.

It is rumoured that a change of some vital nature has occurred with regard to the Pacific Mail Company, by which it becomes absorbed into another company under American auspices, which will run direct through to Shanghai in opposition to the Mitsu Bishi Company.

A letter from a missionary gentleman at Hankow informs us that he and a friend, with whom he was travelling, met with a rather inhospitable reception in Hunan, in one town of which province, at any rate, the Yunnan Proclamation neither had been, nor seemed likely to be, posted. By a recent post we have received a letter from our correspondent at Kweichow, mentioning a rumour that two foreign gentlemen had been roughly treated in the former province. Whether the incidents referred to are identical we can hardly say, but however this may be there seems no doubt that Hunan is determined to earn a celebrity for its loyal detestation of the foreigner.

It is reported that his Honour, the Taoutai, will proceed upon his filial expedition to Urga early in the spring. We believe, however, that his movements are uncertain, and depend upon advices from head-quarters.

We hear from trustworthy quarters that a few days ago some persons went down to Woosung, on behalf of the Chinese authorities, to take observations and measurements of the Woosung Creek at a certain point about two miles above the present station, their avowed object being the erection of a railway bridge. This looks as though an extension of the present line to Soochow was being seriously contemplated; and we most sincerely trust that such is, in fact, the case. Were the project to be carried out, the new line would probably be laid from the Woosung, and not from the Shanghai, terminus, one reason being that from the former place the route would run through districts of greater commercial importance than the route from Shanghai. The point is, however, immaterial; the great thing is to get the line extended, and this, we trust, will ere long be done.

The passengers on the Woosung Railway have been very numerous lately; so much so, indeed, that the other day it was found necessary to attach two engines to the train. People seem to have got into the habit of taking the train down to Woosung and then walking back—a pleasant change from the monotonous tramp upon the Bubbling Well-road, which for so long has been the principal walk out of the Settlement.

FOOCHOW.

A correspondent of the Daily News says Mr. Hobson, Commissioner of Customs, and Mr. Van Stappen, Assistant, have proceeded in the steamer Leng Feng to Wenchow, to open the Custom House at that port. The same paper is also informed that Mr. T. M. Brown, of Carisbrooke notoriety, has been appointed Deputy Commissioner, in-door staff, at Canton, and is succeeded by Captain Clayson, late of the Feihoo. Captain Cocker will take charge of the Feihoo, and Captain Farrow of the Leng Feng. The China Merchants' Company intend to run one or more of the steamers regularly between Foochow and Shanghai.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 1st March; the French mail from London Jan. 12 arrived out on the 21st Feb., and the following P. and O. mail of Jan. 19 was received on the 26th Feb

The farewell dinner which was given to H. E. Sir Arthur Kennedy prior to his departure was most enthusiastically attended. The chair was taken by the Hon. H. B. Gibb, and about a hundred sat down, the dinner being served in St. Andrew's Hall, which was decorated with flags and evergreens. The tables were beautified by a fine display of silver cups, chiefly those won at the last race meeting, which had just been concluded, a prominent place being given to the famous Hong Kong Challenge Cup, the property of Mr. Magniac, one of the finest specimens of silver work ever seen in the East. The vice-chairs were occupied by the Hons. P. Ryrie, W. Keswick, and H. Lowcock. The band of H.M. 28th Regiment, under Mr. Hurst, was in attendance, and played a selection of appropriate music during the evening. The Chairman, in proposing Sir Arthur's health, said that in him they had had an honest and sterling Governor, that the Chinese had prospered, and the colony had become improved. People in Hong Kong now heard nothing of the personal attacks and robberies which were once so rife, and serious crime was almost blotted out. This he considered due to the energetic manner in which his Excellency had worked the police force. Sir Arthur Kennedy, in responding, attributed much that had been accomplished to those who had co-operated with him, and acknowledged with warmth the compliment which had been paid to him. He said his policy had always been to find out the best men, put them in their right places, and then interfere with them as little as possible. Deputations from the Chinese community, the Legislative Council, and the Protestant Missionaries in Hong Kong have presented farewell addresses to Sir Arthur, who left (as already noted) on the 1st March.

The China Mail, in commenting upon the last Blue-book, says that this batch of papers, coming at the present time, is remarkably suggestive of the play of "Hamlet" with the part of Hamlet left out. There is everything in it, except what the public at home and out in China more particularly want, that is the report made by the Hon. Mr. Grosvenor concerning the investigation in Yunnan. "Upon this point, it appears that the Home Government preserves a discreet silence; and as it is not likely that they would consider there was anything to conceal, had the report from Mr. Grosvenor been satisfactory, it is tolerably clear that the contrary is the case."

The races took place from the 22nd to the 24th February, and appear to have come up to the average of late years. The grand stand was probably not so much patronised this year as last, through the fortunate circumstance that there was much less need for shelter, but the attendance at the meeting, both at the grand stand and elsewhere, was fully equal to that of previous years.

In the Supreme Court on the 27th the case of Thomas Coales, charged with embezzling Government Stores, was tried. Before the case for the prosecution was concluded, an adjournment was proposed. One of the jurors urged hard to have it put off till Thursday, the 1st March, as the 28th was a double mail day, but the Chief Justice could not see the justice to the prisoner of adjourning till Thursday. Eventually, the jury acquitted Coales without hearing the defence.

The Returns of the Census of the population of the Colony, taken in December last, are published in the Government Gazette. The whole population in 1872 numbered 121,985, it is now 139,144, showing an increase in four years of 17,159. The major part of this increase is in the Chinese population in Victoria, Kowloon, and the villages. The European and American community is larger by 247, but this is almost solely attributable to the number of Portuguese who have made Hong Kong their residence since the partial destruction of Macao by typhoon and fire in 1874. Nearly every other nationality shows a decrease, especially amongst male adults. There are now 86 British, 12 German, 12 American, and 10 Danish male adult residents less than in 1872. The fixed European and American residents include 699 British, of whom 342 are men; 1,708 Portuguese, of whom 418 are men; 154 Germans, of whom 112 are men; 81 Americans, of whom 47 are men; 45 French, of whom 33 are men; 28 Italians, of whom 7 are men; 12 Spanish, of whom 8 are men; 8 Danish, of whom 7 are men; 5 Swiss, of whom 4 are men; 5 Dutch, of whom 4 are men; and 4 Swedish all of whom are men. All the villages, with the exception of Stanley, have more or less added to their inhabitants. The typhoon in 1874 destroyed a large number of houses in the village of Stanley, and many of these have not been since re-built. Certain projected improvements will, however, it is to be trusted, restore the place to its former thriving state. The fishing villages, as Aberdeen, Stanley, and Shau-ki-Wan may be called, should prosper, as they are now frequented by more than three times the number of fishing-boats to what they were four years ago. Late sanitary reforms have done much to improve the condition of the inhabitants in these villages. Yow-mah-tee in Khowloon has become a new town within the last few months, and will continue to increase, if facilities are afforded to the boat-builders and to the junk people, who repair thither to careen and repair their vessels, for on these the trade of the place chiefly depends.

The report of the directors to the sixth ordinary meeting of shareholders in the Chinese Insurance Company, to be held on the 2nd March, has been issued. Accounts for the twelve months ending 31st December, 1876, show that, after paying the interest upon the capital, and providing for the working expenses of the office, &c., adjusting claims for losses, and carrying forward to next year's account the sum of $60,969.24 to meet claims pending upon known casualties, together with premia on unexpired risks, there remains a profit of $34,522.81 available for appropriation; and in accordance with the articles of association, two-thirds of this sum will be distributed as a bonus to contributors (=8 per cent.), and the remaining third to be placed to the credit of the reserve fund, which will then stand at $62,507.60.

From the China Mail we take the following general news:—

We have been informed, through the courtesy of a shipmaster, that the steamer reported as wrecked on the Karang Hadjie Reef (Banka Straits) is the little steamship Fokien. This vessel, which, it may be remembered, ran as a night boat on the Canton River, and was in collision with the cruiser Chen Jui on the 28th August last year, was sent first to Singapore for sale, and thence on to Batavia.

We have just heard of a sad accident which occurred on board the Meanee. A young man named Kemp, a private in the Royal Engineers, was under treatment for the smallpox, and during the night, although closely watched, he managed to escape from his bed, and has not since been seen. It is believed he became delirious and leaped overboard.

Barracks until their own quarters are vacated. We have heard a report that two or three of the men who are under orders for home are bad with the measles, and that one of the sergeants of the 28th is in hospital with the same complaint. The Himalaya was to leave with the men relieved on the 2nd March.

The Daily Press notices as a further proof of the increased value of land in the colony that one of the lots in the Bamboo Plantation recently sold by Government to a Chinaman was re-sold within a few hours of its purchase at a profit of $4,000. It is stated that an estate in the Colony which five years ago might have been purchased for $150,000 has realised over $260,000.

BANGKOK.

A correspondent writes from Bangkok :—

The King is one of the hardest working men in the country, and has his regular office hours the same as any clerk in a Bank. He has recently ordered a floating fire-engine from England to protect his people and the shipping in the port from the ravages which are continually made by this element, consequent on the houses being constructed entirely of wood and thatch. In this respect Bangkok will be ahead of Singapore in providing means of assistance in case of fire breaking out on board any ship in the river. This fire-engine has been imported by Messrs. Ramsay and Co., of this city, who have had it built to their order to meet the special requirements of the "Eastern Venice," as Bangkok has been poetically described. The fire-boat is a novelty in engineering. It is only thirty-two feet long, with a draught of eight inches when loaded with coals, men and every apparatus. It is worked or propelled from a paddle situated in the stern.

The rice prospects in Siam have not been so bright for many seasons as they are at present. One would think that as the rice mills in Bangkok are only employed about half their time, there could not be room for more; but, nevertheless, there are two more in course of erection, and another two more ordered. Unless the country is opened out, and more ground placed under cultivation I (as a private individual) do not see how the mills can be worked at a profit. However, let us hope that the enterprising capitalists will meet with success, and that they may be the means of developing the country's resources, although it is depressing to work for glory alone. One spirited Siamese nobleman has gone in largely for a coffee plantation, and most favourable accounts have been received from Europe respecting the quality of his produce. A European has turned his attention to the improvement of the indigo grown here, and after some years of difficulty begins to see his way clearly to get his money back. One of the European Consuls has devoted time and energy to the development of tobacco, and his manufactured cheroots are perfect Havanahs in every respect save one, and that one is that they have not the aroma of Havanah cigars. The boxes, labels, and the manner in which they are got up, reflect great credit on the proprietor. A more useful and practical improvement has been made by an Englishman, who has introduced machinery for making bricks, tiles, drainage-pipes, &c. This, it is hoped, will have an ultimate success, although, like all other innovations, it is beset with difficulties at its commencement.

MANILA.

At the Philippine lottery drawing the winning tickets appertaining to the $16,000 and $4,000 prizes were those numbered 4,128 and 6,096. The Comercio says that one-tenth of the former prize fell to the share of a sailor at Manila.

The title conferred on General Malcampo is Count of Mindanao, and not of Manila.

Of 9,592 mils. of cigars of superior quality offered for sale by public auction on behalf of the Treasury at Manila only 4,724 mils. found buyers; 1,200 mils. Nuevo Cortado, from the Cavite manufactory, obtained the highest premiums—$1 to $1.52 per mil. The auction yielded the Treasury $60,947.20 including $1,690.70 in premiums.

JAVA.

The following items are translated from the Java newspapers :—

By the Egeron there were brought here eight European shipwrecked sailors belonging to the crew of the British ship Inverary, which had foundered in Bali Straits owing to bad weather. This vessel had loaded with sugar here and at Pasaruan for the English Channel. These men had the good fortune to be able to repair to Sumba in a boat; from thence, with the assistance of the Sultan, they were conveyed to Bima, from which place the Egeron brought them over thither. There have been twelve persons drowned.

The news from Atchin is not particularly important. The enemy do not yet appear to be very much discouraged by the last expedition. The Sumatra Courant lately mentioned that the Atchinese made an attack on Bilul South and were repulsed Our correspondent at Atchin confirms this. The greatest news is that on the 6th March next his Excellency the Governor-General, accompanied by the Secretary-General, his adjutants, and Mr. Sol, as private secretary, leaves for Atchin by the N.I.S.N. Co.'s steamer Bromo, escorted by three men-of-war. His Excellency will touch at Singapore to meet the Governor of the Straits Settlements, and, it is, said, intends on the return voyage to visit Padang and the Padang highlands. The object of this voyage is not known.

The same journal also states that leave to prosecute six Europeans for the way in which they had dealt with coolies in Deli and Langkat has been granted, or was under consideration by last accounts. The planters there, being afraid of losing their lives and properties, have organised armed guards on their estates. In a single night such a guard was six times fired upon. A planter lately sent out a trusty labourer, who had served him for years, with 700 guilders. On the next day the latter was found murdered, with his head cut off.

The Court of Justice at Batavia delivered judgment in the case of Captain Hagers and Van de Gevel, charged with the manslaughter of three Chinese on occasion of the collision between the steamers Willem Kroonprins der Nederlanden and Atjeh. The Court held that the drowning of two of the Chinese was fully proved, but acquitted the accused on the following grounds :—The Court held that far from there having been on the occasion excessive carelessness or blamable neglect there was not even want of seamanship, and taking into consideration that experts differed greatly in opinion as to the manner in which the vessels ought to have been handled, the Court also held that what happened was due to nothing else than an error of judgment, a mistaken view of what was required, which did not amount to such a degree of imprudence as would bring the accused within the reach of the penal law.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 8th March; the P. and O. mail from London Feb. 2 was received on the 5th March. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times :—

At the meeting of Council on the 2nd March, the Hon. W. H. Read, according to notice, put a question as to what was being done to reform the Judicial Establishment. There is great and growing discontent and impatience at the want of Judges, and only one opinion as to the extraordinary treatment of the Colony in this matter by the Colonial-office. The general feeling is well expressed in the following extract, forming the conclusion of the speech with which Mr. Read prefaced his question :—

"We had been getting on, I fain hoped, quietly and comfortably, when a demon of reform, or of economy, or of both, seems to have possessed the Colonial-office, and produced the present dilemma. What I wish to know is when there may be a chance of a change for the better? The present inefficient supply of judges cannot, must not, be persisted in; and the Colonial-office cannot be allowed, without remonstrance, to trifle with the most sacred right of the people—that of justice. We, on the spot, know better than they possibly can in London what are required to ensure the administration of plain and wholesome justice; and we say that one—nay, even two—judges cannot perform the work of these Settlements to the satisfaction of the community, or to the approval of their own consciences. The opinion I have uttered is not mine in particular; I believe it to be shared by every educated and thinking person in the three Settlements; and as representing the public, which I and my unofficial colleagues believe we do, I protest—ay, emphatically protest—against the continuation of the inadequate administration of justice here existing, and which I believe and trust is unparalleled in any other part of Her Majesty's dominions."

One Judge is trying to do the whole civil and criminal business of the three Settlements, and of course finds it impossible. Four Judges were provided by the Court Ordinance, but the Secretary of State, for reasons unknown, has decreed that two judges are sufficient, an opinion utterly scouted out here. Our police magistrates, already overwhelmed with work, have now on their shoulders the work of a Court of Requests, and the spectacle is presented, almost daily here, of suitors clamouring for justice in our Courts, and being denied or obliged to wait for weeks and months, and perhaps even years. H.E. the Governor admitted that the state of things was very unsatisfactory. In June last year he had represented to the Secretary of State that three judges were necessary, but in December directions had been received for the appointment of only two judges, and the Bill of 29th December last was the necessary consequence. A new Bill giving effect to the views of this Government had been drafted, but as it was not in accordance with the instructions of the Secretary of State it must be first submitted for his approval.

Captain Walshe, Police Magistrate and the highest judicial authority here at present, has had before him during the fortnight two cases of some importance. One is an application from the Java Government for the extradition of an Arab trader, who is alleged to be a defaulter. Captain Walshe decided there was a prima facie case for extradition, but the want of a Judge prevents the question from being finally decided. Meantime the trader is in custody. The other case was an investigation into a charge of kidnapping coolies in open day from the Sumatra plantations, and the result was the committal of the accused for trial at next assizes.

The O. S. Co.'s steamer Ulysses, when about 500 miles on her voyage from here to Hong Kong, broke her mainshaft and lost her propeller, and was obliged to return here under sail. News of the accident having been brought to her agents here, two tugs were sent to her assistance, and while being towed a little to the east of Bintang Island a strong current drove her on a reef. She floated off at high water, after twenty-four hours, and she is now at Tanjong Pagar Dock discharging cargo and repairing damages.

The Governor-General of Java is expected here on his way to Atchin, and five Dutch men-of-war have rendezvoused in this port for the purpose of escorting his Excellency on his voyage. His Excellency Sir Arthur Kennedy and suite arrived from Hong Kong in the E. and A. steamer Brisbane, on his way to Australia to take up the Governorship of Queenslaud.

Among the departures during the fortnight was that of the Hon. W. W. Willans, Treasurer-General of the Colony, by the M. M. steamer Amazone. Mr. Willans has gone on well-earned leave with the best wishes of the entire community. One of the oldest officials, and one of the few remaining old Indians, he has long possessed the esteem of many friends here and the respect of all.

The troopship Himalaya is hourly expected from Hong Kong to take home the relieved battery of artillery and the remaining wing of H.M. 80th Regiment to East London at the Cape.

All is quiet in the Peninsula, save that some fighting is going on between the Malays and Chinese in the Siamese Province of Tongka. At the request of the Siamese Governor, the export of arms, ammunition, &c., from this Colony to any Siamese port north of Quedah has been prohibited by order of the Governor in Council for the space of one month.

The N.I.S.N. Company's steamer Ophir, Captain Cramer, arrived alongside Tanjong Pagar Wharf. She reports that Captain Petersne, a planter of Deli, who was on board under an escort of police and bound for Riouw to take his trial on a charge of cruelty, causing death to coolies on his estate, jumped overboard at the Karimons, on the voyage here, and was drowned, notwithstanding that every effort was made to save him. There are two more prisoners on board, a Dutch soldier (formerly a French communist), who is charged with shooting one of his officers at Deli, and a Malay, also accused of murder.

The annual general meeting of the members of the Tanglin Club took place at the Club House. After the transaction of some routine business, the accounts, which showed the Club to be once more in a flourishing condition, were passed, and the following office-bearers were elected for the ensuing year :—President, Hon. W. H. Read ; Vice-President, L. J. R. Glass, Esq. ; Committee : J. Burkinshaw, Esq., I. Henderson, Esq., C. Stringer, Esq., J. Miller, Esq., S. M. Munro, Esq., A. S. Cumming, Honorary Treasurer ; C. E. Hay, Honorary Secretary. At the conclusion, a vote of thanks was cordially passed to Mr. Sword, the retiring Treasurer, to whose exertions the present prosperous condition of the Club is in a great measure due. The meeting broke up with the usual vote of thanks to the Hon. W. H. Read, the Chairman.

A Gazette Extraordinary contains three new notifications :—

The first is an Order of the Governor in Council, issued at the request of the Governor of the Siamese Province of Tongka, in consequence of disputes between the Chinese and Malays there, prohibiting for the space of one month the export of arms, ammunition, gunpowder, military and naval stores, from this Colony to any of the Siamese ports in the Malay Peninsula north of Quedah.

The second publishes the Rules and Regulations for the guidance of Singapore Pilots, in amended form, signed by Captain Ellis as Master Attendant and President of the Pilot Board, and as having received the sanction of the Governor, in accordance with section 6 of the Pilot Ordinance No. 12 of 1868, and therefore being in force.

The third is a Bill to amend the Peace Preservation Ordinance, No. 6, of 1872, which proposes to give power to the Governor in Council to banish, if necessary, for the public safety, any person not a natural born subject of Her Majesty, whether naturalised or not, to cancel his Certificate of Naturalisation, and, if found in the Colony afterwards, to make him liable to arrest without warrant, and to fine, up to $500, as well as to imprisonment until deported again.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The general dulness had been further increased by the outbreak of the insurrection in the Southern Provinces, and by a considerable decline in the value of native currency. As regards Yarns a moderate demand had existed for 16/24 at lower rates, and Grey Shirtings of all weights had attracted a little more attention. Indigo Shirtings and Velvets showed a reduction, and Turkey Reds were still depressed. Woollens were very neglected, Mousselines showing a considerable decline. There had been rather more doing in Nail Rod Iron, but to effect sales holders had accepted lower rates, and the tendency continued weak. Stocks were increasing.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The disturbances reported from the South had given rise to a general feeling of insecurity on the part of the native population, and the Foreign import trade had consequently been seriously affected. Business in Piece Goods especially had been entirely suspended, and quotations were quite nominal.

SHANGHAI.—The interval had been entirely devoted by natives to their New Year holidays, and privately business in imports had not been thoroughly resumed. The weekly auction had opened the market at prices which showed little or no change in currency values of Cotton goods, while in a few cases Woollens appeared slightly firmer, against which there had been, however, a decline in exchange of nearly two per cent., with a still lower tendency. The only operations had been :—2,000 pieces American Jeans at Tls. 2.5C, 2,000 pieces fine Mexican 7lbs. T-Cloths at Tls. 1.40 to 1.42 ; and at auction 600 pieces CPH Camlets averaging Tls. 13.00, 500 pieces CPH Scarlet Long Ells at Tls. 6.60 per piece, 314 CPH Spanish Stripes at Tls. 0.52 per yard, 1,500 pieces 7lbs. Grey Shirtings from Tls. 1.20 to 1.23, 5,400 pieces Green Lion 8-4lbs. Grey Shirtings at Tls. 1.57½, 5,000 pieces 8-4lbs. Grey Shirtings at Tls. 1.60 to 1.66, 2,700 pieces from Tls. 1.69 to 1.73, 900 pieces 7lbs. T-Cloths at Tls. 1.10. 540 pieces 14lbs. common Drills at Tls. 1.82, and 80 pieces Black Lastings at Tls. 9.50 per piece. The Northern ports were still closed, but first steamers are expected to clear for Tientsin on 2nd March. Having purchased before the holidays considerable quantities of Piece Goods in anticipation of the opening of spring trades, dealers were not at all anxious to hurry into any large operations. A few sales of Metals had been effected, holders were asking higher rates, owing to the heavy drop in exchange.

HONG KONG.—Business had been resumed with little alteration in quotations. Yarns: Nos. 16/24's still in good request. Market closed firm with very limited supplies. Sales 50 bales Arrow and Eagle and 100 bales Kingston's Blue Flower at $97.00 per bale, and 100 bales under the Lion chop at $96.00 per bale. Grey Shirtings : 6 lbs.—Slight inquiry, but no business, owing to the paucity of stocks ; 7 lbs. Common qualities in some request. Sales 900 pieces Blue Fish at $1.61 per piece, 2,600 pieces Large Eagle and 2,000 pieces Stag Chop at $1.52½ per piece. 8.4 lbs.—No particular movement. Lower qualities still wanted at a slight improvement in value. Best steady, but very difficult to place. Sales 3,000 pieces Red Pheasant at $12.82½ per piece and 2,000 pieces Pagoda at $2.17½ per piece. In heavy makes transactions were 1,000 pieces Double Lion and 250 pieces Crest at $3.30 per piece, and 500 pieces Stag chop at $3.20 per piece. White Shirtings : Sales embraced some 4,000 pieces Taiwo's, 300 and 600 at $3.00 and $3.55 respectively, being 5 cents below the prices obtained some three week ago, low qualities not so much sought after. Irish-folds had changed hands to the extent of 2,000 pieces at $3.85 per piece for No. 1 quality. T-Cloths : Settlements in 6 lbs. 2,500 pieces Kow-cha-fa at $1.30 per piece and 3,000 pieces J mark at $1.25 per piece. 7 lbs. Ordinary makes difficult to place, the only transactions being 1,000 pieces Kow-cha-fa at $1.56½ to $1.57 per piece. Mexicans had attracted some attention, sales reported 3,000 pieces YX at $1.62½ per piece, 500 pieces Warrior at $1.60 per piece, 800 pieces Red Joss at $1.67½ per piece, 1,300 pieces Silver Dragon at $1.90 per piece, and 1,500 pieces VV at $2.05 per piece. 8 lbs. had been dealt in to some extent, sales 5,000 pieces YX at $1.87½ per piece, 1,200 pieces XX at $2.60 per piece, 500 pieces XXX at $2.47½ per piece, and 2,400 pieces Silver Palm at $1.90 per piec Drills declined 2½ to 5 cents per piece, some 2,500 pieces 14 lbs. Sweekee's Dragon having been booked at $2.52½ per piece. Fancy Cottons : Very little done. Inquiry for Chintz continued, some 500 pieces Stag ticket having been sold at $1.80 per piece. Velvets slightly lower. Handkerchiefs 2,500 dozen Muslin were placed at 66 cents per dozen short clearance. Woollens and Worsteds—Camlets : Settlements 360 pieces HH assorted at $16.25 per piece, 100 pieces JM Scarlet and 150 pieces Gentian at $17 per piece. Lastings : 300 pieces Black No. 1 at $15.25 per piece, 100 pieces H assorted at $13.40, and 100 pieces HH assorted at $15.40 per piece. Spanish Stripes : 120 pieces German at $1, and 108 pieces Gentian HH at 73 cents per yard. Blankets : 600 pairs 10 lbs. Scarlet at $5.30 per pair. Metals : Iron, Nail Rods, nothing doing ; Round, Square, and Flat Bar, assoeted very dull of sale ; Hoop : sales reported of about 430 piculs at $3.30 per picul. Lead : Market weak for distant arrivals, but for spot or parcels close at hand holders asking higher rates ; native inquiry for small lots at full quotations ; sales 20 tons Hole chop at $7.65 per picul. Coals : Market quiet for all descriptions.

CANTON.—Lead : The market had not been re-opened since the native holidays ; buyers, however, were not willing to pay former prices, and quotations were consequently nominally lower ; mixed brands were quoted $8.45 to 8.50 per picul, and Hole Chop and WB $8.55 to 8.60 per picul. Quicksilver : Prices at one time declined to $64 per picul, but had since advanced to $66 to 66.50 per picul. Ginseng : Clarified, No. 1, $385 to $435 ; No. 2, $235 to 285 ; No. 3, $135 to 195 per picul ; Crude, No. 1, $380 to 420 ; No. 2, $230 to 270 ; No. 3, $130 to 180 per picul.

MANILA.—Business had been much more active, and the total of transactions in almost all descriptions of Piece Goods reached a high figure. Values of all articles were, however, a shade weaker at the close. Metals were unaltered, but the Coal market was weaker.

SINGAPORE.—In the early part of the fortnight there was a moderate demand for Grey T-Cloths, Yarns, and White Shirtings, and a fair amount of business was done; latterly the inquiry had fallen off and the market had been quiet, prices of most staples had been steady, and there had been little change in quotations. The sales reported are 9,000 pieces of Grey Shirtings, 42,000 pieces of T-Cloths, 10,000 pieces of Grey Supers, 28,000 pieces White Shirtings, 17,000 pieces White Cambrics, 4,200 pieces T. R. Cambrics, 147 bales of Grey Yarn, 35 bales of T. R. Yarn, 150 bales of Coloured Yarn.

PENANG.—A moderate business had been done in the fortnight, principally in Grey and White goods, but there had been no improvement in prices. Grey Shirtings: Fair sales of 6 lbs. at $29, 7 lbs. at $30 to $32, and 8¼ lbs. at $34 to $41 according to quality. 45 inch 9 lbs. sold at $45. Grey Supers: Small sales of 5 lbs. at $35 to $35½, and of 5½ lbs. at $39. Grey Medapollams: In no inquiry. Grey T-cloths: A fair business done; sales of 5 lbs. at $21½, 6 lbs. at $24½, and 7 lbs. at $28 to $28¾. 6 lbs. Mexicans placed at $29½ to $30, and 7 lbs. at $32.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Transactions during the fortnight had been so very insignificant that it was next to impossible to give any quotations, though, on the whole, prices were easier, more especially in the higher grades. Settlements during the interval had amounted to only 1,500 piculs; arrivals, too, had been very small, and stocks were reduced to only 3,000 piculs; from which it would appear as though the season was rapidly drawing to a close. The Coulnakyle had been taken up for New York at £2 12s. 6d., and sailed on the 23rd Feb. to complete her loading at Hiogo. Export 1st May to date 15,207,117 lbs., against 18,181,339 in corresponding period last season, and 15,512,481 lbs. in 1874-75.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The market had been very quiet, and settlements amounted to 1,600 piculs only. For the season to date, purchases therefore aggregated 55,900 piculs, against 55,525 piculs for the corresponding period of last year. Stocks were reduced to 2,500 piculs. Prices ruled irregularly; quotations were more or less nominal in the absence of any important business.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There had been no business whatever during the week, and as there had been no arrivals, the stock remained as before. Teamen showed no disposition to press sales, but they would probably accept former rates if any buyers were to come forward. Total export to date, 81,349,968, against 73,154,318 in corresponding period last season. Green: There had been only a small business, amounting to 3,500 half-chests. At the close offers were being very generally made, and rates showed an upward tendency, assisted by the weakness in exchange. There had been no addition to the stock during the week, and it was gradually being reduced into a moderate compass; but it was still about 2½ millions above that at the same date last year, while there was nearly the same amount on board the three ships now almost ready to sail to New York.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Market Report says:—The season may now be considered over, and a few shipments of former purchases will close our export for 1876-77. Congous: We have no transactions to report, and there will be no further business till the arrival of the new crop. Scented Teas: Shortly after the publication of our Circular a few settlements of Capers were made, amounting to 2,250 boxes at Tls. 12 to 22 per picul; these prices show but little change on former quotations. There are still about 9,000 boxes of Scented Caper and 2,000 boxes Scented Orange Pekoe in stock, but these meet with no attention from buyers. In Pekoes no purchases are reported. Canton Greens: Settlements during the month have aggregated 1,600 boxes Gunpowder at Tls. 13 to 16 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Early in the interval some inquiry had been established principally in Hanks, and an advance had been paid of about $20 per picul. Since then further adverse news from the European markets had almost entirely stopped business, and the quotations at the close were quite nominal. Purchases had been made in common Hanks as low as $550 to $570, and in common Hamatski at $450 to $465. Settlements, from 1st July, 1876, to date, 19,500 bales; against corresponding period, season 1875-6, 11,000; 1874-5, 8,600; 1873-4, 11,300. Stock, 1,800 bales, against 600 bales at same date last season.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—The China New-Year holidays have entirely put a stop to business since the issue of our last report, and the very disheartening news from home has naturally also combined to check any inclination to operate that might have been shown during the last day or two, with a tendency, towards a weaker exchange. Until inquiry has become more general any quotations are unreliable, but there are rumours of Blue Elephant being offered at Tls. 460, which does not appear dear with a reported purchase of a few bales of good No. 5 Tsatlee (the only one) at Tls. 440 per picul; coarse silks are still neglected, and will probably remain so for the rest of the season.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Circular says:—The past month has been a period of unwonted inaction in this market, and with the exception of a few bales Tsatlee reel, said to be going forward as samples, there are no settlements to chronicle. Late advices, received by cable, announce a drop of 2s. per lb. in the London market, and we look for much lower rates than those now asked for before any business is likely to be transacted. The stock in Canton is very considerable for the advanced period of the season. Long-reels have hardly been wanted, and only 17 piculs of Kowkong, &c., are said to have been taken for India. Re-reels have likewise been in limited in request, finest thread is very scarce, but middling and common grades are in fair supply. Stock in Canton is estimated at 800 to 1,000 bales Tsatlee, 100 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, 50 bales Kowkong, and about 200 bales of inferior sorts. In Waste there have been no dealings. Quotations are quite nominal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Copper had been more freely dealt in, settlements amounting to 3,000 piculs, at about previous rates. Stocks were estimated at 1,500 piculs. Camphor: Deliveries of 1,250 piculs reported, at prices ranging from $14 to 15.75 per picul. Wax: No fresh transactions had taken place, but deliveries on account of former contracts had been made to the extent of 460 piculs. Tobacco: Deliveries of 1,400 piculs reported, at prices much the same as previously ruling.

CANTON.—Drugs, Spices, and Oils: Cassia Lignea is quoted at $11.50 to 11.60 in mats, $11.90 to 12 in boxes; sales, 400 piculs; stock, 7,500 piculs. Cassia Buds, $17.75 to 18; sales, 30 piculs; stock, 100 piculs. Star Aniseed, $25 to 25.50; Rhubarb, No. 2, $90 to 100; Alum, $2.10 to 2.20 per picul; Camphor, $18.50 to 18.75 per picul, packed. Sundries: Fire Crackers, 76c. per box for Manhing's No. 1 gold chop. Vermillion, $33 to 33.25 per box. Matting, Manhing's fine contract, White, 4/4, 10½c.; 5/4, 12½c.; 6/4, 15c. per yard. Red Check, 4/4, 11½c.; 5/4, 13½c.; 6/4, 16c. Double Extra Imperial White, 4/4, 13½c.; 5/4, 16c.; 6/4, 19c. Red Check, 4/4, 15c.; 5/4, 17½c.; 6/4, 20½c. Cargo Ginger, new, in syrup (Chyloong), $3.50 per box of six jars; Mandarin, $4.10; Young Stem, $5,70.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell, and Co.'s Circular says:—Business in produce has not been active during the fortnight. Sugar has again become firmer, but Hemp and Coffee have declined. Sugar: Latest telegrams being again in favour of the article, prices here have advanced to the extent of putting most buyers out of the market. At the beginning of the fortnight moderate contracts for delivery from March to April were placed at $5.50 per picul for extra, and $5 per picul for superior, but dealers are now holding for higher prices, at which little or nothing can be done. Unclayed: The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight amount to rather over 16,000 piculs, part of which has been delivered under contracts previously entered into, and the rest has been sold at $3.12½ to $3.18¾ per picul (£13 3s. 3d. to £13 7s. 11d.). Buyers have now come out at $3.25 per picul (£13 12s 7d.), at which 5,000 piculs were taken to arrive. Cebu and Ilo Ilo advices extend to the 7th and 9th instant respectively. In the former market Sugar was beginning to arrive more freely, and prices had declined somewhat. In the latter market current had not begun to come in to any extent, but superior was abundant, though prices were maintained at a high level owing to the requirements of shippers. Of Ilo Ilo superior we estimate that already upwards of 250,000 piculs have been contracted for, which is a most unusual quantity at this early season of the year. Hemp: Is very dull, and parcels arriving are not saleable at over $5 per picul (£21 11s. 1d.), though stored parcels are held for more. Cebu Hemp may be quoted at $5.25 per picul (£22 9s. 9d.). In course of shipment there are now 7,300 bales going forward to Great Britain, and 7,000 bales to the States. Stocks here, after deducting requirements for vessels in port, we estimate at 21,871 bales, and in Cebu at 107 bales, together 21,978 bales. Coffee: The arrivals are now more plentiful, and price has declined to $19.50 per picul (£75 16s. 11d.), and will go still lower unless better advices come forward. About 700 piculs Zamboanza have been sold during the fortnight at prices ranging from $18.75 to 19.25 per picul (£73 0s. 11d. to £74 18s. 3d.). Tobacco: We do not anticipate that an auction of the 1876 crop, of which samples have already been forwarded to England, will be held for some time yet.

SINGAPORE.—There had been little improvement in the fortnight under review, business generally had been quiet, prices in most instances had remained steady, lower rates of exchange and a decline in freights having assisted in maintaining values. The Gambier market opened dull at $4.40 per picul, the price afterwards declined to $4.30, at which rate the bulk of the business was settled; supplies had come forward slowly, and dealers had not pressed sales; about 1,150 tons had been contracted for; at the close the market was steady. Cube Gambier had been slightly weaker; the total purchases were about 170 tons. There had been a considerable falling off in the business done in black Pepper, only 350 tons having been taken up; the largest portion of the crop had been sold and supplies were coming forward more slowly; prices had remained steady at $7.75 to $7.80 per picul. White Pepper was unchanged in value, and had continued in fair inquiry, 220 tons having been bought at previous prices. Tin had been in demand for America; a considerable business had been done at an advance on last rates; purchases of 320 tons reported at $20 to 20⅛ per picul. A parcel of Bonthyne Coffee had been bought at $21 per picul, and there were no stocks on the market. Pearl Sago had continued quiet, business had been small, rates unchanged. Sago Flour remained firm at last rates; the recent arrivals had been previously contracted for and purchases of expected supplies had been made. Tapioca quiet, supplies scanty, no change in quotations. A considerable business done in Buffalo Hides. Horns inquired for at higher rates. Small sales of Gum Copal, Gum Dammar and Gum Benjamin. Gutta Percha of good qualities commanded high rates, and had been readily taken up. Fair inquiry for Borneo Rubber at weaker rates. The Rice market had been very firm, prices had risen; a moderate business is reported.

PENANG.—Transactions of the fortnight in Tin and other produce had been limited, but a moderate business had been done in Chinese Basket Sugar. Tin: The market opened at $19¼, and subsequently advanced to $19.30. Owing to news of disturbances at Junk Ceylon, holders had become very firm, and at the close refused to name a price. Stock, 3,600 piculs. Black Pepper: Arrivals 2,500 piculs, of which 2,000 piculs had been taken up, partly for Europe and partly for India, at the following rates:—Atchin at $7.50 to 7.60, West Coast at $7.75, and Trang at $7.30—leaving a stock of about 500 piculs Atchin. White Pepper: Purchases at $12.75. Sugar: No. 1 Penang had been in fair demand, transactions at $6.50 to 7.10 according to quality. No. 2 had also found purchasers at $4.40. Chinese Basket Sugar at $3.30 to 3.45. Gutta-percha: Scarce; quotations nominal. Gum Benjamin: No fresh supplies. India-rubber arrived in very small quantities; purchases at $40½. Hides in request, at $9 Buffalo and $13.75 to $14 Cow. Horns: Small supplies and in demand. Nutmegs: Purchases of 110's at $70. Mace: Nothing done; nominal $62 to 64. Fish Maws: A small lot unpicked taken at $114. Tapioca: None offering.

Literature, Science, &c.

The present spring season in the publishing world is characterised by a lamentable dearth of works of real merit. The public taste has become vitiated by sensational novels and stories given in parts in the magazines; and, in consequence, there is less inducement to offer works of any high standard. The circumstance is to be deplored, as it indicates not only a lower range of taste but the dissipation of much talent that might be more usefully employed, in the production of flippant sensational and often not over moral books professing to give the scandals of society, and certainly giving much that might with advantage be kept from the general public. A few good works are, however, announced, among which a second edition of Mr. Trevelyan's Biography of Lord Macaulay; a work, illustrated by Mr. Sydney Hall, giving the chief events of the Prince of Wales's tour in India; two new issues of Mr. Sale's Koran, and a reproduction of the "Roving Englishman in Turkey" call for notice. The Earl of Beaconsfield's works are to be issued in a cheap form, the first of the series, "Lothair," being already published.

Several works connected with the Far East have been noticed in the home papers. The Times contains a careful and very favourable review of Dr. Dennys's "Chinese Folk Lore;" and the Pall Mall has a laudatory notice of Mr. F. H. Balfour's "Waifs and Strays."

The Friend of China (organ of the Anti-Opium Society) for April is mainly taken up with the recent deputation of the members and friends of that association to the Chinese Envoys. It contains also a valuable letter from Dr. Douglas, of the British Museum, in which he combats what he holds to be the error of classing opium-smoking with the consumption of alcoholic drinks, the two in his opinion being essentially different. The Journal du Commerce Maritime has a valuable article upon French colonies and colonisation, from the pen of M. Mocquart. He controverts the statement often made that the French are not an emigrating and colonising country. Referring to Cochin-China, he asks whether this much-abused colony really owes the mortality which affects it to the insalubrity of the climate; and replies that the truth is, this mortality is due to defective sanitary arrangements. The proof of this is that wherever this state of things has been improved the mortality has diminished. During the time of the conquest, when the troops had to undergo severe marches, the mortality among them was less than it is at present. The Geographical Magazine for April contains a very interesting article entitled "Arctic Sledging Journals," which gives a vivid idea of the hardships and sufferings encountered on the recent expedition. It has also a paper of value on Indian Marine Surveys in 1874-76. Mr. J. Thompson's "Street Life" keeps up to its standard. The photographs in the third part, just issued, are of "Street Doctors," "Street Advertising," and "Clapham Common Industries."

The Singapore Directory for the Straits Settlements, 1877, by T. J. Keaughran, Superintendent of the Government Printing-office.—This work has been issued in consequence of an opening having been afforded by the two Straits Directories formerly existing having ceased to appear. It contains, in addition to a list of the residents, Government and mercantile establishments, &c., an excellent historical sketch of the Settlements, which will be valuable to new arrivals, and also statistics as to Larut, &c. The work, which the Editor expects to be able to improve in respect to its general information, promises to be of much value.

NOTES OF TRAVEL, &c.

exploring expedition under Colonel Prjevalski in Central Asia. Up to the 15th of February the expedition remained in the Alten Tak Mountain, south of lake Lob Nor. In the neighbourhood of that lake Colonel Prjevalski has discovered the ruins of two ancient cities. He has also ascertained that until 1862 some fifty families of Russian Dissenters were settled close to the lake. It is supposed that they had escaped from Siberia. In 1862 they broke up their camp and proceeded towards Turfan. Since then sight has been completely lost of them.

The "Valorous" Expedition.—The Royal Society have published the reports on the biology and physics of this cruise (Proceedings, xxv., pp. 117-237). It will be remembered that when the Admiralty determined to send H.M.S. Valorous to Greenland as a store-ship to the Arctic Expedition of 1875, Dr. Gwyn Jeffreys volunteered his services as naturalist, and secured the services of Mr. H. P. Carpenter as assistant. The latter took special charge of the physical observations, which are here reported on by his father, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, while Mr. Gwyn Jeffreys treats of the biological results. He has himself worked out the Mollusca, and has been assisted in the other groups by Mr. Norman, Dr. McIntosh and Profs. Allman, Duncan, and Dickie. The Valorous collections contained no less than 339 species of marine animals, of which 126 had not previously been recorded from Davis Straits, and both the biological and physical results will be of special value as a connecting link between the observations of the Challenger and those of the Alert and Discovery.

The "Challenger" Expedition.—A letter from Professor A. Agassiz, published in the last number of Silliman's American Journal of Science, gives some information as to the proposed distribution of the labour and honour of working out the unrivalled mass of material collected during the cruise of H.M.S. Challenger. According to Professor Agassiz, the following groups have already been assigned to the naturalists named :—Fishes, Dr. Günther ; Annelida, Dr. McIntosh ; Crinoids, Sir W. Thomson ; Comatulidae, Mr. H. Carpenter ; Echini, Prof. Agassiz ; Ophiuridae, Mr. Lyman ; Polyzoa, Mr. Busk ; Actinozoa, Mr. Mosely ; Hydrozoa, Dr. Allman ; Spongida, Sir W. Thomson and Dr. O. Schmidt ; Radiolaria, Prof. Häckel ; and Foraminifera, &c., Mr. J. Murray. Other groups have not yet been allotted, but will probably be given to the zoologists who undertook the same departments in working out the Porcupine collections.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Royal Society on March 22, Dr. Hooker, C.B., President, in the chair, papers were read, "On the Variations of the Daily Range of the Magnetic Declination as recorded at Kew Observatory," by Professor B. Stewart ; "On Stratified Discharges," by W. Spottiswoode; "On Friction between Surfaces moving at low Speeds," by Professor Fleeming Jenkin and J. A. Ewing; and on "Magnetic Observations at Kerguelen," by Rev. S. J. Perry.

At the British Archæological Association on March 21, the Rev. S. M. Mayhew in the chair, further inspection was announced of the large Roman columns found some years ago, near the East Gate, Gloucester, and most probably the remains of a Roman temple of considerable dimensions. Mr. Prigg reported the discovery of a Roman villa at Icklingham, with a hypocaust found in ploughing a field, a portion of the site of the Roman station. Mrs. Baily exhibited a misericord of the sixteenth century, having a deeply-ribbed blade, found on the site of Old St. Thomas's Hospital.

At the Meteorological Society on March 21 the papers read were "Results of Meteorological Observations made at Patras, Greece, during 1874 and 1875," by the Rev. H. A. Boys ; "Contributions to the Meteorology of the Pacific, Fiji," by Mr. R. H. Scott, containing a discussion of all published information as to the climate of Fiji which the author has been able to discover, and "Local Diurnal Range," by Mr. S. H. Miller, which was followed by another paper on the same subject, by Mr. W. Marriott, which discussed the questions of whether the tables of corrections for diurnal range at present used by a large number of observers are trustworthy, and whether they are applicable to different places in the United Kingdom. The conclusions arrived at were that the present corrections could not be considered as accurate, that no strictly comparable records exist for instituting a satisfactory inquiry, and that it is very undesirable to apply any corrections whatever to the observations to deduce means from them.

THE WORKING MEN'S MEETING ON CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The letter on "The Working Men's Meeting," which was published in your issue of the 2nd inst., contains, it strikes me, more abuse than argument, and I beg in all fairness to remind the rev. writer that we have not only "forced our trade, calicoes as well as opium, on a reluctant Government"—to quote his own words—but have forced and are forcing Christianity upon China by the same means. In fact, Christianity is being taught in China on the strength of those "treaty relations we have established at the cannon's mouth," and I ask Mr. Turner to explain why the Gospel of Peace should be backed up by the "inevitable gunboat" and trade be left to its own resources.

To say that the Chinese Government object to the importation of opium, which yields £10 per chest duty, and taxes and squeezes innumerable, is simply to argue without any knowledge of the Chinese character ; and to expect to stamp out the use of the drug in China by discontinuing the exportation from India is utterly Utopian. If the gentlemen who have joined the crusade were able to adduce arguments of a practical nature, they would be entitled to the thanks of everybody who desires friendly and satisfactory relations with China ; but they seem to have got up an agitation on the chance of its producing some results in the direction they desire. Surely Government cannot be expected to inaugurate such a drastic measure as the suppression of the Indian opium trade, simply because a few individuals have taken it into their heads that it ought to be suppressed. Whatever steps these gentlemen deem it their duty to take in future, I hope we shall avoid a repetition of such a sorry performance as the late interview with the Chinese Envoys.—I am, &c., D.

ECCLESIASTICAL ENDOWMENTS IN CEYLON.

A Parliamentary paper has been issued containing several documents relating to the discussion in the Ceylon Legislative Council on October 19, 1876, on the subject of the ecclesiastical subsidies in that colony. A motion was carried by ten to six, affirming that it was not desirable to withhold these subsidies, the minority consisting of the Governor, Sir William Gregory, the Government agent for the Western Provinces, and four non-official members. These latter gentlemen signed a protest recording the ground on which they dissented from the motion, and this document, and a petition to the Queen, signed by '8,921 persons, praying for the cessation of all ecclesiastical subsidies in the colony, form the principal portion of the papers now published. The petition states that the census of 1871 showed the population of Ceylon to be 2,405,287. Of these the non-Christian section numbered 2,158,595; about 190,000 were Roman Catholics and between 55,000 and 60,000 were Protestants. The Christians who benefit by the payments from the revenue of the colony do not, the petitioners state, exceed 15,000, and they "most humbly submit it to be unjust that a portion of the general revenue should be appropriated for the religious advantage of a small section of the community, and that section the best able from position and wealth to perform the Christian duty of supporting its own pastors and religious ministrations." Lord Carnarvon, in a despatch dated March 10, 1877, acknowledges the receipt of the protest and petition, but says he must defer giving any advice to Her Majesty on the subject until he has had an opportunity of communicating with Sir William Gregory after his return to England.

DRAINING THE ZUYDER ZEE.—Active preparations are going on fo the commencement of the long-projected work of draining the Zuyde Zee. A dam 40 kilometres (24 miles 1,504 yards) long, and 50 metre broad at its base, is to be carried across the gulf, built up to a heigh' of half a metre above the ordinary level of high tide. Upon thi pumping machines of 10,000 horses' power will be erected, capable o' pumping up from the enclosed sea and discharging on the outside o the dam 6,500,000 cubic metres of water daily. Taking the average depth of the water at four and a half metres, it is estimated that the work of pumping will be completed in about sixteen years from its commencement. The total cost of reclamation is set down at f.335,000,000, but, huge as this sum is, the undertaking is confidently looked upon as likely to prove a most remunerative speculation. The success of the scheme will add to the kingdom a new province 195,300 hectares, or nearly 500,000 acres, in extent. Judging from previous experiences in connection with the Haarlem Sea, it is reckoned that at least 176,000 hectares of the land thus won will be applicable to agricultural purposes, which, at an average value of f.4,000 only per hectare, will richly repay the enterprise and treasure lavished on this gigantic undertaking.

MR. HENRY SPICER, the senior member of the firm of Spicer Brothers, of New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, wholesale stationers, died on the 4th inst., aged seventy-six. Mr. Spicer was a Nonconformist, and a liberal contributor to many religious and charitable organisations. He had for some time previous to his death been very infirm, and lived in comparative retirement. It is, however, only a few months since he laid the foundation-stone of Union Chapel, Islington. In politics Mr. Spicer was a Liberal, and at the general election in 1868 he acted as chairman of Lord Enfield's committee.

GENERAL WHITFIELD.—Our readers will regret to hear of the death of Lieut. Gen. Whitfield, who was formerly Commandant of the Forces in Hong Kong, and, during part of the years 1869 and 1870, acted as Lieut. Governor, in the absence of Sir Richard Macdonnell. Although in his position of Acting-Governor he did not have occasion to inaugurate or carry out any measures of special importance, he will be remembered favourably by many for his courtesy and urbanity and for the genuine desire which he evinced to do his utmost for the benefit of all classes of the community.

GOVNRNOR LONGDEN'S tenure of office at Demerara ended on the 7th ult., on which day he embarked on his way to take up the Government of Ceylon, after a sojourn in England. Farewell addresses were presented to him by the Court of Policy and by the Royal Agricultural Society of Demerara. On the day after his Excellency's departure Mr. Young, the Government Secretary, was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor, or Administrator, pending the arrival of Mr. Kortright.

HERR LANDAU and a number of creditors having appealed against the sentence passed by the Moscow Court in the Commercial Loan Bank affair, the proceedings have to be revised by the Judicial Department of the St. Petersburg Senate. The case will be heard on the 18th inst., and is expected to be decided on the 23rd.

THE engagement is announced of his Excellency Jushii Siozo Aoki, the Japanese Envoy at Berlin, to Fräulen von Rhade, a German lady of rank.

CHINESE ACTION ON THE CONVENTION.

NEVER, probably, in the history of our relations with China have diplomatic matters reached so peculiar a stage as that at which they have arrived at the present time. While our Government is still hesitating as to whether it should accept the Chefoo Convention, which has been provisionally agreed upon by Sir THOMAS WADE, we learn, by the latest reports from China, that the native officials are taking steps, with an amount of promptitude that is very remarkable, to avail themselves of the concessions with respect to the lekin duties which have been made to them. Similar alacrity, it must be admitted, was shown by the Chinese authorities in causing the placard with reference to the Yunnan outrage to be posted—alacrity, no doubt, greatly to their credit, as any serious delay in posting the document could not fail to deprive it of its weight and nullify its effect. But with respect to the Lekin question the matter stands differently. There could be no special hurry with regard to it, and the noticeable promptitude with which action has been taken would appear, therefore, to result from a very clear perception on the part of the Chinese officials of the advantage which they would derive from the proposed regulations coming into force. It would seem that the Chinese have considered that it was not necessary to await the ratification of the Convention by HER MAJESTY'S Government before commencing to put into force such portions of the terms agreed upon as were purely under their own direction. This, at least, appears to be the only rational conclusion that can be arrived at on the subject under the existing state of affairs. But, in taking this course, they have apparently stretched a point too far, if, indeed, they are not wrong in principle altogether. The publication of the proclamation was an act they were clearly called upon to perform as an evidence of good faith, even if there had been no stipulation with regard to it in the Convention; and in respect to this the matter comes under a different category to the other terms provisionally agreed to. But it would certainly seem that until the Chefoo Convention had been ratified by HER MAJESTY'S Government no action could be taken under it; and there can hardly be a doubt that at all events no steps should have been taken with regard to points which had actually been for many years the subject of dispute. This had notoriously been the case with respect to the lekin duties levied by the Chinese officials within the foreign settlements at Shanghai. Indeed, it was mainly with a view to putting an end to the constant trouble arising between the Chinese officials and the municipal authorities there that the clause in the Convention which has caused so much discussion was introduced.

The terms which Sir THOMAS WADE agreed to directly affected the question of principle which had long been the subject of dispute, namely, whether the Chinese had the right to levy any tax whatever upon foreign goods which had paid the Treaty duties while they were still within the settlements. By implication, the terms agreed to might be considered to admit that the Chinese had such a right, though in a well-known case it was decided by the Chief Judge of the Supreme Court at Shanghai that they had not; and upon this basis the local officials at that port appear to have proceeded to action at once and to have drawn up the rules for the levy of these duties which have caused so much discussion and just apprehension. In this they have clearly gone too far. They have assumed, before the Convention has been ratified, that a point of great importance has been decided in their favour, whereas the proposed terms in the Convention were especially and designedly in the nature of a compromise between conflicting principles, and their satisfactoriness or otherwise must obviously depend upon the rules for carrying them out, which the Chinese authorities—or at least the local officials in Shanghai—have taken upon themselves to decide, apparently without any reference to the Consuls or other foreign representatives in China. The matter has thus been made needlessly complicated, and it will require considerable tact and adroitness on the part of the Government here to avoid falling into some error or difficulty with regard to it. It is no doubt unfortunate that there was a want of unanimity between our representative and one of his colleagues on the subject, and this may, in part, account for the peculiar course of action which the Chinese have taken. From the volume of American diplomatic correspondence recently issued it appears that Mr. SEWARD considers that the Chinese have the absolute right to levy lekin duties on foreign goods, whether within the foreign settlements or not, while Sir THOMAS WADE is of course bound to attach some weight to the decision given by so good an authority on such a point as Sir EDMUND HORNBY, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court at Shanghai, and it is impossible to deny that there is a conflict both of law and of jurisdiction in the matter. The point is a delicate one, and one also fraught with very important consequences; and it is, therefore, the more to be regretted that the Chinese officials have, while the matter was actually under the consideration of the Foreign-office here, taken action which virtually decides absolutely in their favour a matter in regard to which, if due time had been allowed for the ratification of the Convention, there was every likelihood that our Government, following Sir THOS. WADE, would have been willing to come to a fair and satisfactory compromise.

THE CHICO MASSACRE.

IT is impossible not to feel a thrill of horror and indignation on reading the details of the outrage committed upon the unfortunate Chinese who a short time back were murdered at Chico. Five out of six men, whose only offence was that they worked at cheaper rates than their assailants, were shot down in their hut like dogs, and a sixth escaped to tell the tale, only because he feigned death. That such a deed could be perpetrated in a land which boasts to be in the van of progress is sufficient to make the most sanguine sceptical, and to cause a doubt as to what real advantage is gained by a civilisation which leaves men as savage as they were in the woods, but puts revolvers into their hands the better to carry out their brutal wishes. For the credit of the United States, it is only just to bear in mind that those who have committed this frightful outrage are the lowest scum of the labouring population, and that the feeling of all respectable citizens in California is strongly against high-handed proceedings far short of deliberate and wholesale murder. But it would appear that considerable difficulty is likely to be experienced in consequence of the "rowdy" element having obtained a dangerous ascendency; and it will require no little courage and perseverance to withstand its action. According to late Californian papers, a threatening letter was sent by an anti-coolie organisation to Col. BEE, who had given evidence before the Congressional Committee, and had taken a prominent part in opposing the anti-coolie movement in general. What amount of real danger there may be in the threat received it is of course difficult to conjecture; but Col. BEE is plainly told that he is marked by the "11 of the 708," and will be killed if he do not leave the State within thirty days. Others have been similarly threatened, and it is evident that a desperate gang are endeavouring to raise up a reign of terror in respect of the Chinese labour question. The circumstance is to be deeply deplored, and calls for immediate and decisive action. In the long run we have every faith in the power of our American cousins to stamp out rowdyism of this kind; and we make no doubt that in due course they will be able to overcome the present rising, which is a blot upon their good name and their civilisation. But in the meantime the evil which it will work cannot fail to be considerable. Cruel wrong will be inflicted upon innocent men, and the influence of America with China will be materially lowered by her giving the Chinese Government constant and repeated cause for complaint by violating the distinct terms of the Burlingame Treaty. It is to be hoped, therefore, that no efforts will be spared to put down the band of ruffians who have taken the law into their hands, and, whatever laws may be passed, at least to protect Chinese immigrants from outrages which are a disgrace to the name—we will not say of Christianity and civilisation, but—of common justice and common humanity.

THE Friend of China gives an account of an interview which took place recently between Sir THOS. WADE and some members of the Committee and friends of the Anti-Opium Society. The chair was taken by the Earl of ABERDEEN and several members of Parliament were present. Sir THOS. WADE acknowledges to the full the evil of Opium-smoking, but holds that it is hopeless to combat it by political agitation. He considers the Opium revenue to be a matter of great consideration to the Chinese Government, and that they have not the power, even if they have the will, to put down the use of the drug.

ACCORDING to the latest reports in the Panama papers the agents of Messrs. OLYPHANT and Co., of Hong Kong, were sanguine of being able to complete the proposed contract with the Peruvian Government for the importation of Chinese free labour.

MR. HENRY HERVEY has been appointed to succeed Mr. PHILIP CURRIE as head of the China and Japan Department at the Foreign-office. The latter gentleman has, we understand, been transferred to the Turkish Department.

CONSULAR REPORTS.

We have received this morning a batch of reports, but can only give in our present issue the one from the new port of Kiungchow :—

Acting Vice-Consul HARVEY to Sir B. ROBERTSON.

Kiungchow, October 20, 1876.

Sir,—Mr. Ford thought it expedient to forward a trade report on the 19th of August last, giving statistics for the first four months during which the port of Kiungchow had been open to foreign commerce; and as the prospects of trade in a new port are no doubt watched with peculiar interest, I have thought it well to supplement his report by furnishing the facts on which a judgment can be founded for the first completed half year. I have the honour to inclose comparative tables of shipping, imports, and exports, for the two quarters ended 30th June and 30th September respectively. I have prepared them from the Customs returns, to which I obtained access through the kind permission of Mr. Mc Kean, the Commissioner of Customs. The progress which had already become apparent when Mr. Ford wrote, still continues, and is vouched for in the most striking manner by a comparison of the two quarters. The tables speak for themselves, and require no further comment. I will merely add, that the Customs revenue, which only amounted to Tls. 3,206 up to the end of June, had increased to Tls. 20,780 for the September quarter. Steamers having arrived with much greater regularity during the last three months much more confidence is now reposed in them by native merchants; and though as yet the great bulk of the trade is carried on in junks, there can be no doubt that a very much larger proportion of it will in time be transferred to the foreign carrier. Messrs. E. Herton and Co., the only British firm as yet established here, are much encouraged by the results of the last few weeks, and have, I understand, addressed a circular to their constituents, in which they speak confidently of the prospects and capabilities of the port.

The sugar grown in the island and in the neighbouring peninsula is the staple export. Mr. Herton says it is well suited for refining purposes and for exportation to Europe and America; and there is good ground for thinking that as the demand increases production will be stimulated and an important trade developed. The increase in the import of opium points to the gradual regularisation of the trade in this article, which, it is well known, has hitherto been underhand or illicit on these coasts; and this is not the least of the benefits which will accrue to this district from the opening of a foreign port.

The anchorage here is found to be much better than was supposed. In fact, apart from the inconvenience of loading at a distance of two or three miles from the port, there seems to be no serious objection attaching to it. The masters of the steamers who have visited the port most frequently say there is excellent holding-ground, and that they could ride out a typhoon here without more risk than is incurred in the harbour of Hong Kong. There has been no typhoon this season, and only on one occasion, during the prevalence of a smart gale, which blew for three or four days from the north-east, has the loading or discharging of cargo been interrupted by the state of the weather.

The climate also was found more temperate than was expected, 96 deg. Fahrenheit being the maximum attained, and that was recorded only once, on the 27th June. During July, August, and September 90 deg. was the maximum and 78 deg. the minimum shown by the thermometer. The approach to Kiungchow is now better understood. The circuitous Nowchow route is given up, and vessels make direct for the Laga Islands and Hainan Head, thirty hours being the duration of an average passage to this port from Hong Kong.

The trade here will be much benefited by the opening of Pakhoi. There will probably be a great increase of steamer traffic, for Kiungchow will be a convenient place of call, and steamers failing to obtain freight in the one place will have a chance of obtaining it in the other. At the same time, Pakhoi is far enough from this place to prevent the Hainan traffic being absorbed by it; the trade here and at Hainan, the port of the neighbouring peninsula ten miles distant, forms a separate commercial circle, naturally independent of Pakhoi; and there can be no doubt there is room for the development of foreign trade at both places.

The opening of Haiphong by the French will in the same way contribute in time to the prosperity of both places. As will be seen by the Shipping Table, several steamers have called here both on their way to and from Haiphong; and it seems likely that the opening of Annam almost concurrently with the establishment of Consular ports at Kiungchow and Pakhoi will give a powerful stimulus to trade in these regions, and will materially contribute towards a general opening up of the hitherto secluded south-eastern coast of the Asiatic continent.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The members of the Chinese Embassy continue to manifest great interest in the various rational and scientific establishments here, and are evidently determined to acquire as much information as possible with regard to the institutions of the country. On the 24th ult. they were entertained by Mr. Spottiswoode, and were shown some striking experiments with the electric light, that gentleman being assisted by Professor Tyndall, and Sir Thomas Wade being among those present. Afterwards a reception was held, at which all the leading scientific men in London were present. The next day they paid a visit to Earl Russell; and on the 27th (as already noted) they dined with the Japanese Minister, with whom they are upon very friendly terms. On the 29th they visited the Mint, where they were met by the Deputy Governor, the Hon. Mr. Freemantle, and shown over the establishment. Everything was explained minutely to them, and Mr. Freemantle expressed a hope that China would soon have a Mint of her own, which would greatly facilitate commerce. They have also visited the Bank of England, where they were met by the Governor, Mr. Gibbs, and the Deputy Governor, Mr. Palmer, by whom they were shown over the building. Thursday they visited Pentonville Prison.

THE CHINESE IN EASTERN TURKESTAN.

Mr. A .Vambery writes from Buda Pesth under date of March 17 on the above subject. After reviewing the history of the hostilities between the Chinese and Yakub Beg, he says :—

In considering the attitude taken by Russia touching this war, and the internal condition of the dominions of Yakub Beg, it will be found that the fortunes of this Mohammedan conqueror are on the wane, and that he is very likely to succumb to the advancing Chinese troops. I have already pointed out the superiority of the Chinese weapons, for, in spite of the Russian belief that the English have furnished him with thousands and thousands of Enfield rifles, and that whole batteries of guns have jumped over the Sasser-Pass of the Kun-Lün to the banks of the Kashga and Yarkand rivers, the Russians themselves are obliged to admit that the Yarkandi soldiers are armed with the old heavy matchlocks, and, in spite of the instructeurs militaires sent from Constantinople, that they are as undrilled as they were a hundred years ago. It must, besides, be taken into account that Russia, far from impeding the advance of the Chinese towards Kashgar, have hitherto, semi-officially, but most actively, supported the Chinese. This relates particularly to the caravans of provisions which are going from the Russian frontier, especially from the post on the Zaizan Lake towards Gutchen, carrying flour and corn to the Chinese army, which, considering its utterly defective military administration, would have most miserably perished without this Russian assistance. Not less than 120,000 poods of corn have been transported from Russia into the Chinese camp, and each convoy has been escorted by Russian soldiers, partly infantry, partly cavalry. Mr. Kamenski, by whom the business was chiefly carried on, was certainly well paid by the Chinese ; but the Russian Government itself must have been fully aware of what was being done, for otherwise it is scarcely comprehensible how they could have recognised, nay, aided, the schemes of the Court of Peking in re-conquering a lost province, which it was believed Russia herself was eager to annex. The Russian policy is certainly mysterious, and can be only explained by considering that a new and vigorous Mohammedan Power would not have been agreeable in the immediate neighbourhood of the three Khanates, where Russia is just now endeavouring to consolidate her power. The policy of the Russians in Turkestan is for the present chiefly directed towards the course of the Oxus, and not in the direction of the valleys of the Thien Shan Mountains, so that it must be much more convenient for them that the rising power of a fortunate adventurer should be supplanted by the old decrepit rule of the Chinese. Another circumstance which speaks much against the chances of Yakub Beg in the present contest is the great unpopularity of his Government with the Eastern Turkestanis, who, tired by his rigid—nay, tyrannic—régime, and exhausted by continuous warfare, have greatly changed their opinions concerning that former redeemer of the heathen Chinese, and so-called Resuscitator of Islam. We hear, also, of the activity of Hakim Khan Före, a son of Buzurg Khan, whom Yakub Beg forcibly dethroned and drove out of his dominions. This pretender has many followers in the chief towns, and if the news of his making common cause with the Chinese, as is rumoured in the Russian papers, be true, the political conditions in Eastern Turkestan are very likely to undergo an essential change much sooner than is generally expected in Europe, and particularly in England. Under these critical circumstances, it would be interesting to know what line of policy the English Government is likely to pursue. Russia has already shown her colours. Will England do the same, or is the man who was found worthy enough to be the subject of diplomatic attention to be left entirely to his fate ?

EARLY INTERCOURSE WITH CHINA.

Dr. Dudgeon has written an interesting article in the Glasgow Herald, in which he treats on the above subject. After premising that in his opinion it is an error to consider that opium has in any way conduced to civilisation in China, and arguing that what is meant by opium as a civiliser and a pioneer of commerce would be much more correctly and logically expressed by saying that we owe the few privileges we possess to the determined opposition of the Chinese Government to our opium trade, for by her opposition she was plunged into war with this country, and being unable to cope with our military and naval power she was obliged to submit to our demands, he goes on to describe the earliest intercourse between China and the West as follows :—

Every one who knows anything of the subject will admit that a very early intercourse existed between the East and the West. The early demand for silk seems to have brought traders from distant nations together. It is highly probable that this silk trade was known in the time of Isaiah, 700 B.C., and the title employed by this writer for China doubtless indicates its origin from the Chinese word for silk, which is likewise the origin and explanation of all words in the various languages of Europe and Asia for this substance, as well also as the name by which the country and people were known to the Romans and others. The article was known to and highly valued by the Romans, Greeks, Phœnicians, and others, and the early demand for silks made by the Seres, and the halo of power and wealth which invested the country, the people, and fabrics, and which has not yet entirely vanished, explains the early intercourse and the references to the subject which we find in such writers as Ptolemy, Aristotle, Horace, Arrian, and others. The existence of those coarse Chinese porcelain snuff bottles, identical with what we find at the present day in Cathay, in Egyptian tombs, and which dates back to 1000 B.C., according to one French savant, and likewise the great similarity between Chinese and Egyptian customs, &c., go to confirm the early intercourse which must have existed. The Greeks knew of the use of silk in the time of Alexander the great, and they got it from Indian merchants. The eggs of the silkworm and the seeds of the mulberry tree were introduced into Europe in the sixth century by a Nestorian monk returning from China in the year 552. Although sericulture then became known in Europe, the raw material and the woven fabrics were introduced long anterior to this period. The old writers already referred to tell us of the markets that were held in the Belurtay, where the Bactrians, Greeks, and Seres met. First the Israelities, through their Red Sea ports, in the time of David and Solomon, then Tyre, and later Alexandria, carried on the trade with Arabia, Africa, and India, and through these emporiums the Western World was furnished with the wares from these regions. In these ancient times the Chinese first traded overland to the confines of the Caspian to the great marts of Armenia, and then a long and protracted war in Persia compelled them to cross Thibet at the Himalaya, and pull down the Ganges or Indus, and there await the Red Sea fleet which came annually to Guzerat. Afterwards the Chinese junks ventured to the West—this mode of communication by sea proving more advantageous — and visited the Persian Gulf, Coast of Malabar, Ceylon, and Atchin, and there disposed of their goods. The Chinese had political and commercial relations with the countries bordering on the Caspian in the second century—they received ambassadors from them, and sent such to them in return. We read of several of these in the first century. There was one from Rome in A.D. 166 by way to India, sent by Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, with the view of establishing a direct commerce with China, instead of through the Parthians as hitherto. One pound of silk sold then for ten ounces of gold. I need not refer to the Embassies from China to the West, one in A.D. 74 and another in 97, when the Envoy in the latter year was deputed to the shores of the Caspian, with the view of penetrating the Roman Empire and discovering the channel by which the silks were exported. And but for the timidity of this Chinese General then sent westwards, Rome and China would have become better acquainted with each other. In 65 A.D. Buddhism was introduced from India to China, and all the circumstances of the case of course presuppose a knowledge of the country, doubtless gained by commerce. Such were the relations, very briefly stated, of China with the West when the Nestorians appear on the scene. The Flowery Land was thus not in these early times the jealous, exclusive country which we have pictured to ourselves of later times, and it is from a consideration of this frequent and early intercourse that there is very great probability for the view, supported by tradition and ecclesiastical history to some extent, that Christianity was partially known as far east as China at the end of the first or beginning of the second century, if not in the Apostolic age. All writers agree in attributing marvellous rapidity to the early dissemination of Christianity. We know Justin's opinion about its extension in the middle of the second century. The Nestorians proceeded to China in the year 505, and they existed and flourished there for 800 years, propagating Christianity, founding churches, and, until the Crusades, keeping up a regular connection with the mother Chaldean Church. The two Arabian travellers who proceeded by sea to China in the ninth century, following in the wake of the Chinese junks returning from Ceylon, speaking of Christians, state that as many as 120,000 persons — Jews, Christians, Mohammedans, and Parsees — perished at the siege of Canfu in 878. Marco Polo speaks respectfully of these Nestorians, and mentions their existence in most of the towns of Central Asia. The trade must indeed have been valuable and extensive when we find so many persons destroyed at this port, to which the Arab merchants resorted. An Arabian Embassy proceeded to China, via Kashgar, in 708. The celebrated traveller Ibn Batuta went on a visit to his countrymen in China in 1324, multitudes of whom appear to have settled in the great emporiums. The next point of consequence, and one which has been felt for many centuries, was the establishment of the Mongolian Empire, the subjugation of nearly all Asia and Europe, and the formation of the vastest empire which history has ever recorded. The Mongol conquests in Europe and Asia united for a short time the eastern and western world. Several Franciscan friars visited the Mongol camp, endeavouring to enlist the Mongols as allies against the Saracens. The fears of popes and European sovereigns led to various missions to the Mongols. The most authentic accounts of the country date from the visit of the Polo family. In the middle of the thirteenth century the two brothers proceeded first to the Crimea, and thence were led by a series of events to China, where they were favourably received by Kublai Khan. In 1274 they returned to China, taking with them young Marco, then only sixteen years of age. The Polos spent in all about twenty-four years in the East, and Marco held high office in China. In 1254 Haitho, King of Armenia, went to China to implore for an abatement of tribute which he had been obliged to pay. A little later we find several Roman Catholic priests at Peking, the first being John of Monte Carvino, who made many converts. He found the Nestorians there with a Church and in a flourishing condition, by whom he was opposed. He was made Archbishop of Peking in 1307, and seven assistants were sent out to him. His successor had twenty-six additional labourers sent to assist him. Oderic, another friar, at that time travelled in the country, and observed with joy that there already existed several Roman Catholic churches. During the preceding 600 years the trade was carried on over land and by sea to the West, as already detailed. The relations were extended towards the West by conquest, and a flourishing trade followed in its train. The Mongol conquests opened a very wide field for commercial enterprise towards the West. After the accession of the native dynasty which succeeded the Mongols on the Throne of China we hear no more of the Roman Catholics. They and the Nestorians must have probably become Buddhists and Mohammedans. Venice and Genoa continued to fetch the articles of Chinese trade from Alexandria, whither the Arab vessels carried them. The commerce was very trifling, and no merchant seems to have been desirous of penetrating into the far-famed country.

THE RECENT OUTRAGE AGAINST CHINAMEN IN CALIFORNIA.

The Telegraph concludes an article, in which it speaks in justifiably severe terms on the above matter, as follows :—

The savage proceeding to which we have called attention is the natural outcome of a chronic and unjustifiable animosity cherished by many Americans towards inferior races, though we are happy to be assured that there is a large cultivated class in the Union who have as little sympathy with that sentiment as Englishmen. Hobbes, in his "Leviathan," maintains that primitive man by nature, like certain of the lower animals, had a ruling propensity for internecine warfare; and certainly the attitude still maintained by many white men in the United States towards coloured races would seem to indicate that this propensity has not yet disappeared from among the Caucasian race. While the Indian tribes in British North America live from age to age on terms of uninterrupted harmony with the fur trappers and pioneer settlers from the American boundary to Hudson's Bay, and from Red River to the Athabasca Pass, the relations between American citizens and the Indians in their territory are in a state of perpetual disturbance, and in most cases the white man is the chief transgressor. Even in those States which have always been free from the taint of slavery, the marked degradation to which the negro is exposed cannot fail occasionally to exasperate him against his white rival. In the early days of Californian development the negro in common with the Chinaman was under the necessity of carrying about his person a badge certifying that he had paid his head money for the privilege of living in a white community. Any coloured person who failed to comply with that humiliating condition was unceremoniously expelled from the State, and in 1856 hundreds of respectable and industrious negroes took refuge in the British colony of Vancouver's Island from the intolerable tyranny to which we have referred. But Americans will eventually find the Chinaman a more difficult problem to solve than the other races with which they have been brought into contact. The Chinese are taciturn, persevering, laborious, and intelligent; and, being naturally sly, they are shrewd enough not to imperil unnecessarily their material prospects in a strange land by flagrantly imprudent conduct. They can adapt themselves with singularly versatile aptitude to new circumstances. Keeping in view these valuable qualities, together with the fact that a large tide of emigration has already set in from the densest population of the Flowery Land towards western and southern countries, and that in all probability that tide can never be arrested, a momentous question arises. Are the scores of millions that in future may issue from the Chinese Empire to absorb Western races and ultimately overpower them with a semi-barbarous civilisation, or are the Western races to incorporate the Celestials and mould them to Western ideas? The inquiry furnishes scope for interesting speculation to the sociologist, the philosopher, the comparative philologist, and the statesman. The Chinese Ambassador, Kuo, in responding to the appeal of a deputation which addressed him lately on the opium question, ominously stated that since the Imperial authorities had determined to send embassies to foreign Courts his Excellency's people might soon be expected to follow; and Mr. Goldwin-Smith remarks that it is far from being a settled point whether or not Chinamen may yet become the dominant race in Australia. In any case the bulk of Chinese emigrants to the American, European, or Australian continents, for a considerable period to come will be composed chiefly of a helot class that may prove eminently useful as "hewers of wood and drawers of water." Collisions on the first impact between them and Anglo-Saxons are inevitable, and the competition their cheaper labour will offer is sure for some time yet to occasion irritation to white men. But justice, humanity, and religion unite in pleading on their behalf for a friendly reception from Christian communities, while under any circumstances they cannot be excluded by force.

THE UNITED STATES AND THE FAR EAST.

In addition to those given in last issue, the volume of Papers upon "The Foreign Relations of the United States for 1876" contains some valuable despatches referring to general matters in China, Japan, &c. Among those relating to the former country, we find some important letters from Mr. George F. Seward, written in part when he was United States Consul General at Shanghai, and in part when Minister at Peking. They refer to the opening of coal mines in China; the introduction into China of the American Trade dollar, the ratification of the Peruvian treaty, and other subjects of interest, including one despatch of special importance dated in Chefoo Sept. 5, 1876, in which he takes exception to Sir Thos. Wade's action in the settlement of the Lekin duties question. Mr. Seward, it seems, doubted the advisability of any special negotiations being entered into on the subject; and it seems that, contrary to the opinion of the Supreme Court at Shanghai that no local-tax could be levied upon opium which had paid import duty until it had passed the limits of the Foreign settlements, considers that additional taxes can be placed upon it, so soon as it is in native hands. Sir Thos. Wade, it appears, admitted that Mr. Seward's view was in accordance with the spirit, though not the letter, of the Treaty, and added that he was prepared to act in accordance with the former.

The Japan correspondence is almost equally interesting. The first despatch is from Mr. Hamilton Fish to Mr. Bingham, and treats in an exhaustive manner the question of the right of the Municipal Council of Nagasaki to maintain actions in the United States Consular Court. The view adopted goes so far as to lay down that a Citizen of the United States is liable to be so sued, but Mr. Fish reserves his final opinion on the subject in view of the imperfect information before the Department as to the sources and origin of the powers claimed by the Council. Mr. Bingham wrote on March 23rd a short despatch to his Government on the question of Japanese Copyright Law. It is interesting in itself, but perhaps more so on account of a matter upon which it touches collaterally. Mr. Bingham says the translation of the rules was made by Mr. Thompson, the Interpreter of the Legation, who brings to hi duties a knowledge of the Japanese language, acquired by twelve years' careful study, and he goes on pertinently to remark:—"Why Congress should seek to cut us off from the services of such a man, without which service we are really unable to know what is done here, is beyond my powers of conjecture." The present series of papers also contains a very interesting translation of a report by the Japanese Minister of Education, and refers to the National Bank Laws, the Post-office, and other matters of general interest.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, APRIL 4.

Whilst the Members of the Upper House will meet, after their short Easter recess, to-day, again for the despatch of business, those of the Second Chamber will not re-assemble before the 16th inst. Within some days after that date it may be that the Lower-class Instruction Bill will be brought forward for discussion, though there are rumours in circulation to the effect that this Bill will be altered in some instances by the Premier. I do not believe these on dits, but it may, of course, be that they are in accordance with the truth. The Lords will at once begin to debate the second of the nine Judicial Bills. In general, the opinion about them is most favourable, and I am quite convinced that there is no chance whatsoever that this important measure, which was initiated by Mr. Van Lynden, will be outvoted. Before they left the Royal residence they approved the re-appearance of the Java Monetary Bill, because this would lead to a uniformity in the monetary system between the mother country and the Eastern possessions.

On the 17th inst. will take place the election of the successors of Mr. Baron Van Mackay (who starts to England) and of Mr. De Vries, M.P. for Amsterdam. As candidates for the first named (district Tiel) are announced Messrs. W. H. De Beaufort and H. J. Dyckmeester, whilst those for Mr. De Vries are Messrs. A. Kerdyk and C. Van Heukelom.

The association of beet-root sugar manufacturers has forwarded an address to the Minister of the Financial Department, laying before him several claims against the sugar-convention, from maintaining the excise on sugar. The underwriters ask the Minister to bring forward a Bill to abolish these excise, so that the convention will become acceptable for our trade.

The Staats Courant states that Mr. E. Mahoreich, Dutch Vice-Co sul at Suez, was of his special request dismissed from his functions, and the Consul of Austria in that town succeeded him.

I regret to note the sudden death of the pensioned General Van Winsheim. He died, eighty-four years old, at the Hague.

Preparations on a very large scale are being made here for an international flower-show, which will be opened within a few days.

Trade is very dull, and there are no transactions of importance to report.

Naval and Military.

It is announced that instead of coming home in the troopship Tamar, the head-quarters and batteries of the 2nd Brigade Royal Artillery are to return from Ceylon and Hong Kong in hired transports. The appointment of Rear-Admiral John Corbett, C.B., to be commander-in-chief on the East Indian station, vice Reginald J. Macdonald, promoted, is gazetted.

The Times reports that the troopship Orontes, Capt. E. H. Seymour, arrived at Natal on the 28th of February, from Singapore and Mauritius. Immediately on the arrival of the ship the captain put himself in quarantine, and it was ascertained that there were no fewer than 37 cases of measles on board. The Orontes left Singapore on the 29th of January, with the following as passengers for Mauritius and England: Col. G. S. Tilly, R.E., commanding troops on board; Lieut.-Col. Lynch, 1st Battalion 10th Regiment; Lieut.-Col. Amiel, 80th Regiment; one officer of the Royal Artillery; five captains, nine subalterns, two Staff officers, 36 sergeants, 15 drummers, 510 rank and file of the 1st Battalion 10th Regiment; three officers' wives and four children, eight men's wives and nine children, of the 10th Regiment; two captains, five subaltern officers, 20 sergeants, four drummers, 331 rank and file of the 80th Regiment; two officers' wives and one child, 20 men's wives and 32 children of the 80th Regiment; two officers of the Army Medical Department, and four men of the Army Hospital Corps. She got to Mauritius on the 16th of February, and it was intended that the 80th should disembark there, the 3rd Buffs, for Natal, taking their place on board. None of the men, however, appear to have left the ship and no troops embarked, for the Orontes on her arrival at Natal still had on board the 1st Battalion 10th Regiment and the 80th Regiment. After staying a day and a half at Natal the Orontes proceeded to East London, where she awaited orders from the general commanding the troops.

An estimate of the amount required in the current financial year to defray the cost of the Army Purchase Commission has been issued. It is for a total sum of £500,000, from which, however, there are estimated Exchequer extra receipts to the amount of £2,000 to be deducted. The salaries of the establishment amount to £4,190, an increase of £30 over last year. Compensation for sale of commissions is estimated at £474,380, being £16,620 less than the estimated and supplementary estimate for last year, and compensation to the Royal (late Indian) Artillery and Engineers, £20,000. An item of £2,400 for payments to gentlemen-at-arms on their retiring from the corps appears in the estimate for the first time. The total shows a net decrease for the year of £14,190.

The court-martial on Capt. Stevens, of Her Majesty's ship Barracouta, still continues. There are over fifty counts in the indictment, the principal of which are to the effect that the prisoner "did, from about the 15th of July, 1876, to the end of that year, give a number of orders to Mr. Allen Fitzroy Gain, Paymaster, which were not included in the Paymaster's instructions as set out by the Admiralty, and which orders properly belonged to other officers of the ship, both equal in rank to Mr. Gain and below his rank, the orders being vexatious and harassing, and calculated to impede the Paymaster in the proper performance of his duties, and did, moreover, injure his health, whereby he was at times incapitated from performing them."

Lieutenant-General Francis Rawdon Edward Rowcroft, C.B., of Her Majesty's Indian Army, died a few days since at the age of seventy-four. He entered the Bengal army in 1819, and served in the Indian mutiny campaign of 1857-58. He commanded as brigadier the Sarun and Goruckpore field force, with the naval brigade of Her Majesty's ship Pearl in the various actions in which the force was engaged. He was made a C.B. for his services in the field, and received the Indian mutiny medal. He was promoted to the rank of major-general in January, 1862, and became lieutenant-general in June, 1870.

The intention of appointing Rear-Admiral Houston Stewart, C.B. the present Controller of the Navy, to the post of Superintendent of Portsmouth Dockyard, to enable him to qualify for promotion and then return to the Admiralty, has been abandoned in favour of the more direct course of specially promoting that officer by Order in Council, thus enabling him at once to take his proper place on the Active List of Vice-Admirals. Rear-Admiral the Hon. Fitzgerald Foley will consequently succeed Rear-Admiral Sir Leopold M'Clintock, at Portsmouth, at the end of the present month.

The Queen, on receipt of a memorial from the Admiralty, has directed, by order in Council, that in future half-pay, in addition to the emoluments of office, shall be granted to Her Majesty's naval and marine aides-de-camp; also to lords commissioners of the Admiralty, secretaries to the Admiralty, controllers of the navy, and directors of naval ordnance who may be naval officers; also to naval or marine officers who may be holding appointments connected with the naval service of any of the British colonies, subject to the approval of the Admiralty and Treasury.

The armour-plated ship Triumph has arrived in Plymouth Sound from the Mediterranean, having been in collision with the screw steamer Benjamin Whitworth, belonging to Messrs. Bolckow, Vaughan, and Co., of Middlesbrough. The night was fine, with little wind, and both steamers had seen each other sufficiently long to reduce speed, so that the force of the collision was not great. The Triumph was uninjured, and the Benjamin Whitworth suffered little damage.

The appointment of Lieut.-General Clement Alexander Edwards, C.B., to be colonel of the 2nd Foot, in the room of the late General Spink, is gazetted. Lieut.-General Edwards entered the army in 1829, and served in the first Chinese war, in the Burmese war 1852-53, in the Crimea from Dec. 30, 1854, and in the suppression of the Indian mutiny in 1858-59. He some time since filled the office of Inspector-General of Recruiting.

The determination of the Government to construct, not experimentally but wholesale, several war ships of steel, is a sufficient indication that one of the most obstinate difficulties in shipbuilding has been overcome. The Iris and Mercury, which are now under construction at Pembroke, and are rapidly approaching completion, are the first steel vessels built for the Royal Navy.

Major-General C. P. Beauchamp Walker, C. B., Her Majesty's military attaché at Berlin, has tendered his resignation in that capacity, and it is not known if his place will be filled. General Walker's retirement from his present post is much regretted both in Court and military circles at Berlin, as he is highly popular in both.

The Commander-in-Chief has issued the expected order for the reorganisation of the Royal Artillery. It sets forth that on July 1 next the artillery service will be divided into three brigades of horse artillery, six of field artillery, five of garrison artillery, and one of coast artillery, and then proceeds to give the stations of these brigades, with details as to the commands and internal regulations.

Rear-Admiral Rowley Lambert has been directed by telegram to proceed with the detached squadron from St. Vincent, Cape de Verdes, direct to Devonport, where a late Captain of one of the ships of the squadron will be tried by court-martial.

The Lords of the Admiralty have conferred special promotion to the rank of deputy-inspector-general of hospitals and fleets on Fleet-surgeon Thomas Colan, M.D., for his services with the Arctic Expedition.

The good service pension of £150 a-year for Marine officers, vacant by the death of Colonel G. S. Digby, C.B., R.M.A., has been conferred on Colonel Robert Boyle, C.B., R.M.L.I.

Brevet-Colonel Sir Andrew Clarke, C.B., K.C.M.G., ex-Governor of the Straits Settlements, is gazetted to the rank of colonel in the Royal Engineers, vice Colonel Sir A. H. Freeling, retired upon full-pay.

The die for the Arctic medal is completed, and medals have been struck and will shortly be distributed to those who served in the late expedition.

It is stated that a set of instructions to be observed by our own and foreign naval officers in regard to the interchange of visits has been approved.

A telegram announces that the Gamma and Delta, Chinese gunboats have arrived at Suez all well.

The report of the directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China for the past year states that the net profits were £96,004, out of which a dividend of 4 per cent. was paid for the half-year ended the 30th of June last. A similar payment is proposed now, which will make 8 per cent. for the year. In addition, £36,004 is added to reserve, raising it to £136,718.

The report of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, to be presented to the meeting to be held on April 18, is as follows:—

debts, the net profit for the year ended December 30 last, inclusive of £6,989 7s. 2d. brought forward, amounted to £119,307 0s. 9d., whereof £20,000 was absorbed by the interim dividend declared last October, leaving an available balance of £99,307 0s. 9d. Of this sum the directors propose, in pursuance of the policy already approved by the shareholders, to transfer £65,000 to the reserve, thereby increasing that fund to £110,000. They further recommend that a dividend of 3½ per cent. be declared for the past half-year (free of income-tax), making, with the distribution in October last, a dividend of 6 per cent. for the year. There will then remain a balance of £6,307 0s. 9d. to be carried to profit and loss new account. The directors deemed it expedient, previous to closing the account, to write off £10,000 for depreciation of the Bank's premises abroad. They have also thought it desirable to set aside £5,000 for the creation of an officer's superannuation fund. Mr. James Whittall, lately a partner of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., of China, has consented to join the Board, and the shareholders will be asked to confirm his election as soon as the deed of settlement permits. The directors retiring by rotation, Mr. Frederick William Heilgers and Mr. William Christian present themselves for re-election. Mr. Owen Lewis and Mr. William Vanner, having completed their term of office as auditors, again tender their services.

On the 3rd inst. 204 Bonds of the Japan Seven per Cent. Loan, amounting to £55,000, were drawn for payment at par on the 2nd July at the offices of the Oriental Bank Corporation. The numbers of the Bonds drawn are given in our advertising columns.

It is notified that Mr. James Greig, late chief manager of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, has become a partner in the firm of Blockey and Co., of Old Broad-street. The future style of the firm will be A. Blockey, Greig, and Co.

The traffic receipts of the Eastern Extension Australasian and China Telegraph Company (Limited) for the month of March, 1877, amounted to £22,886, and to £21,756 for the corresponding period of 1876. The Eastern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of March, 1877, amounted to £35,491, and to £37,939 in the corresponding period of 1876.

Consequent upon the interruption during the Easter holidays, scarcely any business has been done since last mail in Teas. Little worth notice has taken place in the Silk market during the past week. It is generally felt to be hopeless to press sales, and quotations must therefore be considered almost nominal. The reports as to the prospects of the European crops are as yet doubtful. According to the Moniteur des Soies, the last accounts from Avignon were to the effect that the French crop of seeds was good, but that those received from Japan via America did not hatch properly, if at all. The general opinion, therefore, leant towards a reduced crop.

India Council drafts to the increased amount of 26½ lacs of rupees (say £265,000) were tendered for at the Bank of England on the 4th inst., and were all allotted at about 1-16d. per rupee above the quotation of last week, notwithstanding a fall in the price of silver in the interval. Calcutta obtained £165,000 and Bombay £100,000, tenders on the former city at 1s. 8 11-16d. for bills receiving in full, and for telegrams at that price about 19 per cent. of applications, while tenders on Bombay for telegrams at 1s. 8¾d. obtained about 20 per cent.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. steamer Bokhara, from Southampton on the 5th inst., was :—In gold, to Galle, £5,105 ; in silver, to Penang, £65,200 ; to Shanghai, £68,975. Total in silver £134,175.

The price of Bar Silver has gradually declined, owing to the increased drawings of the India Council Drafts. Supplies have been sold at 53¾d. per oz., but a slightly better price could now be obtained. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 53½d. per oz., and the market may now be considered firm at that quotation.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Résumé says :—The Easter holidays having now closed, a more animated state of things may fairly be looked for. Our home consumption shows improving figures, and now that the chances of a peaceful solution of the Russo-Turkish embroglio are comparatively assured, our Continental trade should be advantageously affected; importers, however, must not expect prices generally to show much improvement in the face of the immense import, which is greatly in excess of our requirements. Quotations :—Congou : Black and Red Siftings and Leafy Tea, 6¼d. to 7½d. Black Leafs: Low to Good Common, 7½d. to 8½d.; Fair to Good Medium, 9d. to 1s. 4d.; fine and finest 1s. 5d. to 2s. Red Leafs : Low to Good Common, 7½d. to 8½d.; Fair to Good, 9d. to 1s. 2d.; fine and finest, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. Paklings : Common kinds, 10d. to 1s.; fine and finest, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d. Amoy : Good Common, 8d. to 9½d.; fair to fine, 10d. to 1s. 4d. Tayshans : Common, 8d.; fair, 8½d. to 1s.; Good to fine, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d. Souchong : Low to Good Common, 8½d. to 10d.; fair to Medium, 11d. to 1s. 4d.; fine and finest, 1s. 6d. to 2s. Oolong : Common to Good, 11d. to 1s. 2d.; fair to fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 8d.; fine and finest, 1s. 9d. to 2s. 2d.; supply excessive; prices downward. Scented Capers : Low, 11½d. to 1s.; Common to Good, 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d.; finest, 1s. 7d. to 1s. 10d., nominal. Scented Orange Pekoe : Low, 11d. to 1s.; Common to Good, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. Greens : Gunpowder, 9d. to 3s. 8d. for finest; Imperial, 7d. to 1s. 8d.; Hyson, 6d. to 3s. 6d. for finest; and Young Hyson, 7d. up to 1s. 10d.

The deliveries in London during March were again unsatisfactory, being 14,641,430 lb., against 15,762,641 lbs. in 1876, or fully 1,000,000 lbs. less; the imports were 10,976,807 lbs., against 6,937,965 lbs.; the reduction of stock is therefore much less than in the previous year, and the relative surplus is augmented to 7,668,000 lbs.

At the Tea sales on Friday but little alteration was established in the market; and prices remained much as before. There was a shade firmer feeling for Black-leaf, but slightly easier rates for Red. Greens were without alteration. The latest general reports on the prospects of the Tea markets are for the most part that there is a "better feeling," but the fact remains that prices are unaltered. The larger part of the cargoes per sailing ship Endymion and steamer Glenroy are to be offered at auction shortly without reserve, as they belong to the firm which has adopted this mode of effecting sales.

SILK.

Messrs. John Kershaw, Kilburn and Co.'s Circular says :—The continued offer of parcels of Silk from the Lyons market under the prices which were currently quoted here has been the principal cause of the want of general business, as buyers feel no confidence in purchasing so long as there is the probability of more Silk being forced to sale here by Continental houses, at whatever price they can obtain, and until this ceases our market will show the same irregularity with regard to quotations as at present exists. The importations, especially of China Silks, have been swollen by arrivals from France, and the deliveries have been on a small scale, so that the stocks show an increase in total, instead of a reduction, as they should do at this period of the year; it must not, however, be forgotten that the stocks in Lyons have been sensibly diminished by their sales in this market. Since the turn of the month there has been a little more general inquiry, but offers which are made are too low to tempt importers to quit their stocks until they see prices established on some sort of foundation, and especially as stocks in the hands of manufacturers are generally admitted to be small.

Messrs. O'Donoghue and Co.'s New York Circular of March 21 says :—We have again to report a month of extreme quiet in the Raw Silk market, accompanied with a marked decline in values. Manufacturers have taken very sparingly and, with few exceptions, barely enough to cover a week's supply. Latest telegraphic advices from the European and China markets show an improved tone and an advance on the better grades of from 5 to 10 per cent.; this, however, seems to have had no effect whatever here, either in increasing the demand or checking the downward tendency of values. The bulk of the stock on the market at present writing consists of the medium and inferior grades of both Shanghai and Canton Re-reels, for which there seems to be no fixed value. Holders of the better grades are still rather firm, though there has been an evident weakening during the month even on these classes of silk. Manufacturers complain very much of the difficulty in obtaining compensating rates for fabrics, and unless some improvement speedily takes place in that direction, we may look for slightly lower prices still. We estimate the stocks of all descriptions of Raw Silk now on the market to be as follows :—Canton Re-reels 775, Tsatlee 390, Haineen 360, Usual Reel Tsatlee and Taysaam 55, Japans and European 70. Total equal to bales 1,650. Against corresponding date last year 3,300.

HEMP.—About 2,000 bales Manila have been sold privately, brown at £25 to £25 10., fair to superior roping at £26 to £29.

HIDES.—Messrs. Dyster, Nalder, and Co.' Monthly Circular says :—Singapore, Penang, Rangoon, &c., Ox and Cow Hides.—The few sold at public sale are without quotable change in value. PEPPER.—Black remains quiet; 350 bags Singapore have been sold at 3¾d. cash to 3⅞d. full prompt, and 200 bags Penang at 3 9-16d. to 3⅝d. White: About 100 bags Singapore have been sold at 6⅜d. to 6½d.

RICE.—There is an absence of demand, and the market is without improvement. The floating cargo per Liguri, 1,032 tons Rangoon, off coast, has been sold at 9s. 1½d. ex ship London.

SUGAR.—The market has re-opened after the Easter recess with a decidedly quiet tone. At auction 10,745 bags Manila were all bought in, chiefly unclayed Zebu and Ilo Ilo at 19s. 6d.; sun-dried Zebu at 21s.; 2,897 bags ordinary brown China were also bought in at 18s. 6d. to 19s. MANCHESTER GOODS.

The market has re-opened after the holidays with an improved feeling, stimulated by large sales of cotton in Liverpool, and by a more hopeful view of political matters. Quotations for both Goods and Yarns have, however, been raised beyond what buyers are disposed to pay, and the business done has consequently been very restricted. Extensive orders for Yarns for China and Japan have however been placed.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

A DEPUTATION of shipowners and gunpowder manufacturers has waited upon the President of the Board of Trade, to protest against the recent regulation prohibiting the shipment of gunpowder in vessels carrying coals. Having heard their views, Sir Charles Adderley promised to give the subject his careful consideration.

A STRIKE has commenced among the iron ship-builders at Stockton-on-Tees in consequence of the refusal of the masters to grant a demand for an advance of wages.

THREE thousand of the Clyde shipwrights have struck for an increase of a penny per hour in their wages. The masters have, notwithstanding, passed a resolution to continue to resist the demand of the men, who have also held a meeting, at which they reiterated their determination to fight out the question.

DURING the month of March 150 ships passed through the Suez Canal The receipts of the company amounted to f.3,090,000.

THE FOLLOWING
EXTRACT FROM A LETTER
dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningsham, near Warminster, Wilts:—

"I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am 78 years old.

"Remaining, Gentlemen, yours very respectfully, "L. S."

To the Proprietors of
NORTON'S CAMOMILE PILLS, London.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,
In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

Summary of News from the Far East.

An Imperial decree which has appeared in the Peking Gazette of Feb. 1 has attracted a great deal of attention. The Chinese Government in this manifesto has voluntarily stepped forward and urged upon the provincial officials the necessity of extending religious toleration to the converts to Christianity. It is thought that the decree results from some representations which were made by Li-Hung-Chang upon the subject. The Daily Press considers that the Government has had so much trouble in connection with the complications brought about by the persecution of the native Christians that the decree has probably been issued for the purpose of removing all cause for them in the future. It adds that, at all events, it is satisfactory to find that the Christians are thus accorded, by Imperial decree, equality with the other subjects of the Emperor, the more so as it would appear to have been conceded without any pressure from without having been brought to bear upon the Government at Peking. The China papers are beginning to discuss the delay in the ratification of the Chefoo Convention—a contingency which appears somewhat strangely to have been overlooked by them hitherto. It is hoped that the delay results from Lord Derby having penetrated the weak parts of Sir Thomas Wade's "triumph of diplomacy," and that we may yet see the recognition recorded to the likin tax expunged from the agreement; and it is also suggested that the delay is in consequence of the Government wishing to see before hand whether the Chinese are likely to keep faith and to carry out the stipula-ions honestly and fairly. The number of refugees from the famine does not diminish. As many as 100,000 had come to Tientsin. Ting Footai has shown considerable anxiety to have the telegraph completed between Amoy and Formosa—no doubt in consequence of his recognising its advantages in time of war. A report had, it is said, gained some currency that Spain intended to make a descent upon Formosa. An extraordinary rumour had been spread at Hankow to the effect that pressure would be brought by the Mandarins upon the teamen to force them to send their produce by the Chinese Merchants Co.'s steamers to Shanghai for sale there. Mr. Lister, the Postmaster-General at Hong Kong, has issued a notification, which is probably by no means superfluous, calling attention to the habitual neglect by the Chinese of the Stamp ordinances. A daring attack has been made by a band of armed robbers.

From Japan our latest news comes via America. The Imperial troops acting against the rebels numbered as many as 15,000.

The Governor General of the Netherlands and suite had arrived at Singapore from Batavia. The Singapore Legislative Council have passed the Loan Bill and are to discuss the Chinese emigrants question. The transport Himalaya had arrived. Small-pox was prevalent among the Chinese. The subject of the interference of H.H. the Maharajah of Johore with planters has again engaged the attention of the Singapore Chamber of Commerce. By telegram of 15th inst. we learn of a fire at the Tanjong Pagar Dock premises, destroying some 35,000 tons of coal.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The North China Daily News Correspondent under date of 8th Feb. writes :—

Some stir has been occasioned here by the publication of an Imperial decree in the Gazette of the 1st Feb., in which injunctions in favour of religious toleration, with special reference to Christian proselytism, are laid upon the Provincial Governments throughout the Empire. This spontaneous manifesto, the first of the kind ever issued, is said to have been evoked by a representation from the Governor-General Li Hung-chang, who, descanting upon the consequences of the Margary affair, has urged the importance of averting similar dangers arising from prejudiced treatment of converts to Christianity. The most abundant fall of snow ever known by Foreign residents in Peking lasting over a period of nearly three days, has greatly rejoiced, the minds of the native population, by the promise which it gives of a good Spring harvest.

The Peking Gazette of the 25th January, contains a memorial from Tso Tsung-tang, describing the capture of Manas. The town seems only to have fallen after a brave and prolonged defence, which should have ensured better terms for the garrison. As it is, the conclusion of the memorial is a tale of bad faith, butchery, and horror which, the Herald observes, should exclude China from the list of ever semi-civilised nations. It will be noted that the General commanding surrendered evidently with the expectation of clemency. Instead, he and other leaders were put to death with the "extreme of torture;" what that is a paragraph in last week's issue of that paper explains.

TIENTSIN.

The Daily News Correspondent writes, under date Feb. 13 :—

On the night of the 10-11th we had another good fall of snow. Altogether this has been rather a remarkable winter. Since the winter of 1867, when snow fell on the 24th December, which covered the ground to the depth of about six inches, the ground has scarcely been white until this present season. The people are congratulating themselves on the prospect of being able to "eat white flour" next summer. There have been a few cold nights, when the mercury stood below 0—the lowest 4 deg. or 5 deg.—but the average temperature has been somewhat above the generality of former years. The river has been open for a week, and quite free from ice, only closing over again two nights ago.

The number of refugees does not appear to diminish. A Chinaman estimates that 100,000 have come to Tientsin seeking relief. This number is probably very much too large, but some idea may be formed of the great influx when it is known that ten soup-kitchens and two cake shops are in active operation for the relief of the needy. The mortality is said to reach 130 to 140 on some days. The poor have all received an addition allowance of a little grain and a small piece of meat, I hear, for the New Year.

Many Shantung people have come to Tientsin. The distress in that province seems to be greater than in Chihli. A gentleman recently returned from the district of Lao Ling Hsien, where the greater part of the foreign relief fund has been expended, speaks of some heart-rending cases of suffering that came to his knowledge. Now that chaff has become scarce, or too expensive, the people are sawing up the smaller branches of the willow and mixing the sawdust with the meal or millet. Many villages are half deserted, and small companies are ranging the country in all directions begging food. They seem to be quiet, disturbing no one. It is amazing that with so much destitution there is so little rioting and so few robberies. The poor people seem to feel that the extra exertion induces extra hunger, which demands extra food, which plunder is by no means sure to furnish.

The air is full of surmises regarding the causes and results of the late transaction of the S.S.N. Company. I think a very general feeling prevails that the course pursued by the Chinese Government, relating to trade and foreign intercourse, has not been for the true interests of the country; and that this action was necessitated on the one hand, and brought about on the other hand, by causes which are deleterious to the best progress and development of the nation.

The wind to-day is high and cold. The famine has affected the festivities of this New Year's-day. There has been less noise and less powder burnt last night and to-day than usual—not a particularly unpleasant feature.

HANKOW.

The Daily News correspondent writes :—

It is reported that the Kestrel had some difficulty in her trip to Ichang, and only reached Shasi (290 miles from Hankow) after thirteen days' steaming. News has not yet been received of her arrival at her destination.

Native settling day passed of very fairly well. No failures of importance are announced; though dealers in Piece Goods are said to have had a bad year. There are no end of rumours anent next tea season, all equally reliable, no doubt. One is, that no teas are to be allowed to be sold here, the authorities bringing pressure to bear on the teamen to force them to send all teas to Shanghai by the Chinese Merchants' steamers, for sale there. Another is, that the Ningchow and Tzo teas are to be brought here overland instead of being taken to Kiukiang as formerly, the cost being less, and teamen fearing freights from Kiukiang to Hankow will be raised next season. We have had the heaviest fall of snow this month ever known by the "oldest inhabitant" here; very little ice, however, not enough to enable us to get our ice-house filled.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 2nd March; the French mail from London Jan. 12 was received on the 27th Feb.

The lekin duties difficulty is still the leading public question at the above port. The North China Herald prints the correspondence which has passed between the senior Consul and the Chamber of Commerce on the subject; and also between the senior Consul and the Chamber of Commerce, regarding the means to be taken to identify foreign goods about whose origin a possibility of misapprehension could arise. A daring robbery of nine chests of tea has been committed on board the John Potts while lying in the river ready for sea. Two men have been apprehended in connection with it, and the case is being investigated at their respective Consulates.

A meeting of shareholders in the French Gas Company has been held. The accounts show a profit on the year's working of Tls. 7,077, out of which an interim dividend of 5 per cent., absorbing Tls. 1,900, has been already paid; and it is decided to divide a further sum of Tls. 2,280, at the rate of 6 per cent. Tls. 2,171 will be carried to reserve, and the balance to new account. The augmentation of the capital to Tls.50,000 was approved, and the details of the scheme recommended in the report were agreed to, together with the necessary changes in the articles of association. It was announced that Dr. Galle declined to serve as a director; and as no one present at the meeting would consent to accept office, the vacancy was perforce left open to be filled provisionally by the Directors when they could find a willing shareholder. Messrs. Brandt and Vinay were re-elected auditors.

The annual meeting of the shareholders in the Shanghai and Hong Kong Wharf Company was held on the 26th February, at the Shanghai Club; Mr. J. Bell Irving in the chair. The accounts showed, after providing for the interim dividend declared on July 25 last, a credit balance of Tls. 9,403.61, and out of this sum the directors proposed making a second dividend at the same rate, payable on March 1, 1877, leaving Tls. 1,878.61 to be carried forward. The directors had effected a sale of a portion of the Company's superfluous land adjoining the Broadway, the balance of purchase-money for which has since been paid, and applied in reduction of the loan from the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. The rate of discount to contributors had now been reduced to one-half of the percentage previously allowed, while the tariff of storage on Piece Goods was slightly increased; and provided the results from these changes proved equal to the anticipations of the directors, there appear, every prospect of the Company doing well during the ensuing year. After some discussion with reference to the state of the wharf, and as to the amount of the earnings, the report and accounts were carried unanimously. It appeared from the Chairman's statement that, in consequence of the general badness of business the receipts had been less than might otherwise have been expected.

A raid on a gambling house in a passage of the Kiangse-road has been made by the police. Ten gamblers were captured, together with their furnitnre and apparatus.

The Celestial Empire has the following :—

Dr. Zachariae gave a lecture on Cremation at the Club Concordia which was of a most interesting nature, and showed considerable acquaintance with the subject on which he spoke. The Doctor commenced his remarks by a historical review of this mode of sepulture, followed by a description of the chemical processes and results which accompany cremation and interment respectively. He then spoke of the reform which has been recommended by defenders of the interment system—alluding, we believe, to Mr. Seymour Haden's scheme of using a basket-coffin, in order that there may be as little as possible to prevent the speedy absorption of the body by the tissues of the earth—and showed that even this improvement would be insufficient for larger cities.

The Report of the Shanghai General Hospital has been issued. It carries us up to the end of last year, and the accounts appear to be in a most satisfactory condition. The receipts have exceeded the expenditure by Tls. 1,579.65, the surplus having added to the capital. The extra expenses incident to the removal of the Hospital to a larger building, however, have led the trustees to request the two Municipalities again to recommend the grants of Tls. 2,000 and Tls. 1,000 respectively. There is not a very long description of the new Hospital, and this we somewhat regret; for the reason that although we have no cause to believe that it is otherwise than excellent in every respect, there are one or two little points on which the public would doubtless like to be enlightened. We take it for granted, for instance, that the walls are dry, the flooring sound, and so on; but there are other matters on which we are not so well informed. Of course the Sisters are provided with a chapel for their own devotions, and we should like to be assured that a room has been set apart for the purposes of Protestant worship. We hear, indirectly, that some arrangement of the sort has been come to; and we sincerely hope that this may be the case. If it is, we think the trustees should have notified the fact in their Report, if only to counteract another rumour, to the effect that a request for the appropriation of a room for Protestant services had not been granted.

A flower-show has been held in the Chinese city. Native exhibitions of this sort, however, have no interest whatever, excepting for connoisseurs. One rather celebrated flower-show that we visited some years ago in a guild garden in the city was remarkable chiefly for the utter absence of flowers. A few ordinary-looking shrubs were arranged in pots under a covered shed, and the Chinese visitors were apparently very much interested in looking at them; but not a single flower was there to be seen.

The details connected with the sale of the steamers of the S.S.N. Company are being completed, and this matter appears likely to be brought to a conclusion satisfactorily. The North China Daily News states that it is reported that the instalment of Tls. 600,000 on account of the purchase of the S.S.N. Company, which is due under the agreement on the 31st March, came down from Nanking on the 28th February, and was paid over to Messrs. Russell and Co. the next day. This completes the first million, anticipating the due date by a month. Advertisements also notify that the management of the S.S.N. Company's steamers, wharves, and godowns is transferred to the C.M.S.N. Company; and holders of the former company's godown warrants are requested to hand them into the Superintendent of the Kin-lee-yuen godowns, to be exchanged for new warrants issued by the C.M.S.N. Company.

The same paper states that eleven of the steamers formerly owned by the S.S.N. Company were on the 1st March transferred to the Chinese flag, and may, therefore, be supposed to have been handed over to the China Merchants' Company. In the afternoon the funnel of the Shantung was painted with the yellowish band of the Chinese Company, so that it may be inferred she is the second of the S.S.N. Company's steamers that will leave here under native management, the Millet having been the first. A portion of the Kin-le-yuen Wharf has also been handed over to the Chinese.

From the above-named paper we take the following :—

It would seem that the sea-route party have not yet quite got it all their own way with the tribute rice. In the Gazette of the 30th January the Acting Governor of Shantung speaks of having been notified by the Board of Revenue that the quota of grain from Kiangpeh is to be brought up this year as before by the canal, and directing that timely measures be taken for dredging the sections that have become silted up. He gives anything but a promising picture of the condition of the canal, but in the present impoverished state of the finances it must be very difficult to find funds to carry out proper repairs.

The case of the robbery from the barque John Potts was partly investigated on the 26th Feb., at the respective Consulates of two of the accused. The men charged were Robert Gracey, an American, and Julius Frederick Mauer, alias Brown, a German.

The Courier states that there is a chance of considerable changes being made in the Arsenal at Kaouchang-meaou within the next six months, and that many foreigners will be dismissed. The authorities have no funds to carry on the works under present conditions.

A loan of Tls. 5,000,000 has been negotiated with a well-known native banker through foreign agency; and Tls. 100,000 have been paid as bargain-money. Tls. 3,000,000 of the entire sum are to be forwarded to Kansuh for the prosecution of the war, while the remaining Tls. 2,000,000 are required for the bankrupt province of Fohkien.

Wu Tao-t'ai, who is a well-known money-lender to the authorities, returned from Hangchow on the 25th Feb. per Kiangse. As soon as the proper ceremonial visits have been exchanged he will proceed to complete the scheme for the loan of five million taels.

A beautiful incident occurred the other day at the Mixed Court. The ancient Ch'ên seems to have been much interested in the recent assumption, by the Queen, of the Imperial title; and the other day he said to Mr. Spence, the British Assessor—"I am very glad that your Queen has been made Empress of India,"—in a congratulatory sort of way, and then added, insinuatingly—"I see she has signalised her promotion by pardoning some thousands of prisoners; I should like to evince my sympathy by releasing some of mine!" Mr. Spence, however, declined the honour with much firmness, probably to the chagrin of his venerable colleague, who had attempted to combine politeness with policy in such an ingenious way.

FOOCHOW.

We take the following from the Foochow Herald :—

H.M.S. Fly will, we understand, be relieved by the Sheldrake, a vessel of greater draught. Why our naval wiseacres persist in sending gunboats of light draught to deep water stations, and vice versa, is rather puzzling!

The Tartar General is, we believe, about to leave for Peking, for the purpose of obtaining an audience at the Imperial Court. During his absence, the new Viceroy, who is expected at the close of the current month, will officiate temporarily as Manchu commander-in-chief.

Ting Futai is said to be very anxious to complete the proposed telegraph line between Amoy and Formosa, and we understand that Mr. Tong King Sing has been commissioned, in conjunction with Mr. Tuck Suey, to give effect to the Governor's scheme.

Rice is, we understand, getting very dear in this province, owing to the increased demand in the north and the failure of the local autumnal crops. Well-informed natives are of opinion that during the ensuing three months prices will be higher than for years past.

It is understood that the Provincial Government shortly intend sending a number of cadets to Europe for instruction in the English and French naval schools. These youths are at present undergoing a preparatory course at the Mamoi Arsenal in the English and French languages and the rudiments of navigation.

A gradual deepening of the river abreast of Mamoi has been noticed since the great freshets last June. It is now, we understand, a matter of less difficulty to bring large vessels alongside the Arsenal Bund. Nature, therefore, seems to have done something for that useless establishment, while mandarindom has been satisfied with a trumpery dredging machine and a few dollars' worth of bamboo stakes.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 8th March; no later mail from London had arrived out.

Since the departure of last mail there has not been anything of special public importance to note, and people both in official and mercantile positions were only beginning to settle down again to business after the holidays connected with the races, &c. Considerable sensation has been created in the Colony by an armed attack, which for its boldness carries the mind back to the old insecure times, on the complete departure of which (unfortunately apparently not permanently) Sir Arthur Kennedy was so much congratulated at the dinner given to him prior to his departure. The object of the attack, which took place on the morning of the 7th March, was Capt. Sand's Patent Slip. According to the Daily Press it appears the band descended from the hills above, and in order to ascertain whether the watchmen were asleep or not threw stones on to the premises. The Indian watchman observed this, but saw no one, and stole round the dock to inspect the premises. He soon espied a number of men in the slip under the bottom of the British bark William Turner, busy stripping off new copper which had been temporarily nailed in its place, and which could be got off with facility. Of this fact the thieves must have been aware. He hold of one by the queue, and was cut by him with a knife on the wrist. Another of the gang came to the rescue of the one arrested, and whilst he was in a death struggle with him the second man plunged a dagger into the watchman. The dagger would have gone to his heart, but the point came in contact with the lower rib. An apprentice on board the William Turner, hearing the noise and alarm of murder, seized a loaded rifle, and seeing a number of men rushing up the hills, fired at them. He must, it is supposed, have struck one of them, as all the way from the spot there were traces of blood along the Pokfullum-road. The police have been making investigations with the hope of discovering the thieves, but when the mail left no traces of them had been found.

An inquest was held at the Royal Naval Hospital before the Coroner, Mr. James Russell, and a jury comprising Messrs. J. F. Horgan, W. Vinton, and W. Legge, on the body of Carl Boer, armourer at the Royal Naval Dockyard, who cut his throat. Charles John Fennell, surgeon on the Victor Emanuel, said the deceased, Carl Boer, was aged forty-two; he knew him to be very eccentric; he had been under his care more than once for headache, but not lately. Early in the morning, he was called and went to the dockyard, where he found the deceased in the latrine with his throat cut very deep; it was a deep incised wound on the left side of the neck. This was the cause of death.

Dockyard Sergeant Joseph Baines said he went on duty at midnight on Monday night and he was then told the deceased was very strange in his manner. He went round to his room at about one o'clock and found he was sleeping. There were about twenty men sleeping in the same room. The deceased got up and witness asked him what was the matter. He made no answer, but went out. Witness went round the beats and on getting to No. 5 beat he heard a gurgling. On making a search he found the deceased lying down with his throat cut and a razor in his hand. He was not dead. Witness took the razor from him, ran for assistance, and sent for the doctor. When the doctor came on shore the deceased was dead. Witness understood that the deceased had received a letter from home stating that his wife was dead. He had always been an eccentric kind of man. When spoken to sometimes he would not answer; this witness attributed to his ignorance.

William Faulks, a sergeant in the Dockyard police, said the deceased was a native of Germany. Witness was his most confidential friend. About two weeks ago the deceased told him his wife had been sick for five months, and asked his opinion as to whether it were likely he could get home in the Himalaya. Witness told him he thought he could claim it. On Sunday last deceased told him he had got a letter from his son to say his wife was dead. He did not say how he got the news. The next time witness saw him was on Monday as he was passing into the Arsenal. At that time he looked bad, and witness asked him what was the matter. Deceased said nothing, but his mind troubled him. At noon witness saw him in bed. The next time he saw him was last night, with his throat cut. The deceased had trouble on his mind about money. He had been paid some over his wages, and the Admiralty had stopped it, he said, all at once, and this worked on his mind in conjunction with his wife's death. He had very eccentric ways about him, and when he drank a little would abuse everybody, but when out of drink was very quiet.

The jury returned a verdict that the deceased committed suicide whilst labouring under temporary insanity.

Messrs. Lane, Crawford, and Co. sold by auction a number of horses and ponies, including several racers. The Babe, Australian gelding, was knocked down for $300; Tartar, Australian gelding, for $270; Santa Claus, China pony, for $110; Hastings, Australian gelding, for $200; and Driver, Australian horse, for $25.

It is reported from Korea that the King's palace at Shaul (the capital) was destroyed by fire on the night of the 11th of December last. The young King is said to have had a narrow escape with his life.

An open sailing-boat race has come off. Four boats only put in an appearance, namely, Messrs. Blackhead and Co.'s, Coeran's, Namoa's, and the Dockyard boat. The boats got back to the starting point as follows, Blackhead and Co.'s having in the meantime increased the advantage she gained between the first and second stake-boats :—

	H. M. S.
Blackhead and Co.'s	4 15 38
Dockyard's	4 24 15
Coeran's	4 31 15
Namoa's	4 51 25

There was a slight but steady breeze the greater part of the time; towards the end of the race, however, it fell rather calm.

About nine o'clock on the night of the 5th March a fire broke out in a small hut on the hill side at the back of the Gas Works at West Point. A vigorous alarm was rung out at the Central Station and the Fire Brigade Station, also at the Hong Kong Insurance Station, but by half-past nine the fire had spread to four or five other huts adjoining, and with the straw and stubble around made quite an extensive blaze. The police and the fire engine from No. 7 Police Station were soon on the spot, and all the fire brigades from the Central Station hastened west. The Government steam engines and the Insurance engines got as far as the Sailors' Home, and were there informed that the fire had been put out, the West Point Fire Brigade having got it under. Six of the huts were burned down. The fire originated in the burning of grass in the vicinity of the huts.

Kennedy-road is being widened so as to admit of two chairs to travel abreast, and at the same time to allow of one coming from the opposite direction to pass by without inconvenience. It is understood that the improvement will only be carried for a short distance of about 600 yards this year, and that it is intended to deal similarly with a short section every succeeding year until the road is one uniform width throughout, in order to better accommodate the pedestrian traffic, which has considerably increased since last year.

The steamship Macgregor reports that she passed the steamship Ulysses at 7 P.M. on the 26th Feb., about three miles east of Singapore. The Ulysses was towed by two tugs. She had been on shore on the south reef at Horsborg Island, and had got off again. The captain of the Macgregor is not aware what damage she had sustained, but to all appearance it was not very serious. When he passed her she was in a fair way of getting into port safely. This intelligence is confirmatory of that furnished by the telegrams previously received.

On the Spanish difficulty the Daily Press has the following :—

Nothing more has been heard of the rupture between Spain and China, and as no news is generally regarded as satisfactory, it may safely be concluded that the Spanish Minister has resumed negotiations, and that they are proceeding amicably. But, according to our Foochow contemporary, the provincial authorities in Fohkien were at one time apprehensive of a Spanish descent upon Formosa. The Futai, Ting Jih-chang, acting under this idea, ordered the greater portion of the arsenal fleet, including the corvette Yang-woo, and the new gunboats Alpha and Beta, to Takao, to repel any attempt at invasion. From this it is evident that the Fohkien Government intended to vigorously contest any attack upon Formosa by the Spaniards. Whether their anticipations with regard to the Spanish Government having designs upon Formosa were well founded is another matter. There is nothing very wild or improbable in the supposition. Formosa is not far distant from the Philippines, and is far more unprotected and exposed to attack than either Canton, Amoy, or Shanghai. The possession of Formosa would, moreover, enable the Spaniards to dictate their own terms, and the island could be held until these had been carried out.

The U.S. flagship Tennessee, which arrived from Singapore, Labuan, and Manila, reports having experienced very severe N.E. gales between Singapore and Labuan. The Tennessee left Singapore on the 14th Feb., which was one day before the steamship Ulysses left for Hong Kong. The heavy gales caused the Tennessee to make no headway, and in consequence she ran short of coals, compelling her to put into Labuan.

The following Post-office notification is published in the Gazette:—Inquiries having been made at this office as to the speediest means of communication with Netherlands India, the following information has been obtained :—The Netherlands India packets leave Singapore fortnightly, and are fitted to the arrival of the outward P. and O. mail from Europe. The French packets for Batavia wait at Singapore for the packet from China, and run fortnightly. It follows that, to forward correspondence to Batavia with the least delay, the following are the best opportunities :—In the S.W. monsoon: the English mail, and the French mail. In the N.E. monsoon: a private steamer a few days before the English mail, and the French mail.

A circular has been issued by Mr. Lister, Collector of Stamp Revenue, in which he calls attention to the habitual neglect by the Chinese of the requirements of the Stamp Ordinances. He says that the "number of documents presented by Chinese for stamping bears no proportion to the extensive business done by them, and it is evident that this systematic evasion of the law tends to throw a heavier burden of taxation on the rest of the community." The addressees are asked to impress upon their compradores that though his Excellency the Governor "is averse to offering rewards to informers, yet, if the Chinese persist in disregarding the law, this policy will be adopted, and the amount of the rewards offered will be increased until the desired end has been attained." A notice in Chinese has been posted about the town on the subject, to which it is desired every publicity should be given.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

MANILA.

The steamer Cadiz, which arrived from Liverpool, &c., on the 28th Feb., brought the new Governor of the Philippine Islands, his Excellency Domingo Moriones y Murello, Marques de Oroquita. His Excellency assumed office on the morning following the arrival of the steamer, at ½-past ten. The ex-Governor, Joze Malcampo, will proceed home by the Cadiz, which vessel leaves for the return voyage on the 10th March.

A very severe shock of earthquake was experienced at Manila and several other places in the island on the evening of the 26th Feb. At Manila it was felt at 8.27 P.M.; at Corregidor at 8.15, a very heavy shock forty seconds in duration; at Bacolon at 8.25, at Jarlve at 8, at Dagupan at 8.30, and at San Fernauth de la Union at 8.25, where it was also very heavy, and continued for sixty seconds.

SAIGON.

We regret to notice that the Saigon Independent has found it necessary to suspend for a time its publication. It is announced that this step is taken in consequence of a falling off in subscribers; but an attempt will be made to start the paper again at a reduced rate. A notification has been issued in the Courier de Saigon, forbidding keeping dangerous animals, such as tigers, panthers, bears, &c., in cages. Special regulations are, however, made for their being kept provisionally for export.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 15th March; the French mail from London Feb. 9 was received on the 12th March. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The Legislative Council met on the 9th and 13th of March, when various local measures, among them the Chinese Immigrants Bill and Straits Settlements Loan Bill, were brought forward, the latter passing its third reading. A petition was also presented from the advocates and attorneys on the subject of judicial establishments.

The N.I.S.N. Company's steamer Bromo, Captain de Jong, from Batavia, has arrived with his Excellency the Governor-General of Netherlands India and suite on board, en route to Atchin. On the Bromo being signalled, a gun was fired from Fort Canning, and at nine o'clock she was boarded by the Hon. J. Douglas, Colonial Secretary, and Captain Paton, A.D.C. to his Excellency the Governor, to welcome his Excellency on behalf of the Government, and also by the Hon. W. H. Read, H.N.M.'s Consul General. His Excellency afterwards landed officially at Johnston's Pier, when a salute was fired from Fort Canning. The salute was returned by H.N.M.'s steamer Prins Hendrik der Nederlanden, which dressed ship, as did also H.N.M.'s steamers Sambas, Bromo and Amboina.

Aide-de-Camp Extraordinary, Pangeran of Soerakarta.

Referendary Sol., secretary.

A detachment of troops, with a captain, two lieutenants, and fifty men and band.

The Governor-General and some of his party stayed at Government House.

A state dinner was given by his Excellency the Governor, at Government House, in honour of the vist of his Excellency the Governor-General of Netherlands India. Covers were laid for forty persons. The guests included the suite of the Governor-General, the heads of departments and the unofficial members of Council. His Excellency the Governor-General accompanied by his suite embarked on board the N.I.S.N. Co.'s steamer Bromo, for Atchin, at eight o'clock, and the steamer started immediately, escorted by the Dutch Squadron. It is his Excellency's intention, it is said, to visit all the Dutch possessions on the Sumatra coast before returning to Batavia.

Oriental Bank	$195,035
Chartered Bank	569,150
Mercantile Bank	550,400
Mercantile in Penang	361,490
Chartered ditto	162,050

The conditions of sale and other particulars are given of Crown Lands in Singapore, for which applications have been made for the cultivation of gambier and pepper, fruit, sago, and vegetables, and which will be sold by public auction at the Land Office. The lands are situated in Bukit Timah, Upper Kallang, Payah Lebar, Buddoh, Upper Tanglin, Mundai, North Seletar, Amokiah, and Sirangoon districts.

H.M.'s steamer transport Himalaya, Captain White, has arrived from Hong Kong. She has on board for England, Naval passengers, 29 officers, 193 men and 40 Marines—Military passengers, 2 officers, 9 women, 12 men and 16 children. The troops she takes from Singapore consist of the 80th and the battery of artillery.

We understand that small-pox has been prevalent among Chinese coolies lately to such an extent that some apprehension is felt that it may become epidemic. Two patients suffering from the disease were yesterday removed to the hospital from a house where twenty other coolies are domiciled.

We are informed that the accident to the Ocean Steam-Ship Company's steamer Stentor consisted of the splitting of her low-pressure piston as she was leaving Penang. The damaged piston is to be sent down here for repair, the steamer remaining at Penang, and it is expected that the detention will not exceed a fortnight. The repairs to the sister steamer Ulysses is being proceeded with at the Tanjong Pagar Dock, and the steamer will, in all probability, be ready to proceed on her voyage to China by the end of this month.

There is a report current that there is some probability of the civil service of this Colony being recruited from Hong Kong. It is said that N. B. Dennys, Esq., Ph. D., who was for a long time editor and part proprietor of the China Mail, and who is now Secretary of the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce, has applied for an appointment in the Straits, and that the application is favourably entertained. Dr. Dennys is, we believe, an accomplished Chinese scholar, and has long made the Chinese language and customs his special study. He is the author of several works as the result of his labours in that direction, the last being a book on the Folk Lore of China, which has been very favourably reviewed by the China and Japan papers. In view of the legislation which is at present being enacted here, and of the dearth and great need of Chinese-speaking officials, Dr. Dennys, if he receives an appointment, should be a decided acquisition to the civil service of the Colony.

A committee meeting of the Chamber of Commerce took place on the 28th February, when among other matters the subject of freedom from interference by H.H. the Maharajah of Johore, in the delivery by the planters of Johore produce, again engaged the Chamber's attention, and Mr. Cameron furnished some information which he had collected as to the nature of the general arrangements existing in this trade in Johore; the discussion has been closed by Mr. Gulland's undertaking to obtain authority from the Maharajah to make a specific assurance that his Highness has no wish or intention to interfere in the matter of the point of delivery of Johore produce, beyond that assent to any change from the planter's present arrangements shall be applied for to his Government.

The latest news from Atchin is to the effect that the Dutch troops had completed a march along the coast from Batoe Poetib to Pedir, without meeting with any opposition whatever from the Atchinese. The insurgents, it is reported, have all retired into the interior.

The Acting Chief Justice, the Hon. T. T. Ford, has left in hot haste for Malacca, in the Colonial steamer Pluto. His lordship has had his time mainly, if not wholly, occupied during his stay of two days here with the Arab trader extradition case, and could not, it is said, attend to other pressing business which counsel were anxious to bring before him. It will be remembered that a writ of habeas corpus was granted by the Registrar in the absence of the Judge to bring up an Arab trader named Sech Syed Bin Omar Bin Abdad Al Katore, whose extradition had been applied for by the Dutch Government, and who had been committed to the Civil Prison, by Captain Walshe, the magistrate who inquired into the case, to await the orders of the Government. The prisoner was released, on bail being given for his appearance before the Acting Chief Justice on his return from Penang. His Honour having returned, the case was elaborately argued before him by the Attorney-General on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. Donaldson on behalf of the prisoner. As the arguments were only concluded the day previous, and his Honour had arranged to leave for Malacca at three o'clock, he postponed giving his decision until his return from Malacca. Meantime Sech Syed Bin Dinamir is at liberty upon renewed bail.

H. M.'s gunboat Magpie has returned to port, having been unsuccessful in her search for the pirates who attacked the schooner Kin Hap Hin, or the four missing men of her crew. The Magpie, we understand, will proceed to the north on the arrival the Juno.

Nine Chinamen were arraigned on the 22nd February before Captain Walshe, the senior magistrate of police, charged with wrongful confinement and attempting to kidnap coolies away from the colony; and after a rather lengthy investigation, on the 2nd March, two of them were discharged, and seven committed for trial at the next Assizes. Another Chinaman, subsequently charged, was also committed. It appeared from the evidence elicited during the investigation that several junks arrived here from Hynam in China with a number of Sinkehs, three or four days before the Chinese New Year. These Sinkehs, all of whom are Kow Chews, had been induced to leave their homes in the province of Kong-See by certain representations made by Keh-Tows that they would find remunerative empioymeut in Singapore as carpenters, sawyers, brick-makers, clerks, &c., that they could save $200 to $300 in the course of two or three years, and return to their families and friends in China comparatively rich men. It also appeared that about the time the junks arrived from Hynam there was at Singapore an agent for a Mr. Hindeman, the owner of a tin mine at Siak, in quest of labourers. This agent, Chea Sin Nuh by name, engaged one Leong Pan Sew to procure coolies for him.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

SHANGHAI.—The China New Year hofidays had been brought to a close, and business in imports again resumed. On the 28th Feb. six steamers left for Tientsin, but there still remained a large quantity of Piece Goods to be moved out of dealers' hands before they are again compelled to enter the market, as eager buyers at an advance equivalent to reported costs in Manchester. Indeed, operations since opening marked considerable decline in the currency value of most Plain Cotton Goods, apart from a less favourable rate of sterling exchange, and a drop of about 5 candareens was established at the auction of CPH chops on the 27th Feb., when upwards of 30,000 pieces, principally 8-4 lbs. weights, were forced upon dealers, at the best prices obtainable. Private operations comprised about 50,000 pieces of all Cotton Goods, among which were the following items—15,000 pieces 8-4 lbs. Collies Lion at Tls. 1.74 to 1.73 per piece ; 8,000 pieces Pillar chop Tls. 1.57½ cash, an equal quantity of Medium Cloths Tls. 1.65 to 1.68½ per piece, and some Common Goods between Tls. 1.30 to 1.35 per piece. A few 7lbs. also reported sold from Tls. 1.10 to 1.25 per piece, and some heavy Shirtings at Tls. 1.95 per piece ; of T-Cloths 7,000 pieces good 8 lbs. Mexicans reported sold at Tls. 1.40 to 1.42 per piece ; 7 lbs. ordinary Mexicans finding buyers at Tls. 1.17 to 1.22 per piece according to appreciation of chop. Common 15 × 15 are not asked for. Drills, 6,000 pieces of common 14 lbs. have changed hands from Tls. 1.82 to 1.85 per piece, and 4,000 pieces Jeans from Tls. 1.53 to 1.57 per piece good chops. In Woollens heavy sales have been also forced at auction in face of which it is difficult to elicit any private offers. About 1,000 pieces CPH were sold at a small decline. Spanish Stripes, price without change. Long Ells : Scarlet sold at Tls. 6.60, and Lastings at Tls. 11 to 12 per piece. The business in Metals during the week had been unusually small ; prices however, remained firm. Lead had slightly advanced, and it was difficult to buy below top rates. In Nail Rods and Bars there had been nothing doing.

MANILA.—There had been a fair extent of business in the Piece Goods market, but little, if any, alterations in values had occurred. The Market for Metals and Coal was very quiet.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—Black : Business during the week has been very limited in extent, amounting to—Ningchow, 200 chests, Tls. 18½ ; Hohow, 800 chests 12½. Total, 1,000 chests. The Hohows were all for New York, where they would lay down by sail at about 18½ cents gold. There had been no more arrivals, and the stock was accordingly gradually diminishing ; as fully half of it was in the hands of one teaman, and the others were not pressing sales the market remained firm. Green : A good business had been done during the week, settlements being :—Teenkai, 4,800 ½-chests at Tls. 26¾ to 30½ ; Moyune, 4,200 ½-chests at 27 to 31 ; Fychow, 800 ½-chests at 17½ to 24¾ ; Pingsuey, 1,000 ½-chests at 17½ to 28½ ; Shanghai, 700 ½-chests at 17 to 34½. Total, 11,500 ½-chests. As will be seen, the demand had been chiefly for fair to fine Teenkais and Moyunes, which, the fall in exchange having been stopped, and no more good news having been received from home, the teamen had willingly sold at about former rates. They were still very ready to meet buyers, and as the latter showed no anxiety to operate, the market was likely to be still easier unless a material decline should occur in sterling. There were still a fair quantity of desirable Teas in the stock, which was more than six times as large as last year's at the same time ; the arrivals to date being only 5,000 half-chests below last season's total. The total export of green tea was 3,300,000 lbs. below last season's to date ; but this deficiency would be considerably reduced by the cargoes of the Harkaway and Golden State, which were expected to sail immediately, the former having cleared.

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says :—The auction sales in London have depressed home prices so much that all business here has been entirely suspended this week, with the exception of 152 bales of Re-reels shipped by the American mail yesterday. Natives seem to have made up their minds at last that they must be quit of their stock before reports can be circulated about the new crop, and without naming a price they want an offer given them, their object possibly being to ascertain foreigners' ideas as to whether the bottom of the market has yet been reached. Arrivals have apparently ceased for the season ; fine-size Silks are allowed to be short at home, but with this year's variation in price and experience it is difficult to make an attempt at fathoming the reasons for present quotations by wire in London and Lyons. Shipments by this steamer are almost solely on Chinese account. The unsold stock remains at 15,500 to 16,000 bales.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BANGKOK.—Messrs. Markwald and Co.'s Circular says :—Sugar : This year's crop has been smaller than ever before, the only important transaction was a sale of 10,000 piculs Steam Mill equal to Java No. 13, which were bought for shipment to Europe at Ticals 8½ per picul. The market is scantily supplied, and, with the exception of a few hundred piculs of white superior for shipment to Singapore, transactions were restricted to sales for local consumption ; for native made Sugars we quote to-day :—White, superior, Tls. 11 per picul ; No. 1, Tls. 10½ ; No. 2, Tls. 10 ; No. 3, 9½. Of Brown sorts none in the market. Black Pepper is commencing to arrive in small lots ; sales have been made at Tls. 12 per picul. Sapanwood : 3 to 4 pieces, Tls. 3¼ per picul ; 5 to 6 pieces, Tls. 2¾. per picul. Teakwood : 60c. per cubic foot for Steam Mill sawed. Cow Hides : Picked, Tls. 25 per picul ; unpicked, Tls. 20 per picul. Buffalo Hides : Picked, Tls. 11½ per picul ; unpicked. 10½ per picul. Buffalo Horns : Scarce and in active demand both for China and Europe ; average 4 lbs., Tls. 15½ per picul ; do. 3 lbs., Tls. 14½ per picul. Deer Horns, Tls. 14 per picul. Gum Benjamin : Good quality is extremely scarce ; a few piculs sold for local consumption at Tls. 320 per picul. Sticklac : Good bold free of wood is very scarce ; supplies consist almost entirely of inferior quality ; a parcel of this kind changed hands at Tls. 19 per picul. Gamboge : Good clean pipe not obtainable ; a few piculs of good but mostly run and lumpy were sold at Tls. 76 per picul.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell, and Co.'s Circular says :—We have again to report a quiet market in produce. Sugar has given way slightly, but Hemp and Coffee remain much as last quoted. The demand for Tonnage is slightly stronger, and Exchange, owing to a temporary scarcity of bills, has declined a little. Sugar : Immediately on receipt of telegrams advising a decline in the home markets buyers reduced their offers here and the dealers are now willing sellers of all descriptions of dry Sugars at a decline of 25 cents per picul on last quotations. Prices, however, are still too high, and no transactions have been reported during the fortnight. Unclayed : The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight amount to 24,000 piculs, nearly all of which have been delivered under contracts previously entered into. Moderate sales have latterly been made at $3.06¼ per picul (£12 16s. 4d.), but holders are again asking higher prices. Ilo Ilo and Cebu advices extend to the 23rd and 26th ultimo respectively, but in neither market had prices undergone any material change. We quote as follows :—Taal $33.06¼, Cebu, Ilo Ilo $3.25, Cebu Superior $4.25, Ilo Ilo Superior 4.75 per picul. Hemp : The market has again become firmer, and the sales during the fortnight have been at from $5-06¼ to $5-25 per picul (£21 11s. 8d. to £22 5s. 6d.). Quilot has been sold at $6 per picul (£25 19s. 3d.). In course of shipment there are now 18,100 bales going forward to Great Britain, and 5,000 bales to the States. Stocks here, after deducting requirements for vessels in port, we estimate at 12,642 bales, whilst in Cebu shippers are still short to complete the requirements of vessels in port. Coffee : Prices have been maintained at $19.50 to $19.56¼ per picul (£75 2s.9d. to £75 7s. 4d.), but the demand is partial. Tobacco : No indication of an auction has as yet been made. Cigars : An auction was held on the 6th March at which 330 mil. No. 2 Cigars, Arroceros, 12 lbs., sold at $512.50 to 12.91 per mil.; 510 mil. No. 2 Cigars, Fortin, 12 lbs., at $12.50 ; 530 mil. No. 2 Cigars, Princesa, 12 lbs., at $12.50 ; 1,706 mil. No. 2 Cheroots, Princeso, 12 lbs., at $12.50 to $13.15 ; 50 mil. No. 2 Cheroots, Cavite, 12 lbs., at $12.50.

LAUNCH OF A JAPANESE IRONCLAD.

A Japanese ironclad—the first that has been built for the Government of that country—was launched on the 14th inst. at Messrs. Samuda Bros. yard. A large and fashionable circle of guests, including many members of Parliament and the Japanese and Chinese Legations, was present. The ship, which represents the most advanced type of a vessel combining high speed with thick armour, heavy armaments, moderate size, and great handiness, has been built from the designs and under the supervision of Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P. Her principal dimensions are:—Length between perpendiculars, 220 feet; breadth, 48 feet; depth in hold, 20 feet 4½in.; burden in tons, 2,343 20-94; draught of water, mean 18 feet; height of port from load water-line, 7 feet 6in.; height of upper deck at side, from load water-line, 13 feet; displacement in tons, 3,700 total weight of armour and backing 776 tons. She has a main-deck battery, protected by armour 8in. thick, in which will be placed four of Krupp's long 24 centimetre breech-loading guns. The weight of these guns is 15¼ tons, and their calibre 9¼in. An upper deck battery amidships, in which is placed two of Krupp's long 17 centimetre guns, unprotected by armour, the weight of these guns being 5½ tons, and their calibre 7in. The main deck battery projects beyond the side somewhat, and by that means great training is given to the guns. The sides of the upper deck before and abaft the midship battery are slightly recessed, and the guns on each side are so arranged that they may be fought from three ports, from one of which they can fire right ahead in line of the keel, from another on the broadside, and from the third right astern in line of the keel. The ship is provided with a powerful ram and a running-in bowsprit.

The Foo-So is armoured on what is generally known as the belt-system, the thickness of the armour on the water line amidships being 9in.; and it is maintained at this thickness for the whole of the magazine, engine, and boiler spaces. The engines, which will be twin-screw, are designed to indicate 3,500-horse power; they are compound surface condensing on the well-known trunk principle of Messrs. Penn, the working pressure in the boilers being 60lb. They will be fitted with separate engines for driving the circulating pumps, starting and reversing the main engines, fire service, donkey pumps, &c. The estimated speed of the ship when fully laden is 13 knots. The ship is to be barque rigged, and will have a total area of plain sail of 12,000 square feet, the total spread of all sail being 17,000 square feet. The ship will be fitted with every appliance, such as steam capstans, on Harfield and Co.'s patent, Inglefield and Roger's anchors, &c., in the most complete form usual in the British navy. In this ship Mr. Reed has introduced an entirely new system of framing, by which means the advantages of his original bracket system of a combination of transverse and longitudinal frames, as first fitted in the Bellerophon, are secured, and some additional ones gained. This is done by making the frames behind armour and those below them continuous from the main-deck to the keel, and instead of the usual shelf or recess to receive the armour, a strong longitudinal girder, well supported by brackets, is worked on the outside of the frames, at the proper height, projecting beyond them. The armour and backing is placed above this girder, the whole being securely bolted to the plating behind armour, which, in its turn, is riveted to the main continuous frames of the ship.

The company assembled on the bow staging included the Japanese Envoy, Wooyeno Kagenori, and his lady; Prince Hachisuka, the Japanese Consul; T. Minami, the Japanese Secretary of Legation; Suguko-Kinso, with the English Secretary, Mr. Lane, and Nakano, Japanese charge d'affaires in Paris; the Chinese Envoy, Kuo Ta-Jen; the Assistant Chinese Minister, Liu-Ta-Jen; the Chinese Secretary of Legation, and Dr. Macartney; Sir George Campbell, M.P.; General and Mrs. Malcolm, the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P.; Mr. C. T. Ritchie, M.P.; Colonel W. Muir, M.P.; Mr. C. M. Norwood, M.P.; Mr. H. Edwards, M.P.; Mr. G. Goldney, M.P.; Mr. G. W. P. Bentinck, M.P.; Mr. J. Holms, M.P.; Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P.; the Hon. C. Hanbury Tracy, M.P.; Captain Gossett, Sir John Buchanan, Dr. Schliemann, explorer of Mycenæ; Captain T. Davis Sewell, clerk of the Shipwrights' Company; Captain A. S. Da Motta, naval attaché, J.B.N.; Admiral Houston Stewart, R.N.; Admiral Right Hon. Lord Clarence Paget, the Hon. Anthony Evelyn Ashley, M.P.; and Mr. James Ashbury, M.P.

Madame Wooyeno, the wife of the Japanese Minister, performed the ceremony of christening the ship, breaking the bottle of wine, which was decked with a handsome bouquet, against the sharp, ugly snout, and at the same time saying in Japanese, "It gives me great pleasure to name the first Japanese ironclad which has been built in England. This vessel will be remarkable as one of the most formidable of the fleet of his Majesty the Mikado. I hope it will also be remarkable for bringing honours on the flag it will bear, and credit to those who have designed and built it. May the great God speed the Foo-So!" Taking a chisel and mallet, then, the lady deftly cut the lashing of a rope which held a ponderous weight. This, in falling, disengaged the dog-shores, and actually launched the vessel, which glided off the stocks into the water, amid the cheers of the large assembly of people who thronged the water-side and clustered in boats on the surface of the river. Two or three tugs at once got fast to the Foo-So and towed her to the Millwall Docks, where her engines and boilers are waiting ready to be put on board. The company were afterwards entertained at luncheon under the presidency of Mr. Samuda, M.P., who proposed "The Health of the Queen and Royal Family," followed by that of "The Emperor of Japan," and "The Emperor of China."

The Chairman proposed success to the Foo-So, coupled with health and prosperity to Madame Wooyeno, wife of the Japanese Minister, who had honoured them by her presence. (Cheers.) The launch they had just seen had taken place from the identical slip from which had been launched the Thunderbolt, the first ironclad ship ever built for the British Navy during the Crimean War. That vessel would have been launched on the same day—14th of April, 1856—but for the tide, which, being too low, delayed the launch for a week. Another curious coincidence was that both the Thunderbolt and the Foo-So had been launched with every armour plate upon them. Referring to the marvellous change which has taken place in ships and guns since the era of the Thunderbolt, when a 68-pounder (96 cwt.) was the heaviest piece of ordnance we possessed, he spoke of the impression which had at first prevailed that only immensely long ships could float 4½ inch of iron, and gave Mr. Reed credit for having demonstrated that it was possible to have much shorter vessels with much thicker armour-plating, and having in the Foo-So arrived at the remarkable result of a ship with only 3,700 tons displacement carrying 9-in armour at a speed of thirteen knots—for the fact of Messrs. Penn being the makers of the engines was a guarantee that what was anticipated in the matter of speed would be fully realised—with an armament of four 18-ton guns, capable of ranging the entire horizon. Being barque rigged, with an ample area of canvas, she would be able to traverse any distance desired without the aid of steam, while under steam at moderate speed she could carry coals enough to make a passage of 4,500 miles. These he held to be characteristics of the very highest value for a navy required for the protection of an extensive commerce and, therefore, he much regretted that illness had prevented the presence of the right hon. gentleman the First Lord of the Admiralty. Adverting, in conclusion, to the graceful and successful way in which Madame Wooyeno had performed her share in the ceremony, he expressed a hope that the success of the vessel's launch might be an augury of the success to follow that lady through the rest of her life.

The toast was drunk with three times three.

His Excellency Wooyeno Kagenori, who spoke in Japanese, referred to the interesting speech they had just heard, and desired Mr. Lane to convey to the company his thanks, and those of Madame Wooyeno, for their hearty reception of the toast, and for their kind appreciation of the small share which Madame Wooyeno had had in the launch. The capabilities of the Foo-So had been dealt with by abler hands than his, so he would merely offer his sincere thanks to the designer (Mr. (Reed) and the contractors (Messrs. Samuda and Messrs. Penn), whose names were known "wherever the ocean touched the shore." His Excellency then proceeded to explain that "Foo-So" was one form of the name of Fusi-yama, the most celebrated mountain in Japan, the outline of which was pictured on fans and other Japanese articles now becoming so common in England. He hoped that the ship would, in its career, acquire as much celebrity as the mountain, and be as much admired. The progress of Japan in commerce and foreign intercourse rendered it desirable to have a fleet, and it was for that reason they had ordered the Foo-So and two other ironclads, and the Mikado would be always ready, should occasion require, for his small fleet to join the more powerful squadron of Her Britannic Majesty in any operation for the advancement of civilisation. He should immediately and with graat pleasure report to his Government the proceedings of the day, and he was sure that, though Japan was 15,000 miles distant, he should very soon receive an echo of sincere satisfaction; and, in conclusion, he said that it was his most earnest wish and most fervent desire and hope that the relations between Japan and Great Britain would ever remain of the most friendly nature, based not merely on considerations of mere commercial advantage, but on the more honourable and lasting basis of national rights and internatiocnal esteem.

Subsequently his Excellency, in a few words of very good English, proposed "The Health of the Chairman," who briefly replied.

The Chinese Envoy then rose and said, in Chinese: You so readily drank success to the glorious career of the Foo-So that I will now ask you to fill your glasses and drink success to the navy of which she is a component part—the navy of Japan—which we hope will never fire a shot except as an ally of China. (Laughter.) Japan is, geographically speaking, the England of the East; may it use its power, as England has ever done, in defence of nationalities. (Hear, hear.)

The health of Mr. Reed, and that hon. gentleman's response, brought the proceedings to a close.

THE SHANGHAI POLYTECHNIC.

On Wednesday, the 11th inst., a very interesting lecture was given by Mr. T. L. King, at the Polytechnic Institution, Regent-street, on Polarised Light and other optical phenomena, illustrated by apparatus which is about to be despatched to the above-named Institution, which, as our readers are aware, has been established with the view of familiarising the native mind with the literature, arts, and sciences of the west. The apparatus included the kaleidoscope, the chromotrope, the microscope, and the optical apparatus for the production of the Ghost. Among those invited were:—The Chinese Ministers and suite, and their interpreter, Dr. Macartney; Sir Thomas Wade, the British Minister at Peking, and Sir Walter Medhurst, late Consul at Shanghai; the Duke of Sutherland, the Duke of Westminster, Lord Northbrook, the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Earl of Lichfield, Lord Alfred Paget, Sir Charles Trevelyan, Lady Holland, Mr. Trevelyan, junr., Sir G. Balfour, Sir H. Rawlinson, Sir Rutherford Alcock, Sir Macdonald and Lady Stephenson, General Sir James Alexander and Miss Alexander, Sir Joseph Whitworth, Sir A. Cotton, Sir G. Campbell, George Turnbull, Esq., C.E., and Mrs. Turnbull, John Penn, Esq., junr., Donald Currie, Esq., John Nixon, Esq., Archibald Hamilton, Esq., J. D'A. Samuda, Esq., M.P., Charles Manby, Esq., Honorary Secretary, and James Forest, Esq., Secretary of the Institution of Civil Engineers, J. D. Campbell, Esq., of the Chinese Maritime Customs, R. B. Wade, Esq., C. J. R. Turner, Esq., and many others. Some of the gentlemen invited regretted their inability to attend, through being absent from London. Although the phenomena exhibited did not present anything that was absolutely new to European eyes, they were admirably calculated to awaken in the Chinese mind an interest in science; and, to many Europeans, the lecture given was both instructive and entertaining. Mr. T. L. King, who has the art of placing his subjects before his hearers in a very attractive shape, is well acquainted with the best means of conveying an idea of abstruse subjects to the uninitiated mind, and as Sir Walter Medhurst and Dr. Macartney were beside the Chinese Envoys, and explained the lecture as it proceeded, no doubt their Excellencies were well posted as to the scientific bearing of the very beautiful experiments exhibited before them. The public manifested considerable enthusiasm on the nature of the lecture being explained to them, and applauded heartily on being informed that the Envoys from China were in the room. As most of the experiments had to be conducted in the dark, it is to be feared the opportunity looked forward to by many of the audience of seeing the Envoys was comparatively limited. The lecturer, in introducing the subject said he proposed to exhibit some of the phenomena of polarised light, and also to show the optical effects obtainable by the microscope, the kaleidoscope, and the polariscope.

The occasion was one of special interest, from the fact that this apparatus was destined for a Polytechnic Institution in China—the first of its kind in that great Empire—and the introduction of such apparatus and the desire of the Chinese to possess it constituted a new evidence of progress and aspiration which might lead to great results hereafter. The Chinese Polytechnic

Institution owed its origin mainly to the exertions of Sir Walter Medhurst, lately our Consul at Shanghai, and of Mr. Fryer, who had acted as honorary secretary. It has been warmly supported by our Minister, Sir Thomas Wade, and by the leading Chinese officials, among whom might be mentioned the eminent Li-Hung-Chang, whose name name was well known among us, and Hsu-tsuch-t-sun, a mandarin, possessing a very remarkable amount of technical knowledge and of boundless scientific curiosity, and whose sons worthily follow in his steps. A committee of co-operation had been formed in London, composed of gentlemen who were united by friendly sentiments towards China, and who were anxious to assist in the great work of developing her vast resources, and it had appeared to these gentlemen that a preliminary exhibition of the apparatus at the Polytechnic Institution, in the presence of the Chinese Ministers, now in London, would not only attract public support to the enterprise, but would afford a gratifying opportunity of testifying how friendly were our sentiments and how anxious we all were to help China to reach the great future which lies before her. It had been suggested that, after having been shown in Shanghai the apparatus should be carried to the other chief cities of China, and this and other concurrent measures would naturally open the way to the realisation of that great idea of an International Exhibition which China, it appeared, is so anxious to invite. Mr. King then proceeded with the demonstrations of the apparatus, which occupied more than an hour. All the experiments were concerned with the phenomena of light. Sir David Brewster's kaleidoscope was shown upon the screen, and this series of experiments concluded with a butterfly, which, by means of the polariscope, assumed from moment to moment a more and more gorgeous plumage on its wings. The principles of polarised light were fully explained in the course of the lecture, and some of the demonstrations were of the most beautiful character; one in particular, in which a magnified grain of common sand-stone displayed as reflected by the oxy-hydrogen microscope upon the screen the most lovely combination of colours, literally, as the lecturer observed, showing to us that there are "sermons in stones and good in every thing." In the course of the lighter part of the lecture, introductory to the more scientific portion, a magnified likeness of Hsu-Tsuch-tsung was exhibited on the screen, with his autograph in Chinese characters subjoined.

At the conclusion of the lecture Sir Walter Medhurst inspected the apparatus, which were further explained to him by Mr. King, whom he congratulated upon his lecture. The Envoys also expressed their satisfaction with it, and their hope that it would pave the way to improved knowledge of optical science in China. Among the articles being sent out to China by Messrs. Bourne and Co. (in addition to those which have already been spoken of in this paper) are several of their new high speed engines, which are believed by the most competent judges to be destined to become the steam engines of the future. One of these engines will be employed to drive a Tanite emery wheel, which acts like a rotating file in rapidly polishing metals and sharpening cutting instruments. This machinery attracted much attention. The apparatus is to go out at once, and the efforts which have been recorded from time to time to introduce the railway into China will thus be succeeded by a less obviously utilitarian, but very attractive means of propagating Western knowledge, and accustoming the Chinese to recognise that something which is not evil may come from abroad. Perhaps the most promising feature in connection with the present movement in China is that it is adopted and pressed on by the Chinese themselves.

THE INSURRECTION IN JAPAN.

(THE TIMES CORRESPONDENT.)

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 25.

As your readers already know, the insurrection at Kumamoto, headed by Mayebara, was speedily suppressed. Mayebara paid for his defection with his life; many of his followers were killed or committed suicide, and a general belief was entertained that a danger, which would undoubtedly have been great had the insurgents met with success in their first attempts against the Government, had disappeared altogether before the vigorous measures taken to crush the seeds of it. The Satsuma men remained calm and loyal throughout this affair; but the loyalty which was presumed from this calmness has now proved to have been hollow enough. The Satsuma men saw only too plainly that Mayebara's indiscreet haste could only lead to defeat, and the frustration of the large purposes contemplated by the disaffected Samurai. They therefore stood entirely aloof from him, and, with no sign of protest or remonstrance, allowed him to pay the terrible penalty entailed by his unskilful impetuousity. But not the less had they resolved on withstanding the Government when their preparations were more advanced and success seemed more probable. Accordingly, the clan is now in open rebellion. Thus it is that the Government of Japan has on its hands the most difficult task it has been called on to perform since the Restoration. The Satsuma men played the chief part in bringing about that event. They are united, determined, and brave; they are of a conservative habit of mind—loyal to the Mikado, though arrayed against his present advisers; and they are, perhaps, the best representatives of the Japanese character. But they have this great fault—that they place the interests of their clan above the interests of the Empire. They are, first of all, Satsuma men, then Japanese; and thus it is that they judge of the acts of the Government, not by their probable and calculated effects upon the Empire, but by their probable effects upon themselves. Now, the object with which the feudal system in this country was abolished was to secure the homogeneity of the Empire; in other words, to break up the old clan associations and replace them by a more purely national feeling. This object has to a great extent been accomplished. The Choshiu, Tosa, Hizen, Kaga, or Bizen men have gradually come to regard themselves as before all things Japanese, afterwards as men of these clans. Not so the Satsuma men. The pride of clan is with them an obstinate, almost indestructible, feeling, and their great services at the time of the Restoration have tended rather to increase than diminish it. They were abundantly rewarded for those services by places and honours when the spoils of victory were divided; they still hold more of the great posts than the men of any other clan, and while they occupy many of the Provincial Governorships, they would not for a moment brook the administration of their own provincial affairs being conducted by any official of an alien clan. Their scale of taxation is believed to be the same as that which has been established by the central authority over the rest of the empire, but they insist on administering their own revenues, and though they may possibly transmit copies of their accounts to Tokio, they certainly do not contribute anything to the Imperial Exchequer. Their obstinate isolation, therefore, frustrates all the endeavours of the Government to produce real unity throughout the Empire.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE PERAK CAMPAIGN.

(9th.) In reply to Mr. Serjeant SIMON, Mr. Secretary HARDY said it was arranged that troops sent from India to serve in the Straits Settlements during the late outbreak should have the same advantages as they had when sent to Abyssinia, and inquiries were being made from the Indian Government as to what those advantages were.

CEYLON.

(12th.) Mr. POTTER asked the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the attention of the Government had been drawn to the scarcity in the island of Ceylon, as reported in the Ceylon Times of the 7th of March; whether any information had reached the Government as to the recommendations of the Commission recently appointed in Ceylon to inquire into the present working of the food taxes in that island; and whether, as a measure of temporary relief, the Government was prepared to sanction certain proposed branch railway extensions in order to give work to the unemployed immigrant Tamils reported to be now suffering severe privations in Ceylon.

Mr. J. LOWTHER said: The attention of the Colonial-office has been drawn to this matter, and Lord Carnarvon has been for some time past in communication with the local authorities as to the best means of meeting the difficulties referred to. With reference to the second portion of the hon. gentleman's question, the Commission which has been appointed by the Governor has only recently commenced its labours, and has not yet reported. As to sanctioning certain proposed railway schemes, it is obviously impossible for Her Majesty's Government to adopt any specific scheme until it has been thoroughly investigated. Meanwhile, however, roads and other relief works are in contemplation, and considerable sums have been already voted for those objects. I am happy to be able to add that the reports of the general crops in the island are satisfactory, and that the emergency is only expected to be of a temporary character.

THE YUNNAN MISSION.

(13th.)—In answer to Mr. PEASE, Mr. BOURKE said:—The papers relating to Mr. Grosvenor's mission to Yunnan have been printed, and they would have been in the hands of members before now were it not for the fact that we have been waiting for a memorandum which Sir Thomas Wade is preparing with respect to the Chefoo Convention. I saw Sir Thomas Wade this morning, and I hope to have that memorandum in a very few days. After that I trust there will be no delay in presenting the papers.

THE INSURRECTION IN JAPAN.

The New York papers contain a despatch from San Francisco, containing news from Japan to the 13th of March. The despatch says:—

The insurrection in the island of Kiusiu continues. The Government troops experience much difficulty on account of the mountainous country. Nevertheless, the rebels have been driven from various positions, and are now confined to one stronghold south-east of the city of Kumanotu, the capital of the Province of Figo. The Imperial troops now at the seat of action number 15,000. The insurgents' force is unknown. There is little doubt that the rebellion will be suppressed in a short time, although the situation chosen is so strong, and preparations have been so abundant, that greater difficulties are presented than in previous similar outbreaks. The proposal of foreign residents to establish a military volunteer corps in Yokohama has been strongly protested against by the Government as a wanton and unwarranted manifestation of unfriendly distrust. The foreign Ministers have been called upon by the Japanese authorities to forbid the project.

THE JAPANESE NAVY.

H.I.J.M.'s screw corvette Tsukuba Kan, 1,033 tons, 200 horse-power, the ship which our readers may remember to have made the voyage to San Francisco last year, and to have behaved so admirably in the very heavy weather which she then encountered, has been despatched with all possible speed to Kobe to join the fleet at present assembled there. She was originally intended for a sea-going training-ship, and in anticipation of an early cruise in that capacity, has been refitting at Yokosuka. She is commanded by Captain Matsumura (an efficient naval officer trained in America), and carries a complement of 245 men all told. Her armament consists of sixteen guns—eight muzzle-loading Krupp seventy pounders, and six forty pounder bronze (Japanese made), besides two pivot 7in. breech-loading Krupps, only one of which, however, has been shipped. It is worthy of notice, perhaps, that of the old crew which navigated her across the Pacific, not one, we believe, is at present borne upon her books. Of the fifteen or sixteen ships of war which, including transports, comprise the Japanese Navy, with the exception of the two at present being fitted out for sea at Yokosuka, and the two others supposed to be at Kagoshima, the whole are collected at Kiobe. In consequence of all these unexpected interferences with the course of naval instruction pursued at Yokosuka, &c., the foreign instructors, whose duties have hitherto required their absence from head-quarters, have been recalled for the present to the Kaigunsho. In the College, however, little if any disturbance of the usual curriculum has taken place.—Japan Mail.

Naval and Military.

The Kriegspiel, or war-game, which has become so popular of late years in the army, has been introduced into the German Navy, after experimental trial and adaptation of it in Berlin and found much acceptance. The object of the Naval Kriegspiel is to excite interest of naval officers in tactical rules of sea-warfare; to enable them to observe the manœuvres of the fleets or vessels of two hostile parties, which are allotted to a leader or a number of officers, and to study the most favourable formation of the fleets at the beginning of the engagement, the grouping of ships in separate squadrons or divisions, the application of artillery, rams, and torpedoes in individual cases of encounter with an enemy, &c., and to provide opportunities of conversation and the exchange of opinions on what has been done. Certain problems or tasks are appointed in the game. Thus two hostile fleets, the number and strength of whose ships are known, are required to find one another in the open sea, or before the enemy's harbours, and, if the leaders think fit, to give battle. Close by a plan for the details of the battle has to be worked out. For the strength, value, and work of the separate ships, their velocity, number of guns, data of calibre, plating, quantity of coal which each can carry, and the quantity used in given times, special tables are constructed. For the turning of ships, turning circles are made of the corresponding diameter. The weather conditions are taken from the weather reports of the Observatory. The movements of the individual ships and the fleets take place on the ordinary naval maps; the battle proper, after the enemy has come in sight, on a grated plane, divided into millimetres, on a scale of one to 2,000; here the movements and evolutions of the ships are simultaneously produced.

Colonel Smith, C.B., a Peninsula veteran, died on the 6th inst. Colonel Smith, who was a younger brother of the late Lieut. General Sir Harry Smith, Bart., G.C.B., joined the 95th (now the Rifle Brigade) sixty-nine years ago. He was present in the retreat to Corunna, under Sir John Moore, during which his regiment was almost daily engaged. He was severely wounded in the affair at the Coa, in 1810, and served with his regiment throughout the Peninsula war; at the sieges of Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajos; the battles of Salamanca, Vittoria, the operations in the Pyrenees, the actions of Nivelle, Nive, Orthez, Tarbey, and Toulouse; besides being engaged in many skirmishes and affairs of outposts. He was present at Waterloo, and was the first regimental officer who entered Paris in 1815. In 1817 Colonel Smith, still a subaltern, exchanged to half-pay, and was subsequently appointed barrack-master. After holding that post at several stations, he was, on the formation of the camp at Aldershot, appointed barrack-master there, which office he held until 1869. He had received the silver war medal with ten clasps, and the Waterloo medal, and was in 1868 nominated a Companion of the Bath (civil division). Colonel Smith was one of three brothers who served in the Rifle Brigade, Sir Harry and Charles Smith, who was wounded at Waterloo, and who died a few years ago.

The accounts which have been published relating to the accident to Her Majesty's ship Thetis seem to have been somewhat exaggerated. The ship left Port Said on the 21st of February, having on board three weeks' provisions. On the night of the 28th, about half-way between Port Said and Malta, her screw broke down, and the remaining part of the voyage had to be performed under sail, against westerly winds which prevail at this season. On the 5th of March, as a measure of precaution rather than from necessity, supplies equivalent to about three days' provisions were obtained from a passing steamer. On the 14th, in consequence of the unusually slow progress which the ship was making, the crew were placed on a reduced allowance of provisions, and this was continued till the 17th, when the Devastation met the Thetis.

The Swallow, 3, a wooden double screw gunboat, has been refitted a Portsmouth for service on the south-east coast of America. She has undergone so thorough an overhaul that she has been all but rebuilt. She has had many of her stern timbers renewed, been provided with a new upper deck and fresh planking in the wake of the boilers, and been fitted with a new iron deck immediately above the uptake, in the place of the old wooden one, which was liable to take fire from the great heat, and which did actually take fire during the last commission. The Swallow has also been furnished with a poop and raised forecastle, which will greatly add to her comfort, and has been for the first time ventilated to the bilge. Her armament has also been changed, her former 6½-ton gun and two 40-pounders having been exchanged for a 4½-ton gun and two 64-pounders.

The Isis, the first steel ship ever constructed for the British Navy, was successfully launched from Pembroke Dockyard yesterday. The ship is a twin screw; her engines, of 7,000 .IH.P., are being fitted by Messrs. Maudslay and Field. Her principal dimensions are—Length between perpendiculars, 300 ft.; breadth, 46 ft. 1 in.; depth in hold, 16 ft. 3 in.; mean draught, 19 ft. 9 in.; tons displacement, 3,750; her estimated speed, 17½ knots; coal-carrying capacity, 500 tons; and complement, 250 men.

The gunboats Foxhound and Forward, built for the Government by the Barrow Iron Shipbuilding Company, left Barrow Docks on the 7th inst. for Barrow harbour, where they joined Her Majesty's frigate Valorous, which brought stores and men to man the new craft. In the course of a few days the gunboats will proceed on an official trial, and afterwards they will join three other gunboats built in the Mersey and thence proceed, in company with the Valorous, to Portsmouth where they will receive their final fittings.

Lord Lonsdale has been appointed to the ancient and dignified office of Vice-Admiral of Cumberland and Westmoreland, one of the very few vice-admiralties still existing in the United Kingdom. These officers formerly exercised, each in his own vice-admiralty, the very important duties and powers of the Lord High Admiral of England, and no doubt can do so still, so far as Parliament has not handed those duties and powers over to the Admiralty and Common Law Courts.

The chambering of the experimental 80-ton gun is completed, and on the 16th inst. the weapon will be taken once more to Shoeburyness, for a second trial against the 32-inch iron target. Another 80-ton gun, the first of the four ordered for the Inflexible, will be ready by about the beginning of May, and will be rifled on the polygroove system. A trial is necessary to compare the advantages of this principle with those of the rifling adopted in the older gun.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Henry Spencer Churchill, late of the 60th Rifles, died at Monaco on the 3rd inst. He was the eldest son of the late Lord Charles Spencer Churchill, and served with the Rifle Brigade in the Kaffir War of 1846-47; in the Crimean campaign up to the 22nd of July, 1855, including the battles of the Alma and Inkerman; and with the 60th Rifles in the campaign in Rohilcund in 1858, during the Indian Mutiny.

The following promotions result from the death of Lieutenant-General H. W. Whitfeild, viz.—Major-General H. Dalrymple White, C.B., colonel of the 6th Dragoon Guards, to be lieutenant-general; Colonel B. Harrison, commanding the Bradford Brigade Depot, to be major-general; Major R. Law, unattached, staff officer of pensioners at Plymouth, to be brevet lieutenant-colonel; and Captain R. Blount, 20th Foot, to be brevet major.

The officers of the Prince of Wales's Own Ghoorka Regiment, the famous corps which defended the women in the Flagstaff Tower during the mutiny at Delhi, have forwarded a superbly embossed Kurkurree knife, the weapon of the regiment, as a present to the Prince. The regiment were granted permission to use his Royal Highness's title during the tour of the Prince in India.

Captain Sir William Hewett, K.C.B., who has lately returned from the West Coast of Africa, has received from the Foreign-office an expression of approval at the manner in which the blockade of the Dahomey coast has been maintained, and the various difficulties with the natives on the West Coast have been met, during the period of his service as commodore on the station.

The Secretary for War directs that an officer returning from abroad on private affairs will be liable to pay the expense of his successor's passage. This rule will be enforced if the officer retires from the service (except on half-pay) or exchanges, or is made supernumerary to his regiment, or is transferred to the militia, except as adjutant.

The court-martial held upon Capt. Stevens, of H.M.S. Barracouta, was concluded on the 11th inst. The decision of the Court was that each of the eight charges was proven, and the sentence upon the prisoner was that he be dismissed Her Majesty's service.

The two hundred medals intended for distribution among the officers and crews composing the late Arctic Expedition have just been completed at Her Majesty's Mint. They are composed of fine silver, are of circular form, and weigh exactly one ounce each.

Captain N. Bowden-Smith, now serving as flag-captain to Admiral Drummond in H.M.S. Hercules, has been selected to fill the same post to Rear-Admiral John Corbett, C.B., the newly appointed commander-in-chief in the East Indies.

The Minotaur, 17, iron clad, Capt. Lord Walter T. Kerr, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Beauchamp Seymour, commanding the Channel Squadron, has arrived at Portsmouth to pay down and refit.

The Admiralty has directed an inquiry to be held into the cause of the collision between Her Majesty's ship Triumph and the Benjamin Whitworth.

The Ringdove, 3, double-screw gun-vessel, Com. Singleton, recently returned from the China station, was paid off at Portsmouth on the 5th inst.

The Ariel, 4, composite gun-boat, 436 tons, 540-horse power, is to be repaired at Chatham and brought forward for commission.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, APRIL 10.

The Easter holidays being over everything would again have assumed its usual appearance but for the Bismark resignation and the Eastern question. The pending visit to this city of the Crown Prince is, however, the prevailing topic of interest. It is now settled that his Royal Highness the Crown Prince will be accompanied by the Princess. The preparations made here for a suitable reception of the future Emperor and Empress are being carried out on a large scale, favoured by beautiful weather, which just at present is really summer-like, and far better than was anticipated a fortnight ago. The illustrious visitors will arrive here on the 19th April, and will be received at the railway station by a deputation of the Senate. In the evening a State dinner, followed by a representation of opera at the City Theatre, and a soirée at the Prussian Ambassador's, will take place. The illumination of the city was intended, but has been postponed to the second day. The 20th will be spent in visits to the principal establishments, quays, harbour, Bourse, meteorological-office, &c. In the evening a grand soirée will take place, at which the members of the Legislature with their ladies will be presented. On Saturday, the 21st, our distinguished visitors will bid our city farewell.

Much discussion has been raised with reference to the intended resignation of Chancellor Bismark. The question has sprung up who is best fitted to be his successor, and the first name mentioned has been Herr Delbrueck, the late President of the Imperial Chancellery. Herr Camphausen, the Prussian Minister of Finance, and Field Marshal Von Manteuffel, who is a persona gratissima at Berlin, and the German Ambassador at Paris, Prince Hohenlohe, have also been named. But a second difficulty presents itself, namely, the judicial authorisation of the new Minister; German law requiring that all promulgations of the Emperor should be countersigned by the Chancellor of the Empire. Moreover, there are so many newly-created institutions of which Bismark is himself the founder and protector. Field-Marshal Manteuffel is, for instance, no free trader; Prince Hohenlohe is Roman Catholic; and so there remain rather only Herr Camphausen and Herr Delbrueck whose names can be thought of in connection with the succession. As regards the first-named it must be borne in mind that he is not only a personal but also a political friend of Prince Bismark, so that a change in policy as regards free trade would probably involve his resignation to follow that of the Prince. All mentioned apprehensions entertained of the absolute retirement of Prince Bismark have disappeared with the announcement that he will be satisfied with leave of absence of two months' duration. The decision of the Emperor as regards this new phase of the case is still pending, and may be given within the next few days. If it should be favourable Herr Camphausen will probably become his successor in the management of home affairs, and Herr Buelow as regards foreign affairs.

As already mentioned the weather of late has entirely changed, warm weather has set in, with occasional light showers of rain at nights, and a clear sky during the day. If no late frosts occur the harvest may be far better than has been anticipated. From Dantzic terrible inundations are reported, which in their destructive effects have even surpassed the great floods of 1855. The 25th and 26th of March were the days, on which the inhabitants of both banks of the Weichset river all the way down from Culm to Dantzic were the victims of an inundation, which was the more disastrous as it was quite unexpected. After the flood of December last it was thought that all danger was over, because the Carpathian mountains exhibited little snow; in consequence nothing was done. beyond the repairing of the damages occasioned by the December inundations. The disaster is beyond all description; the ice coming down the river, accumulated a little below Graudenz, got fast there and soon caused the water to rise to such a height that all the adjacent villages as well as the towns on the banks of the river were changed into lakes; many houses were destroyed, numerous lives have been lost, and a great number of cattle was carried away by the flood. A long period must elapse, and great help will be needed, to restore these unfortunate low-lands to the flourishing condition, which they presented before the flood came upon them.

From the 1st April, 1877, the General Postal Union will include Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Labuan, Hong Kong, the Amirante and Seychelle Islands, the Isle of Rodriguez, &c., &c., and the rates of postage to those places will be m.0.40 for paid and m.0.60 for unpaid letters of 15 grammes each, and m.0.10 for prints, samples and circulars of 50 grammes each.

The International Bank in Hamburg has advertised its annual meeting of shareholders for the 19th of this month. The report and balance sheet for 1876 will be submitted to the meeting, and afterwards the election of officers will take place.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Business has been interfered with by the Easter holidays, and transactions have been of only small extent. Money continues in good supply, and rate of discount is still 3 to 4 per cent. in the open market.

RICE.—No transactions have transpired, as the 8,000 bags Java arrived per Melusine had already changed owners afloat.

TEA is quiet, but holders maintain their quotations; two parcels Congou have been sold, viz., 1,398/8 boxes and 1,828/8 boxes.

COTTON has been quiet during the first part of the past fortnight, and as the improvement after the holidays in England has not been prolonged the same quietness prevails here now. A sale has been made of 200 bales Rangoon at m.1 per kilo.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are quoted m.560 to 620; Mace m.5 to 5.40 per kilo; Cloves are in good demand, Zanzibar quality values m.142 to 143 per 50 kilo; Pepper quiet, Singapore m.39 to 39½, Penang m.36 to 36½ per 50 kilo.; White m.69 to 80 per 50 kilo.

SHIPPING.

Arrivals and departures on the river during the latter part of March were rather small, but of late have been satisfactory, as a good many transatlantic vessels have made their appearance. The Osburgha, Cook, arrived from Hiogo (Japan); Queen, Grieves, from Singapore; Antipodes, Barnes, from Hong Kong; Casilda, Johnson, from Apia; and Tellus, Brandt, from Levaka. The str. Galatea, Boehme, has left for her usual route to Penang, &c., and will be shortly followed by two more steamers of the same line, the Bellona and the Atalanta; the Bernhard Carl, Lueders, has left for Yokohama, and the Charles Dickens, Bockwoldt, for Brisbane.

The berth for the Far East is occupied by the Anna, Moennich, for Singapore; Gerhardine, Hansen, for Singapore and Penang; Ino, Mahn, for Bangkok; Vesta, Schoemer, for Manila; Vega, Nortvedt; Adolph, Horn; Woodville, Nelson; Meteor, Dinckelberg; and Marco Polo, Zaeger, all for Hong Kong; and Adolph, Hupfer, for Shanghai.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, APRIL 11.

Our Lords have done their duty. They voted the several Bills that were laid before them and left the Hague. The debate was, as it usually is, short, but at the same time very sharp. The first question which they had to discuss was the Reorganisation of the Tariff. The members of the First Chamber, of course, proved to be free traders, with only very few exceptions. Messrs. Schimmelpenninck Van der Oye and Hartsen raised every possible argument against the motives, which were brought forward by their co-members in favour of the Bill. The two named, however, lost the battle most decidedly. The policy of the Minister was approved of by thirty-one against four votes, which is, I need not add, a very large majority. The Bill to increase the duties on home manufactured spirits from 53f. to 57f. per hectolitre was approved by thirty-one against two votes. This measure was proposed by the Minister in order to cover the unfavourable balance, which would be caused by the reorganisation of the tariff duties. By defending it he said at the same time that it was his intention to abolish within a very short delay the duties on soap (the tax on the cleanness), and that he would propose other reorganisations, which would cost, however, monetary sacrifices. Only a very few members were in opposition to this Bill, because they were of opinion that our home spirits were charged too heavy. Mr. Van der Heim convinced them easily that this was not the case. The task with which Mr. Van Lynden, Minister of the Department of Justice, was charged was not such a very easy one. He had to defend the nine Judicial Bills, against which so enormous an opposition was created in committee, that many believed that the Lords intended to outvote them. This, however, was not the case; after a three days' debate they were carried by a very large majority. The Minister was complimented on the success which he had obtained, and our Lords returned to their respective homes. Within a few days—on the 17th instant—the Members of the Second Chamber will meet again. They, as a matter of course, will deal at once with the Lower Class Instruction Bill, if it is ready for being debated. This is not yet the case, because the Minister Heemskerk lingers with his answer upon the section report. It thus still is possible that something may happen which will delay the debate. Within a few days, however, we will know all thereabout.

On the 17th inst. the elections will take place in this town and at Tiel to fill two vacant seats in the Second Chamber. It seems that here will be duly elected Mr. C. Van Heukelom, who is the candidate of both the parties, whilst at Tiel Mr. De Beaufort has the lion part of the chance. In the meanwhile some candidates are brought forward for the general elections, which will take place in the month of June next; amongst them appears Mr. G. J. Grashuis. This is most certainly not too late.

H.M. the King, who arrived this morning in this town, where he will reside for a week, conferred the knighthood of the Order of the Dutch Lion upon Messrs. W. A. Henny, director of Instruction, Religion and Industry in the Dutch Indies, and also upon Dr. N. J. Hoorweg, director of the Gymnasium Willem III. at Batavia. Her Majesty the Queen, who, like Prince Alexandra accompanies the King here, will only stay till Friday next. It is most remarked that the said Prince put himself forward in all sort of public matters, as well as politics. This is, though I don't want to give reasons for it, certainly not without signification. Of the Prince of Orange nothing more is now heard. He resides at Paris, and several rumours are set in circulation about the question whether he will return or not.

I told you some days ago that Mr. D. De Clercq had asked for his dismissal as secretary of the Dutch Trading Company. The directors have presented to his Majesty the following list of gentlemen, to make an election out of them to fill the vacant seat: viz.: H. Schroder Visser, W. K. M. Vrolik, and J. C. De Marez Oyens. Mr. De Clercq will remain consulter of the said company.

As a proof how badly our ironworks are provided with orders, it is stated that when public tenders were invited for making the iron constructions for railway-bridges in Java, the highest subscription was f.79,000 and the lowest f.58,000, whilst the estimate was f.84,000.

On the 28th inst. a detachment of 150 soldiers will be forwarded to Java by the steamer Prins Van Oranje, in order to reinforce the Army.

The New Yorker Handels Zeitung publishes the fact that petroleum is now shipped directly from New York for Batavia. The first steamer charged with a cargo of this mineral oil was the English one, Spartan.

Since some days the English mails destined for Holland are forwarded via Queensborough Flushing. This is most decidedly an improvement.

The International Flower Show, which will be opened to-morrow, promises to be excellent. The grounds have a surface of 40,000 metres.

COMMERCIAL.

Though a good tone prevailed in our markets business in general remained dull, and very calm. Only some lots of no importance changed hands for the second-hand or for export. A revival of the general trade is thought to be on the eve.

COFFEE.—The deliveries for the month of March were most satisfactory. The trade looks very healthy, but both buyers and sellers are disinclined to operate. Good ordinary Java is actually quoted at 52½c. to 53c. The Dutch Trading Company advertised a public sale of 100,897 bs. Java, which will take place on the 18th inst.

TEA.—Without anything to note. No transactions took place.

RAW SUGAR met only with a trifling demand; there is much want for business in refined, and this fact locks up the trade. A few very small lots changed hands at January value.

RICE.—Unaltered. Prices rule in favour of the buyers. At Rotterdam arrived 7,670 bs. Java. Cleaned (Java and Japan) met with a good demand.

TOBACCO (JAVA) dull in the first hand. The transactions are very limited. The stock includes 9,912 bs. Sumatra, 7,721 bs. Java, 3,000 bs. E.I., 116 bs. Manila.

COTTON met with some more demand, and somewhat higher prices were paid.

SPICES.—Nutmegs look firm, with large orders for export. Mace enjoyed a good demand in consequence of the very low prices. Cloves unaltered. The business was of no interest whatever.

GUTTA-PERCHA.—122 piculs ex Gedeh and 17 piculs Gutta Soesoe ex idem were sold; particulars about the prices, however, did not transpire.

JAVA INDIGO met with a regular demand. About 150 chests were sold, so that the stock decreased to about 1,000 chests.

TIN (BANCA) is nominally quoted at f.42½. 1,000 slabs of Billiton were sold at f.42.

HIDES met with a regular demand.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—April 4, at Brouwershaven, from Macassar, Zeenymph.

DEPARTURES.—April 6, from Texel, for Sourabaya, Professor Van der Boon Mesch; 9, from Texel, for Batavia, Urania; 10, from Ymuiden, for Samarang, Merapi; from Brouwershaven, for Sourabaya, Emma.

THE JAPAN INSURRECTION.

THE latest advices from Japan, confirmed via America, still represent the struggle which has taken place in a very serious light, and although this news has been anticipated by official telegrams to the Japanese Legation, to the effect that the Satsuma insurrection had been quelled, it would probably be a mistake to consider that the alarm on the spot, exaggerated though it undoubtedly has been, was altogether without foundation. It has clearly been the object of the Japanese Government from the outset to do all in its power to hush matters up, while its policy has as plainly been to treat the outbreak as of small account, and to avoid anything which might be construed into anxiety or fear. This policy is beyond question a wise one, if not carried too far; but, in the active measures adopted to silence the Press, the Japanese Government went beyond reasonable bounds, and this action in consequence tended rather to increase than to allay general apprehension. The Japanese newspapers, as reflecting public opinion, cannot, therefore, be blamed for having looked upon matters somewhat in an alarmist light; and at the first blush there was, no doubt, sufficient in the insurrection to cause anxiety, however much it may have suited the Japanese Government to hide this unpleasant fact, and to make the matter appear as a small affair with which they could easily cope.

The details of the news are conflicting, but the nature of the insurrection can be now more clearly understood than before. It could not, it is true, be properly designated a rebellion, but its results, now that the Government has proved itself able to cope with it successfully, will be, in an important and salutary sense, revolutionary. The Satsuma clan have long enjoyed special privileges and powers which formed a species of imperium in imperio of a dangerous character. These privileges were, in fact, the last remnant of the old quasi-feudal system existing in Japan before the Daimios were deprived of their independent powers; and the result of the present encounter with the Central Government will be to put an end to this state of affairs. The possibility of an outbreak occurring some day in consequence of the anomalous position held by this powerful clan can scarcely have escaped the attention of the Japanese Government; and their success in putting down the movement is probably attributable, in part, at least, to this fact. Sooner or later a difficulty was almost certain to arise; and it may be considered a subject of congratulation that the trouble has been of short duration, and that the Government have been able apparently not only to hold their own; but to place themselves in such a position that the central authority will in future be recognised over the whole Empire. So far as foreign interests in Japan are concerned this cannot but be regarded as a distinct gain. Nothing is more unsatisfactory than having relations with a Government internally weak, and unable consequently, in making the most ordinary concessions, to feel secure that it will have the power to carry them out. This has been a frequent source of trouble, and the removal of this difficulty will doubtless now make the Japanese nation able as well as willing to continue in the career of progress in which it has already made such noticeable and creditable strides.

THE SHANGHAI POLYTECHNIC.

THE idea of exhibiting at the Polytechnic the optical apparatus which are to be sent out to China for the Shanghai institution bearing the same name was excellently conceived as a means of attracting increased attention to this matter. We give a full report of the proceedings elsewhere, and are glad to find that the Institution is not being overlooked. It is to be hoped that the interest thus manifested in it on this side will awaken the energies of those who have the conduct of its affairs in China, as it is upon them, as we have already taken occasion to point out, that success must mainly depend. People here will not do much until they see that those who are either resident in China or acquainted with affairs in that country are moving in earnest; but this point once established, there can be little question that the movement is one which will be well backed up in England. That the Shanghai Polytechnic should be in a measure identified with the old-established Institution in London will be a matter of gratification to many in China; and we trust that some means may possibly be devised of bringing about a closer alliance. There are many things in China which would be admirably suited for exhibition here, and the home establishment can, as in the present instance, afford much valuable aid with respect to the apparatus, &c., required by that in Shanghai. It marks an era in progress in China that two Chinese officials of rank should be present at a scientific lecture given in London; and we make no doubt that what they heard and saw on Wednesday last will be among the seed now being sown, which is destined in due season to bring forth fruit in China. The lecture given is admirably adapted to awaken interest on the part of the Chinese, and to give them some idea of the wonderful discoveries due to inductive science. We would suggest that a translation of Mr. KING'S lecture should be made into Chinese, giving explanations of the scientific phenomena and technical terms in a form that will be intelligible to the native mind, and be sent out together with the apparatus. It could be printed cheaply in Shanghai and distributed to the Chinese members of the Polytechnic there, when the apparatus are exhibited.

WE fully endorse some remarks which are made by the China Mail with reference to an application to investigate in private the charge recently brought in Hong Kong against COALES (and of which he was fully acquitted), of embezzling certain military stores there. This application was refused, and our contemporary justly observes that the idea of the publicity of the proceedings being likely to injure the accused, if innocent, is erroneous, and that the contrary is in reality the fact. There are some rare cases in which the bare making of an accusation against an individual in public will undoubtedly injure him; and the magistrates have consequently power to exclude reporters at preliminary investigations; but instances of this kind are of very rare occurrence, and the discretion of the papers is usually a sufficient guarantee against the publication of such cases, no less in the interest of the public than that of the accused.

IT is satisfactory to note, from the reply given by Mr BOURKE to the question put by Mr. PEASE in the House of Commons on Friday, that the papers relating to the Grosvenor Mission have been printed; but the reason for their not being published, namely, that the Government wish to include with them Sir THOMAS WADE'S Memorandum on the Convention, does not, unfortunately, leave room to conclude that they will necessarily be forthcoming at an early date. It is to be hoped, however, that there will not be much more procrastination in this long-delayed matter. While undesirous to complain in any way at the Government exercising its discretion as to the form in which it will issue Blue-books, we cannot but point out that there is certainly no necessary connection between the investigation which took place in Yunnan and the details as to commercial concessions which Sir THOMAS WADE'S Memorandum is to explain.

A NOTIFICATION has appeared in the Gazette, dated the 9th inst., stating that the Board of Trade have received, through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, information to the effect that in consequence of infection in Hong Kong and China all arrivals from thence will be subjected to sixteen days' quarantine in Queensland ports. We believe this need not cause any apprehension with respect to the health of foreign residents, either in Hong Kong or at the China, ports as it has reference to Chines eemigrants only. If the authors of the notification desire to check the import of Chinese into Queensland this is a very effectual mode of doing it.

WE understand that a telegram has been received from Singapore announcing that Sultan YSOOF was to be installed at Perak, and that Sultans ISMAIL and ABDOOLAH were to be deported from the country. This indicates a settlement of the future Government of Perak, which has been so long in abeyance.

THE COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT OF THE FOREIGN-OFFICE.

ALTHOUGH it has been attended with small success on the present occasion—having elicited in fact only an evasive answer from the Government—we trust that the attention called by Mr. SAMUELSON, M.P., to the desirability of a reorganisation of the Commercial Department of the Foreign-office will not be unproductive ultimately of useful results. There is no doubt, as has been noticed repeatedly by the Associated Chambers of Commerce, that a great want of improvement in this Department exists; and that something ought to be done to avoid the delay and inconvenience which repeatedly takes place when any question of a semi-commercial character arises at the Foreign-office. In such cases the matter is bandied backwards and forwards between that office and the Board of Trade, and much valuable time is in consequence lost while the action of the Government is needlessly weakened and hampered. A noticeable instance of this occurred a short time back in connection with the constitution of Shanghai as a port of registry for British shipping, about a year back. The question was inaugurated, and had ultimately to be decided by the Foreign-office, but the whole of the details were settled by the Board of Trade—the consequence being a lengthened delay and much tedious correspondence. Many similar matters constantly come under the notice of the Foreign-office, of which the Board of Trade should have cognisance, and upon which useful action would be taken, but which are simply set aside and forgotten, the result being that many excellent opportunities of improving our commercial relations are entirely lost. It would therefore be undoubtedly desirable either that there should be a specially commercial department at the Foreign-office, or that all questions of a commercial character should be referred, as of course. to the Board of Trade. Not the least evil of the existing system is the present unreasonable delay in the publication of the commercial reports from our Consuls (of which the Blue-book containing the reports from China for 1875 (!), reviewed in the present number of this paper, forms a good example), the consequence of which is that the value of the greater part of the information they contain is lost before they become public. In short, as matters are at present, the Foreign-office and the Board of Trade are, in regard to all matters partaking in part of a commercial and in part of a political character, in the position of the proverbial two stools, between which the public fall to the ground.

THE CLIMATE OF SAIGON.

A STATEMENT is made in an article, which we recently noticed, in the Journal du Commerce Maritime, which, if it were correct, would certainly be extremely satisfactory. The writer, M. MOCQUART, gave it as his opinion that the much-abused Colony of Saigon owes its mortality rather to the defectiveness of sanitary arrangements than to the insalubrity of the climate. In the interests of an important Colony, which we trust may be destined to work in with others in spreading European commerce and civilisation in the Far East, we should be very glad indeed to be able to confirm this statement; but, unfortunately, it is impossible to do so. The first impression conveyed to the visitor as, sweltering under a tropical sun, he threads his way in one of the Messageries Maritimes steamers up the intricate and winding river, flanked by dense jungle on either side, which, on account of the depth of the water, can be approached so closely by the huge vessels that monkeys and parrots can be descried upon the trees, is that the district must be one pregnant with epidemics and fever, and this impression is confirmed on his arrival at Saigon by the pale faces of the foreign inhabitants and the accounts he receives in all directions of the sickening effects which are produced by residence in the pretty, but flat and only partially developed, settlement. It is, indeed, impossible to deny that the climate is one of a very trying description. Some of exceptionally strong constitutions have been able to withstand its effects, with occasional changes, for a long series of years; but for the most part few venture to stay in the place longer than two or three years at a time, and while they do so, resort to liberal doses of quinine and other antidotes against the dreaded fever. The common remark of those who on their way home from China have spent a day or two at Saigon is an expression of regret that the settlement had not risen up on the rocks at Cape St. James's, like the now flourishing Colony of Hong Kong, and so been placed at a point where it could command the commerce without incurring the full dangers of the climate of the rich country washed by the river. Other considerations, however, than those merely of commerce influenced the laying out of Saigon under the Imperial instincts of the late Emperor NAPOLEON; and vast sums have now been sunk in calling into existence a large settlement in an unhealthy district, and which it must take much time and capital to fully develop. The French Government are, however, making creditable efforts to ameliorate this state of affairs. They do not blink the fact that Saigon is an unhealthy colony, but are doing their best to improve it locally, and also applying themselves to better the condition of the troops and of their public servants. New barracks have been built; others are in course of construction, and every care is taken to prevent the soldiery from becoming demoralised. But, notwithstanding all these precautions, the mortality is undoubtedly high, and this can only be attributed to one cause, namely, the debilitating effects of the climate, which are felt after a few months' residence. In order to avoid this as much as possible, the French Government have decided that no troops shall remain longer in the Colony than two years at a time. It may be, no doubt, hoped that further development of the Saigon Settlement, improved drainage and sanitary precautions in other directions, may reduce the effects of climate from what they are at present; but such improvements must be a work of time, and in the interim the only thing to be done both by mercantile men and the Government is to recognise the fact that in Saigon serious climatic difficulties have to be contended against, and to take the best measures possible to reduce their effects to a minimum.

THE COMING SILK SEASON.

SIMULTANEOUSLY, or nearly simultaneously, with the receipt of the present paper by our readers in China and Japan, telegraphic advices will have reached them giving reliable information concerning the probable outturn of the European crops. It is upon this point that the prospects of the market here, and, in consequence, also, the opening of the markets in Japan and China, must mainly depend; and, in endeavouring to arrive at an estimate of the probabilities at the present moment, it is necessary to write with much caution, as the information as yet obtainable is not sufficiently specific to form a definite basis of calculation. At the same time, it may be stated generally that the prospects are considered to be in favour of short crops both from the South of France and the North of Italy, chiefly on account of the seed from Japan having become damaged on its passage through America. Assuming that this view is correct, there is every danger of the markets in China and Japan opening at higher rates than the prospects of business generally will warrant; as, while it is undeniable that a shortness of the European crop will tell this year with special effect, as its influence will be augmented by the fact that such large supplies from China and Japan as there were last year cannot be looked for, the general prospects of trade and the special circumstances attaching to the Silk market do not foreshadow any activity or buoyancy in business here. On the one hand, we have, no doubt, to bear in mind that the exports both from China and Japan during the season just closed were extraordinarily large; every pound of available supply from old stock having been scraped together on account of the high prices, and that this fact will make the comparative deficiency of all kinds this year all the larger, and the influence upon prices so much the greater. But, as against this, we must not overlook that, if business continue as bad as at present, the manufacturers will not be able to face high prices, while the unfortunate results which attended the speculation in September last year (almost all who entered into it having lost in the end what they had previously made), will tend to bring about a lagging market, in which rapid sales, and especially sales for arrival cannot be expected. Looking at the prospects of trade generally, there is nothing that can be considered very encouraging as against the above causes immediately affecting the Silk market. No doubt the figures given by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Budget illustrate the great recuperative powers of the trade of the country, the revenue, notwithstanding the dulness generally complained of having been larger than was anticipated; but there is still a general want of confidence, and the political horizon is doubtful and clouded.

The stocks on the London market of China, Japan, and Canton show a total excess of about 8,000 bales, as compared with last year; say, Chinas, 20,000 bales, against 17,000 bales; Japan, 8,000 bales, against 5,000 bales; and Cantons, 7,500 bales, against 5,500 bales; and this fact must be borne in mind against the probable comparative deficiency in export from China and Japan above alluded to. The Continental markets are, however, comparatively bare, owing to the Lyons dealers having sent their silks to the London market, a fact which, it is to be hoped, may be taken as indicating the likelihood of a return from the state of affairs of late years to that of former times, when the Lyons dealers always bought in the London market. The alteration in this system resulted in part from the silk coming direct to Marseilles by the Messageries steamers and in part from the facilities to trade accorded by the late Emperor NAPOLEON; but it would seem that in the long run the centre of the trade will be regulated by facilities for finance, which are necessarily much greater in London than in Lyons. The competition from French importers will not, it may be safely concluded, be large this season, as the result of their enterprise last year will scarcely again make them anxious purchasers or eager competitors with the English merchants; and it is to be hoped that buyers in China and Japan will not allow themselves to be led into over-excitement and speculativeness on account of the one probably favourable fact of a shortness of crop, and be disposed to overlook the undoubted drawbacks in other directions — the general slackness of trade, the doubtful aspect of political affairs, and, above all, the severe lessons taught to the trade generally, and to speculators in particular, by the results of last year's operations. The opening of the Silk markets at unduly high prices cannot fail to injure the business of the whole season, and it is to be hoped, therefore, in the interests of sound trade, that this error will be avoided, as well as that of over-shipment at a given time. Last year, in the month of November, no less than 14,500 bales were brought to London alone, while an almost equal quantity went to the Continent. This, as any reasonable man could foresee, had the effect of breaking the market, and was the commencement of the state of affairs which in the end resulted so disastrously. With these plain facts before them, shippers in the East will do well to act with moderation, even if the final accounts from the Continent should, as is anticipated, show a prospect of a shortness of crop. Should this, however, not prove to be the case, the necessity for caution will, of course, be the more obvious.

CONSULAR REPORTS ON TRADE IN CHINA.

The Blue-book containing the reports upon the trade of Shanghai, Chinkiang and Kiungchow, for the year 1875-6, has been just issued. Although referring to a period now somewhat distant, these reports contain much information of a permanently valuable character. This is especially the case with that by Sir Walter Medhurst on Shanghai; and it cannot but be a matter of regret that so long a time has been allowed to to elapse before giving it to the public. Passing over the details of the imports and exports for 1875, which have now of course lost their interest, the first matter for notice in Sir W. Medhurst's report is his remarks upon opium. He states that despite the increase throughout all the provinces of China of the habit of opium-smoking, and which has for these previovs three or four years hindered any reduction of the import of the Indian drug, the large quantities that are now produced in Manchuria and Western China have very sensibly affected the trade. The greater number of the provinces now grow nearly sufficient opium to supply themselves, and considerable quantities of the native drug are brought to Shanghai, and sold at Tls. 260 to 270 a picul, that is about 85 per cent. cheaper than Indian opium. Consul Medhurst, upon these grounds, held it to be very doubtful whether the import of opium into China would ever again become a prosperous branch of commerce. At the same time the total imports into Hong Kong had not sensibly diminished, and this, in face of a diminution in the imports into the Northern ports, is attributed by him to an increase in the habit of opium-smoking in the Southern provinces.

Some very important observations are made in the report under notice as to the effects which have been produced by the opening of new ports. It is pointed out that however much the facilities for the distribution of manufactured goods may have been increased in opening up ports contiguous to the tea districts, buyers of produce have reaped no direct advantage. On the contrary, while in Shanghai the teamen were forced to meet the market and sell, the opening of the river ports gave them the advantage of a double market. They offered their teas to the foreign buyers established in Hankow and Kiukiang, with the power in reserve of withdrawing them and sending them on to Shanghai, should the price offered be insufficient. Meanwhile, the up-river buyers, loath to be themselves passed by, gave the extreme value, and in some instances representatives of local firms even competed with their principals in Shanghai for one and the same tea. It is too much to advance that the river ports have proved a failure; it might rather be asserted that such is the stationary condition of trade in China that the opening of a new port merely taps the circulation of an old port, developing nothing new. What is apparently wanted is not so much new marts to trade at, as the opening of new depots for our carrying trade, by which our steamers may carry the goods where they are wanted, without being obstructed by lekin barriers, and killed by taxation, which for long distances is almost prohibitory, and so gradually advancing the great desideratum of all connected with the foreign commerce of the country, "free transit."

Referring to the relative qualities of the Indian and China teas, and the fact of a large increase in the home consumption of non-China teas, Sir W. Medhurst finds it difficult to believe that the soil of China is worn out and incapable of producing a tea fit to compete with the produce of Assam; and considers the cause of the poor quality of late years lies rather in hasty preparation, with a view of bringing the teas early to market, and in the unsystematic way in which the different processes necessary to convert the raw leaf into the tea of commerce are carried out. Small proprietors, petty farmers to whom the cultivation of the tea plant is mostly a secondary object, grow 50 lbs. or 500 lbs. weight of leaf, and carry it off on their backs to that market in their neighbourhood which looks the most promising. Failing a satisfactory offer in one place, they even transport it to a second place, the unfired leaf spoiling fast meanwhile, by the unnecessary exposure to the air, and the prolonged interval between the picking and the firing. The packers themselves are simply speculators, mostly strangers in the district, who hire a house temporarily, and collect the leaf in little lots from the growers. Thus the leaf from the different districts is mixed; pure one-flavoured tea is scarce, and the packing lacks uniformity in all but defectiveness; if lead is dear it is eked out with stout paper; if wood is scarce it is planed so much thinner until chests containing 1 cwt. of tea are little better than band-boxes; hence the outside package splits, and the inside lead becomes rent and torn. These remarks apply equally to green tea, which is being supplanted by the Japan, as is congou tea by the Indian leaf. In Japan the tea is also packed by foreigners, although they do not own any plantations. It is evident from these facts that the lucrativeness of the tea trade to the growers in China is likely to end in its being supplanted by teas from other countries where more care is paid to packing and firing; and it would be advantageous both to the Chinese and to the European trader if some steps could be taken to make the growers and dealers in China aware of this fact betimes. Sir W. Medhurst justly observes that we have to look to India for the perfection of tea culture; there planting, picking, and firing, is all in one hand, and the needful capital outlay to produce a good result is not spared. In China these desiderata are absent altogether, and the proceeds are in the primitive and unscientific style dear to the natives of that country. Nothing, he holds, but the introduction of European capital and enterprise into the tea districts will save the foreign tea trade of China from decay. But had foreigners free access to the country, matters would be changed entirely; not only would the existing leaf be systematically packed, and not left at times to grow old on the shrubs, at times to spoil after picking, while the owner is haggling for the last cent, but many a barren hillside would be cleared of its jungle, and employment given to thousands of half-starved peasants. Sir W. Medhurst expresses an important opinion, coming as it does from so thoroughly experienced a source, to the effect that were permission given to foreigners to buy or rent land in the interior, a few well-ordered plantations would in time reform the Chinese methods by their example.

Referring to the matter of inland taxation, he states that, although it does not appear very heavy at first sight, it amounts on green tea at least to nearly double the export duty, or about three times the amount of transit tax as stipulated by the treaty He adds that the fact of the main tax being an excise tax renders nugatory the transit-passes which foreigners have at times taken out. The excise-tax the foreigner cannot reach while the taxes payable in transit amount to less than the cost of the pass, which is, as fixed by Treaty, 1·25 taels per picul, being one-half of the export duty. As the packing expenses in China are fully as high as in Japan and India ; the lead, for instance, owing to the enforced closing of the native mines, is all imported from abroad, and pays an import and a transit duty ; and as the cost of cultivation is equally small in all countries, the Chinaman, weighted with transit and export taxes, amounting in all to over 50 per cent. of the value of the raw leaf, must in time lose the race in competition with countries where the trade is either entirely free, as in India, or, as in Japan, burdened with only a nominal tax. These facts are so clearly set forth that it is impossible to believe that the Chinese will not take them into serious account. No doubt it may be difficult to impress them with their significance, as having until late years enjoyed a monopoly of the tea trade of the world, they naturally feel that their position is so strong that they need have little apprehension as to losing it.. But it is time they awakened from this pleasing dream if they desire to hold their own. So far as general interests are concerned, it is a subject of congratulation that we are no longer dependent upon one market for one of the great staple necessaries of modern life. The effects of this salutary competition have been already anticipated in many directions, but have never before been so clearly set forth as in the present report.

If, as we took occasion to notice last week, the spread of a taste for periodical literature is interfering with the publication of works of sterling merit, it must be admitted that the higher-class periodicals now give publicity to a large amount of writing, which would formerly have taken a more lasting shape. The magazines generally this month come well up to the average, and the Fortnightly is specially noticeable for weighty articles. It has one from Sir Henry Maine on the "Relics of the Feudal System in France and England before the French Revolution;" another from Mr. Goldwin Smith upon "Canada and the United States," advocating the annexation of our colony by the latter ; and an essay by Anthony Trollope on "Cicero's Political Character." The Contemporary has a translation of M. Rénan's Address at the Spinosa Commemoration ; and an extremely interesting article on "Spontaneous Generation," favouring the views of Dr. Bastian. The Cornhill has an able review of "Kingsley's Life," from the pen of Mr. Leslie Stephens ; and some excellent translations of Sicilian Folk Songs. Macmillan has an article on "Army Reform ;" a further communication on "Natural Religion," and a very beautiful little poem from the pen of Mr. Philip Marston, entitled "Beyond Reach." In Blackwood a writer, evidently well conversant with his subject, discusses the present condition of the French Army, and draws the conclusion that France is not ready now, and, indeed, does not seem likely ever to be ready, for an aggressive war. Fraser has a paper by Mr. G. Sinncox on the "Decay in the Present Day of Intellectual Societies;" and some excellent translations of the Popular Songs in Tuscany. In the Nineteenth Century appears a trenchant exposition, from the pen of Sir James Stephens, of Mr. Gladstone's misconceptions of Sir George Lewis's essay on the "Influence of Authority in Matters of Opinion." Belgravia contains an article entitled "Celestials under Stars and Stripes," by Mr. Joseph Hatton; and the Gentleman's Magazine has a "Slave Hunt in Borneo," by Fred. Boyle. The Quarterly for April contains a well written article upon the "Norman Conquest of England," and two weighty papers upon "Genesis" and "Science and Spinoza." In the National Quarterly Review, published in New York, we notice a valuable contribution on the "Science of Political Economy," which we understand to be from the pen of Mr. George A. Potter, who was formerly resident in China. The above American journal, which is of standard merit, will form a good addition to the libraries in the East, where there are so many American residents.

Mr. John Bourne has written to The Times calling attention, in reference to Chinese newspapers, to the Chinese Scientific Magazine, set on foot within the last year in Shanghai. This periodical, he says, has been established in connection with the Shanghai Reading-Rooms and Polytechnic, an establishment which owes its initiation chiefly to the exertions and influence of Sir Walter Medhurst, lately our Consul at Shanghai, and which is now energetically supported by several of the most influential Mandarins. The main object of this publication, Mr. Bourne says, is to instruct the Chinese in the sciences and arts of the West, and it has already attained a large circulation throughout the country.

The death is recorded of Charlotte Frances, wife of Dr. Samuel Birch, which took place at the British Museum, on Monday last, after a long illness of upwards of twenty years. She was the daughter of Samuel Frederick Gray, author of the "Supplement to the Pharmacopœia," and other medical and botanical works, and the sister of the late naturalists G. R. Gray, F.R.S., and Dr. J. Gray. She made various etchings for different zoological and chemical works.

It appears from a communication made to the German Parliament that 40,000 copies of the official history of the Franco-German War have been sold, and that the clear profits realised thus far, after paying the cost of printing and all other expenses, already amount to £15,000. This sum it is proposed to devote to the promotion of military science. Almost equally great has been the success of a work of a very different description. Of the German edition of Karl von Scherzer's "Novara Expedition" no less than 29,000 copies have been sold, and translations in Italian and English were published besides. The official account of this expedition fills twenty-one volumes, illustrated with 229 plates and maps. Their production cost £25,179, and the sales of the scientific portions of the work only yielded £3,824. About 400 copies were presented to learned societies and savants.

During 1876, says the Athenæum, 443 journals were published in Spain ; 95 were political, 65 religious, 78 literary, 105 scientific, artistic, and industrial, and 100 were miscellaneous. The Correspondancia de Espana has the largest circulation, having circulated during the last year nearly twenty-one millions of copies, besides about two millions of extra sheets (supplements.) Upwards of eleven millions of copies were sent to the provinces, whilst 9,700,000 were absorbed by Madrid. About 24,000 advertisements were inserted in the Correspondancia during 1876.

Meetings of Societies.

A special meeting of the British Archæological Association was held on the 11th inst., in the rooms of the Royal Institute of British Architects, under the presidency of Lord Houghton, when the diploma of honorary membership of the Association was presented to Dr. Schliemann. In the course of the evening Dr. Schliemann read a paper on "Troy, and its analogy to Mycenæ." Mr. Gladstone was prevented from attending the meeting through illness.

At the Geological Society, on March 21, Professor P. M. Duncan, President, in the chair, communications were read "On the Strata and their Fossil Contents between the Borrowdale Series of the North of England and the Coniston Flags," by Professor R. Harkness and Dr. H. Alleyne Nicholson, and "On a new Area of Upper Cambrian Rocks in South Shropshire, with the Description of a new Fauna," by Mr. C. Callaway.

At the Royal Society of Literature, on March 28, Sir P. de Colquhoun, Q.C., in the chair, Mr. Washington Moon read a paper "On the English Language."

At the Zoological Society, on March 20, Dr. E. Hamilton, V.P., in the chair, Mr. Sclater called attention to the fact that a two-horned rhinoceros had been killed in February, 1876, at a place some twenty miles south of Comillah, in Tipperah. This is the third recorded occurrence of a two-horned rhinoceros north of the Bay of Bengal.

At the Society of Arts, on April 4, E. Lawrence, Esq., in the chair, the paper read was "On the Pioneer Railway," by Mr. F. J. Rowan.

At the Photographic Society, on April 3, J. Glaisher, Esq., President, in the chair, a discussion took place on a paper by Mr. J. Spiller, "On the Silver Bath, its Defects and Restoration."

At the Anthropological Institute, on March 27, Colonel A. Lane Fox, V.P.. in the chair, an account of some Kitchen-middens near Ventnor, by Mr. Hodder M. Westropp, was read. A corn-crusher of Scandinavian appearance was found in one of them ; and, in another, higher up in the cliff, there was discovered a small cinerary urn of unusual shape, encircled with a pattern of coralline seaweed. Messrs. W. Power and E. Laws communicated a paper "On a Kitchen-midden near Tenby."

Dutch Arctic Expedition.—Associations and Committees are being formed in most of the large towns of the Netherlands with the object of "fitting out a suitable vessel for Nova Zembla and other stations of interest in the Arctic regions." The avowed aim of the Expedition is not the discovery of the Pole, but the erection of some unpretentious granite monuments to the memory of the glorious discoveries of the earlier Dutch navigators. About the end of the 17th century, "in the name and on behalf of the honourable Council of the renowned City of Amsterdam," Willem Barends set out on his third voyage, which ended in the explorer's wintering on Nova Zembla, whence he never returned. It is, above all, the memory of this Barends which the Dutch are about to honour. The costs of the expedition are to be defrayed by voluntary subscriptions, and the vessel will, in all probability, be commanded by a Dutch lieutenant who has taken part in three Arctic expeditions under the British flag.

Monetary and Commercial.

The dulness in the Produce Markets continues. In Tea a fair business has been done; but prices for common kinds have lost the slight advance which was made last week. The quantity offered on Thursday was less than the usual amount at the weekly sales. It may be noted that the price of 6½d. for good common Congou touched at these sales is the lowest figure yet recorded; and forms a striking illustration of the results of the over-production of leaf for the last few years, upon which there has been so much difference of opinion. The Board of Trade Returns indicate that consumption is not increasing, notwithstanding the low prices. The Silk market is unaltered, and fully as depressed as reported by last mail. We hear of a sale of "Red Peacock" at 19s.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week (five days, Easter Monday being excluded) was 3,298,633 lb., of which 2,071,105 lb. was for home consumption, 556,516 lb. was exported, 553,019 lb. was removed coastwise, 113,918 lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 4,075 lb. was for ship's stores. During the same period the duty received was £51,778. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn for home consumption during the week. Coffee, 572,940 lbs.; cocoa, 87,175 lbs.; tobacco, 413,946 lbs.; cigars, 16,172 lbs.; wine, 147,848 gallons; brandy, 36,509 gallons; and rum, 39,269 gallons.

Lord Derby has received a deputation from Coventry, Leicester, and other places, which drew attention to the depressed condition of the ribbon and silk trade, attributing it to the unfavourable operation of the French Treaty. His lordship pointed out to his hearers that when they were competing in the open market with Frenchmen they could not expect any special favour or protection from their own Government, and it was for them to see what they could do to put themselves on equal terms with their rivals. As to the high duties imposed upon English articles in the French market, that was a matter deserving consideration, and was within the reach of legislative remedies.

The returns of the traffic by the Suez Canal show that the quantities of cotton exported from Bombay by the Canal during the last four years were as follows:—1872-1873, 583,147 bales; 1873-1874, 653,791 bales; 1874-1875, 874,569 bales; and 1875-1876, 701,232 bales. The total exports of cotton during the four periods respectively, by the Canal and Cape of Good Hope, were 948,811 bales, 1,270,647, 1,322,904, and 1,014,396. Consequently, the proportion of the total sent by the Canal was 61½ per cent. in 1872-1873, 51½ per cent. in 1873-1874, 66 per cent. in 1874-1875, and 69 per cent. in 1875-1876. If the two extreme periods are compared—1872-1873 and 1875-1876—it is found that the exports to England increased from 456,074 bales to 470,100; to Austria from 76,248 to 91,358; to Italy from 22,932 bales to 37,631; and to France from 3,228 bales to 48,272; and from Russia, from none in the first of those years, and 19,588 bales in 1873-1874, to 43,969 in 1875-76. The augmentation in the four years was 3 per cent. for England, 19 per cent. for Austria, 64 per cent. for Italy, 124 per cent. (in two years) for Russia, and 1,400 per cent. for France. There was a diminution in the exports to Holland from 11,236 bales to 8,652, or 22 per cent.; Germany also received 13,429 bales in the first of those years and none in 1875-76; Spain, 6,230 bales, for the first time in 1874-1875, and none the following year; and Belgium, 1,150 bales, for the first time, in 1875-1876.

According to the report of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company (Limited) the gross earnings for the second half of 1876 were £110,523, and the working expenses £59,267, including £23,683 for repairs. After adding the surplus from the first half of the year £55,948 18s. 3d. remains, out of which two quarterly dividends of 1¼ per cent. (making 5 per cent. for 1876) are paid, leaving £6,011 8s. 3d. to be carried to reserve. The interruption of the Madras-Penang cable for seven months entailed, it is stated, serious loss, but the Rangoon-Penang cable, laid successfully on the 8th, provides an alternative route.

The Globe Telegraph and Trust Company (Limited) announce the payment on the 20th inst. of interim dividends for the quarter ending 18th inst. at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the preference shares and 4½ per cent. on the ordinary shares.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company will pay for the half-year ended 31st December last a dividend of £1 per share, being the same as for the corresponding period in 1875.

The annual report of the Australian Mortgage, Land, and Finance Company (Limited) shows a net profit of £54,348, including £5,271 brought forward. Of this amount the directors paid on the 4th November last an interim dividend of £10,000, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum; they have placed £20,000 to the credit of the reserve fund (which, with the £15,000 premium received from the issue of 10,000 new shares, now amounts to £85,000), and they propose to appropriate the balance as follows:—£12,500, in payment of a half-yearly dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, £6,250 in payment of a bonus of 2s. 6d. per share, and £5,598 to profit and loss new account.

The report of the directors of the London Bank of Mexico and South America (Limited) has just been issued for the half-year ending the 31st of December last. The directors are not only unable to declare any dividend, but have to confess a substantial loss. The profit of £11,862 as the result of the half-year's business will be required to meet losses in Peru, and will not be enough to cover them; the balance of £9,277 brought forward and the "Exchange reserve" of £13,074 being applied to the same purpose. From the balance-sheet, the bank appears to have about £807,000 at stake altogether on over drafts, and £514,000 on bills, while it is due on deposit and current account £769,000, on bills £307,000, and on notes issued in Mexico and Peru £362,000.

At the half-yearly meeting of the shareholders in the London and Delki Bank, held on the 11th inst., the report and accounts submitted were considered satisfactory and unanimously adopted, and a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum declared, which will be payable on the 20th inst.

The half-yearly report of the directors of the London Financial Society states that the liabilities are now reduced to £245,000 on debentures, of which sum £35,000 is not due until 1879, and the balance does not mature until 1880. Since the last report a sale of stock has been made, from proceeds of which a drawing of £35,000 debentures in anticipation of the amount due in the year 1878 was made, and bonds to that amount paid off. The entire estate and effects of the Alexandra Palace Company have been purchased, and become the sole property of the association for the sum of £390,000, together with sixteen acres of freehold building land, valued at and taken from the official liquidator for £18,000, making a total of £408,000.

At the adjourned half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Direct United States Cable Company, the accountant read the modifications which had been made in the accounts and adopted by the committee of investigation. The report of this committee stated that the board of directors had notified to them their intention to resign, and that negotiations with the Anglo Company had been re-opened and were now continuing. The motion for the adoption of this report was carried on a division and poll by a majority of 2,060 votes.

At a general court of the Bank of England, held on the 10th inst., Mr. Edward Howley Palmer (of the firm of Dent, Palmer, and Co.) was elected Governor, and Mr. John William Birch (of the firm of Mildred, Goyeneche, and Co.) Deputy-Governor, for the ensuing year.

The estate of Messrs. Thomas Vaughan and Co., Middlesborough, is offered for sale by private contract. The estate includes the gigantic ironworks at Clay-lane and those at Southbank, having together fourteen furnaces. Their affairs have for the past half-year or so been in the hands of trustees in liquidation, and the situation may be taken as indicative of the trade anticipations indulged in.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for the month of March have been issued, and they show a slight improvement in our export trade, while the increase in the imports, instead of being progressive, as of late, has fallen off, although the value of them has increased. The total value of British and Irish produce exported during the month was £16,920,930, against £17,739,101 in March 1876, showing a decrease of 4¾ per cent. The decrease compared with 1875, when the amount was £18,606,223, is 9 per cent. The total value of the imports for last month was £35,229,598, against £27,451,253 in March, 1876, showing an increase of 28 per cent., while the increase upon the total of £30,920,747 for 1875 is 13¾ per cent. The total value of the principal articles of Foreign and Colonial merchandise imported during the three months ended 31st March had been £99,071,417, against £91,905,097 in 1876, and £89,221,246 in 1875. The total exports in the three months were £10,721,087, against £5,548,675 in 1876, and £7,730,950 in 1875.

In the case of raw cotton we have increased our imports 85¼ per cent. in quantity and 73¾ per cent. in value; while we have exported 1½ per cent. more of cotton piece goods at only ½ per cent. less value. The export of cotton yarn is 12 per cent. less in quantity, and about 14 per cent. in value, which is a decided improvement. In flax, again, our imports for the month have increased as much as 122¾ per cent. in quantity, but only 91¾ per cent. in value; while our exports of the manufactured articles, linen yarn and linen piece goods, have diminished about 26 per cent. and 2¼ per cent. in quantity, and 22 per cent. and 4¾ per cent. in value respectively, showing in each case a better margin of profit. As regards wool, the imports show an increase of about 122 per cent. in both quantity and value, but we have exported woollen yarn at lower prices, the decrease being 15½ per cent. in quantity and 21½ per cent. in value; while the exports of woollen cloths have increased 4¾ per cent. in quantity and 1¾ per cent. in value. Worsted stuffs exported have decreased 26 per cent. in quantity and 27 per cent. in value. A greatly increased price has been paid for raw silk, the imports having increased 79 per cent. in quantity and as much as 139 per cent. in value. The export of coal, coke, &c., has increased 2¾ in quantity, but the value has diminished 7½ per cent. As regards iron and steel, the quantity exported shows an increase of 18 per cent., but the increase in value is only 4¾; while the quantity of iron and steel manufactures imported has increased 19 per cent., and the value increased as much as 28 per cent. Among articles of diet and general consumption imported we have had to pay more dearly for sugar, the increase in the value being 50½ per cent., against an increase of 15¼ per cent. in quantity; less for tea, the value having increased 27¾ per cent., and the quantity as much as 39½ per cent.; and for cocoa, rice, coffee, and tobacco higher prices have been paid; while wine, wood, and timber have been imported at reduced values.

The following is an extract from these Returns of the figures which refer to our export trade with China and the Far East:—

TEA.

Messrs. Lloyd and Cheshire's Circular says :—The depressed state of the market still continues, although we cannot quote any further decline in the value of common Black and Red leaf Congous. The large quantity of this class offering, both privately and by public auction, precludes the prospect of any important rise in value. Nearly 100,000 packages were disposed of by auction during the month of March, the bulk consisting of low Congous. Common Black leaf sells from 7¼d. to 8d. per lb.; and the grades above this (say from 8½d. to 10d.) offer exceptionally good value, prices being 2d. and 3d. per pound less than those ruling in the autumn of last year. Medium Monings show little alteration in value, and in fine to finest transactions are limited. A few parcels of Medium Moning have been taken for export. Common Red leaf brings 7¼d. to 8d., and good Sayunes and Ankois realise 9½d. to 11d., showing good value. Medium to fine Kaisows are not in over supply, and previous prices are maintained. Packlings have been in slight demand up to 1s. 8d. for export.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—There is no change to report in our market during the past week. The public sales without reserve continue on a large scale, the bulk of the Teas still consisting of common to fair black and red-leaf Congous, which have this week sold a shade easier. The better kinds of Tea only meet with a slow sale, but prices show no material alteration. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds : Siftings are inquired for ; common have sold from 6½d. to 7¼d. per lb., being rather easier prices ; fair to good common from 7½d. to 8½d. per lb. are also rather lower ; fair kinds sell at comparatively low prices at auction ; privately there is but little demand. Medium kinds show no change ; good to fine are in fair request. In Pak Lin kinds but little has been done. Black-leaf kinds : Common at 7½d. to 8d. per lb. show no alteration ; good common have sold at previous prices ; fair kinds have been saleable at the low range of prices recently established ; fair to good medium meet with a moderate inquiry ; good to fine are steady, the quantity offering being moderate ; in finest there has been no change. New make kinds : Good common are wanted at about 8d. per lb.; fair kinds from 9d. to 11d. per lb. are selling lower; in the good kinds but little has been done. Oolongs, except for price, are difficult of sale. Souchongs of common to good quality are in but little demand, but there is a moderate inquiry for fine kinds. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers : Common kinds have sold at about previous rates ; good to fine show no improvement. In Orange Pekoes there is but little doing. Foochow Capers remain as before. Orange Pekoes continue in request. Green Teas.—Good to fine kinds have sold at previous prices. Common to fair only realise low rates, especially for Young Hysons. The public sales have comprised 24,262 packages, the whole of which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

Home Consumption	2,541,290	...	2,276,063
Coastwise...	677,493	...	631,897
	3,974,823		3,448,016

The notice in our last issue of the Friday sales was not taken from the Circular of Mr. Lewin.

SILK.

The market continues very quiet, and prices of some descriptions show further symptoms of weakness. The deliveries are unsatisfactory, being from 1st to 11th inst. inclusive :—China, 462 bales ; Canton, 152 bales ; Japan, 191 bales ; Bengal, 35 bales ; total, 840 bales.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour, and Co.'s Lyons Circular, dated April 7, says :—The material fall which had taken place on Asiatic Silks, coupled with better political news, drew the attention of speculators, who effected at the beginning of the month important purchases in both raws and throwns. This event encouraged throwsters to come on the market, and a large business resulted, with an advance of f.4 to f.6 on the lowest point. It was expected that manufacturers would follow, but alleging bad news from markets of consumption, they took but an insignificant share in transactions, so that, instead of an enlarged activity the market became gradually quieter, and the greater part of the advance has already been lost. The future of the article depends now upon the importance of orders for the autumn season, which are usually placed in May and June, and the outturn of the European crop, which will soon attract the chief attention. Many people have very little confidence in reproduced seeds, both yellow and green, after last season's failure, and as to Japanese cards, opinions are most conflicting ; under such circumstances, the progress of the rearings will be watched with greater anxiety than usual.

COTTON.—Increased dulness has prevailed, and prices have continually given way. HIDES.—At the periodical public sales Thursday East India in the hair were in moderate supply. A very limited demand was experienced; no actual decline was established; prices were frequently the turn in favour of buyers. China were in unprecedentedly large supply. There was competition for most of them, and the bulk could probably have been cleared had sellers been disposed to meet the market. The portion sold shows a decline of ¼d. to ½d. per lb. on the average. Buffalo : Batavia were of common quality, and brought fair prices. Singapore were in fair demand at about previous rates. Of 35,395 China Ox and Cow offered 13,144 sold : Light average 9⅝ to 11½ lbs., 6d. to 6½d. ; heavy, average 15¾ to 21 lbs. 5¾d. to 6¾d. ; extra heavy, average 22⅜ to 26⅞ lbs. 6d. to 6¾d. ; Kips, average 5¾ to 7½ lbs. 6½d. to 8d. ; thirds, 4½d. to 5¼d. ; fourths 2½d. per lb. Towards the close sales have been somewhat restricted by the firmness of holders. Ten cargoes have been sold during the week, viz., the Corientes, 1,000 tons Rangoon, March-April shipment, at 9s. open charter. The Richmond, 750 tons old Moulmein, off coast, at 9s. 3d. MANCHESTER GOODS.

Nothing has occurred to relieve the dulness in this market. The almost complete abstinence of large buyers, coupled with the unfavourable advices regarding the aspect of the Eastern question, have caused the tone to be decidedly flat. With rare exceptions both spinners and manufacturers have been prepared to accept lower prices, but not to concede sufficiently to meet buyers' views. The transactions in both Yarns and Goods have consequently been quite of a retail character, and at irregular prices.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE MAIL SERVICE TO THE CAPE COLONIES.—The directors of the Union Steamship Company, in order to meet the constant demand for increased speed in performing the mailpacket service in which they are engaged, have just concluded a contract for the construction of another new steamer of about 3,000 tons burden and large engine-power. The great increase of power provided to this ship warrants the anticipation of a very high rate of speed, and she will be fitted with many modern appliances for safety and efficiency in navigation and the comfort of passengers. This is the second 3,000-ton steamship contracted for by the Union Company this year. The colonists at the Cape of Good Hope and Natal are to be congratulated on the possession of a mail-packet service more frequent in arrivals and departure, and more speedy in transit, than is possessed by any other British Colony, with the exception, perhaps, of Canada.

A VESSEL ATTACKED BY PIRATES.—The schooner James Nicholson, engaged in the African trade, was attacked recently by about 400 negro pirates when grounded on a shoal off Shark's Point, near the entrance of the Congo River. The marauders first offered to assist in getting the vessel off, but after getting on board took possession of her, driving the crew ashore. The captain returned next day with a force of Kroomen, when the pirates fled, after having gutted the ship, and carried off a portion of her cargo. The vessel afterwards caught fire and was burnt. Her Majesty's ship Avon, on duty off St. Paul, Loander, having heard of the outrage, proceeded to Shark's Point, and severely punished the perpetrators.

THE ATLANTIC STEAMSHIP TRADE.—It has been decided by four of the leading steamship companies at Liverpool that in consequence of the unexampled depression of commerce, a depression which shows no signs of termination, the sailings of their steamers shall be decreased by one half. The companies in question are the Guion, White Star, Inman, and National, and their steamers, which have of late been despatched every week, will now be despatched every fortnight. This arrangement will continue in force for three months, in the hope that at the termination of that period trade, both in England and America, will have undergone sufficient improvement to warrant a return to the weekly sailings.

THE Lothair, which left London on April 14, 1876, for Japan, took from there a cargo for New York, and arrived at Gravesend on the 7th inst. The Wylo also left London on April 14, for Shanghai, proceeded to Manila, and loaded for Boston, arriving at Gravesend on the 7th inst. Both vessels are in the employ of Messrs. Killick, Martin, and Co.

THE official opening of the Suez Freshwater Canal will take place on the 15th inst., but the opening for navigation is fixed for the 15th of August, when the Nile is high.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COUGHS, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex Army Med. Staff) CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other.

REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium.

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

EXTRACTS FROM MEDICAL OPINIONS.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.

None genuine without the word "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER
dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningsham, near Warminster, Wilts:—

"I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am 78 years old.

"Remaining, Gentlemen, yours very respectfully, "L. S."

To the Proprietors of
NORTON'S CAMOMILE PILLS, London.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1853 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Sir SAMUEL BAKER,

In his work on the Sources of the Nile, says:—

"I ordered my dragoman Mahomet to inform the "Faky that I was a doctor, and that I had the best "medicines at the service of the sick, with advice "gratis. In a short time I had many applicants, to "whom I served out a quantity of Holloway's Pills. "These are most useful to an explorer, as, possessing "unmistakable purgative properties, they create an "undeniable effect upon the patient, which satisfies "him of their value."

This fine Medicine cures all disorders of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys and Bowels, is a Great PURIFIER of the BLOOD, and wonderfully efficacious in all ailments incidental to Females—young or aged.

Summary of News from the Far East.

A somewhat alarming revolt among the Anhwei troops near Tientsin has occurred, and caused considerable excitement at that place. It appears that the whole of the men in camp, to the number of 9,000, had agreed to rise; but a premature movement disclosed the plot, and only 2,000 got away. These were pursued, defeated, and scattered. The Daily News correspondent, who gives a full account of the affair, considers that there is no ultimate danger to be apprehended beyond brigandage. It is reported that the Kestrel got on shore above Shasi, and that Mr. King and his companions had to go on to Ichang in a China boat. The famine-stricken districts in Shang tung continue in a deplorable condition. It is stated that the Chinese Government have not contributed more than about Tls. 40,000, or something like £12,000. It must, no doubt, be remembered that the local officials have done something in the matter of relief, but still the efforts scarcely appear to have been such as the calamitous state of affairs called for. The Shanghai Chamber of Commerce have passed a resolution expressing their views in favour of the establishment of an Imperial Mint in China. At Hong Kong a strike has been threatened among the cotton and yarn dealers, who declare they will not continue to do business in the Colony unless broken silver be taken in payment for goods. The reason for this step is said to be that banknotes have risen to a premium. Should this be the true version of the affair it will probably soon blow over; and the Chinese traders prove in this, as they have shown in many previous instances of a similar kind, that their bark is worse than their bite. The prospectus of a new Chinese Insurance Company, started entirely under Chinese auspices, has been issued. An extensive fire has taken place at Foochow.

From the Straits it is announced that Col. Anson had arrived at Singapore to assume the government, on the departure of Sir Wm. Jervois, fixed for the 2nd April. All was quiet at Perak, under Acting Sultan Yusuf and Mr. Maxwell as English Resident. Mr. Davidson comes home by the present mail. At a meeting of the Legislative Council on the 16th the Deportation and Emigrants Bills were advanced a stage.

The accounts which the Japan papers contain with reference to the rebellion still continue of a most conflicting character. The Herald states that reports appear daily in the native journals of fresh victories on the part of the Government forces, but strange to say, they do not seem to gain any ground. In fact, it appears evident that, at all events at its commencement, the task which the Government had before it was one of by no means an easy character, and that the struggle has been much more severe than has been admitted in official quarters. The Japan Mail gives currency to an extraordinary statement, which, if true, would appear to implicate some one high in position in the Government in an attempt to assassinate General Saigo. The accusation is one of so grave a character that it can hardly be supposed it has been put forward without due consideration of the weight of the testimony upon which it is founded; but in the very nature of the matter it is impossible to obtain reliable evidence, and it is perhaps to be regretted that such a statement has been published. The Tokio Times believed the results of the engagements which had taken place were favourable to the Imperial arms. The capital was quiet. It was generally believed there that General Miyoshi had died in the Hospital at Yamagata, from a wound which he received while fighting against the rebels at Takase. The Yokohama Chamber of Commerce have called attention to the state of the currency. One of the accomplices in the recent forgery of Hong Kong and Shanghai bank-notes has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment with hard labour. A valuable paper upon the Japanese Criminal Code has been read before the Yokohama Asiatic Society.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 6th March, and we have advices via San Francisco, six days later, viz., to the 12th March. The French mail from London, Jan. 12, arrived out on the 3rd March, and the following French mail of Jan. 19 was received on the 8th March.

The events connected with the rebellion were, as is to be expected, the chief subject of public interest at the above place. The papers are full of surmises, but it is evident that the information obtainable from day to day could be little relied upon. The Mikado was still remaining at Kioto, which was in point of fact regarded as the seat of Government for the time being.

An extraordinary statement is made by the Japan Mail of the 18th March, based upon a letter received from a "gentleman who has had every opportunity of closely observing the circumstances connected with the present outbreak in Satsuma." This authority states :—"There has been a great outpouring of men from Kagoshima. Fifteen thousand have left; the last batch on the 17th (of February). They propose marching on Tokio. It was perfectly marvellous how the province sprang to arms. The story told to me is that a number of Satsuma men in the Tokio police had been sent down here for the purpose of assassinating the principal men in Satsuma—especially Saigo—and of setting fire to Kagoshima. The plot was discovered, and fifty or sixty arrests were made. Some of the confessions were certainly startling. The men have been kept in closest custody, to be confronted with their employers in Yeddo. It is generally thought that many of the Tokio soldiery will refuse to fight against Saigo. He is certainly a man of great ability in many ways." Reverting to this matter, the Mail says that it has received direct from a Japanese friend in Kagoshima the original documents containing the full confessions of the assassins employed to murder Saigo, and adds that the authenticity of the documents is beyond question.

The Japan Mail publishes the Return of the Foreign Commerce and Trade of the Empire of Japan for the half fiscal year ended December 31, 1876. The following table shows the total value of foreign and domestic productions imported into and exported from each of the various foreign countries :—

This is a result widely different from that of usual returns, and one of which the country may well be proud.

The Treasure imported has amounted to ...	yen	6,886,183
do. exported...	"	3,434,343
Excess of import...	"	3,451,840

It would appear that for this period, at least, there has been no drain of Japanese treasure from the country; but it must be borne in mind that this is attributable to the exceptional result of the silk export, which has amounted to nearly fifteen millions of yen, including eggs and cocoons.

The Danish Consular Court has passed sentence upon "Anton Bennett," whose real name is Julius Hakon Kirchoff, one of the men convicted of issuing forged Hong Kong and Shanghai bank-notes. The judgment sets forth that though not uttering the notes himself the prisoner aided others to do so; and that though he became aware of the fraud soon after he commenced to counterfeit the notes, he had not the intention to defraud when first he began the work; and, further, that he was not the originator of the crime; and taking all these circumstances into consideration, the Court sentenced him to a year's imprisonment, the shortest term provided in the sections applying to the case.

The annual general meeting of the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce took place on the 2nd March. The report stated that few matters of special importance had occurred during the past year. With respect to the drawback question, it stated that it seems impossible to make any further move at present towards obtaining this desirable concession, and during the year it has appeared to the Committee of no advantage to again press the attention of the Ministers to the matter. The state of the currency was discussed at the meeting, and it was decided that the subject should be brought forward again at an adjourned meeting a month later.

At a meeting of the Asiatic Society of Japan a valuable paper on the Japanese Penal Code was read by Mr. Longford.

On the 6th March a meeting was held at the Grand Hotel to consider the opportunity of establishing a Volunteer Corps in Yokohama, and was very numerously attended. Mr. Keswick took the chair, and explained the object of convening the meeting. He was of opinion that a trained and armed Volunteer Corps might be useful in many an emergency, and referred to Shanghai, where the foreign settlement had for a long time derived great comfort from its efficient Volunteer Brigade. The duty of a Volunteer Corps would be not only to fight, it would generally act as guardian of order and property, for instance, in case of fires. At all events it could do no harm, and as it might be got up with very little trouble and expense, it was well worth trying. These views were fully endorsed by those present, and a committee, consisting of General Van Buren, Messrs. T. Brewer, Eldridge, Geogehan, Keswick, Kraetzer, and Zappe, was appointed. For some reason, however, the Japanese Governor has objected to such a scheme, and the farther progress of the matter was rendered uncertain.

The Japan Mail understands that the agreement between the Machigaisho and the Gas Committee for lighting the streets of the Settlement had at length been prepared, and would shortly be circulated among the residents for signature, and, apparently on the principle that gratitude is the hope of favours to come, goes on to say that now that the lighting of the streets is to a certain extent settled, the question of watering them during the approaching summer claims attention.

March 3rd.

To the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, to be circulated to the Hóchi Shimbun, Akébono Shimbun, Yomiuri Shimbun, &c., &c.

Since the commencement of the Kagoshima affair until to-day, you have in every issue published nothing but false statements, thereby deluding the people. This is contrary to the object of newspapers, and is a heinous crime. You had better mark your heads with a "star" and await the approach of the sword of justice. It will then be too late for repentance. You are hereby warned of the above. * * * *

P.S.—If you have any answer to make to this, publish the original in your paper as a heading to your remarks. If you do not, be prepared for the consequences.

A private letter from this port says :—Trade here is miserably depressed. Home property has fallen in value enormously, and rents are 50 per cent. lower than three years ago. The old P. and O. steamer Behar, now the Niigata Maru, is just leaving for England with a cargo of rice. Her machinery has been taken out, and she is a splendid sailing vessel. This will be the first ship to London under the Japanese flag; Captain Walker is her commander. We are likely to lose our excellent Chaplain, who has resigned, intending to take up missionary work; we shall miss him very much, as he is a splendid preacher. We are now looking out for his successor, but our funds do not admit of more than $200 per month and parsonage free of rent.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The Hiogo News was requested to make public that a picket of Japanese soldiers would patrol the Foreign Settlement, from sunset to sunrise, until further notice, and as a precautionary measure only. From the above paper we take the following :—

Authentic news from the South continues to come in but slowly, and those European generals who regard with aversion anything in the nature of a newspaper correspondent would envy the completeness with which the Government here succeeds in keeping all operations in the field secret. The Taihei-maru, the Mitsubishi steamer which was impounded at Kagoshima when she arrived there from the Loo Choos, has arrived in Kobe, but has not very much to tell. She arrived at Kagoshima on the evening of the 8th instant, with a cargo of sugar, and soon after anchoring was boarded by some 200 armed men, who took possession of the ship and would allow no communication with the shore. They gradually in a few days went, their place being taken by some policemen, who also returned on shore. On the morning of the 19th, Captain Hubenet got on shore, found Kagoshima apparently almost deserted by the male sex, and was told that every male down to the age of fourteen had been pressed to march North. He was told 14,000 men—or men and boys—had left in the course of the 14th, 15th, and 16th. The foreigners in Kagoshima had been kept under strict surveillance, but were otherwise well-treated. Mr. Satow, of the British Legation, had been one of them, but had been able to leave overland for Nagasaki on the 18th. Fresh food had been sent on board the Taihei-Maru, and as there was no apparent reason why she should be compelled to stay any longer, she got up steam on the 19th and came away, without being interfered with. A friend informs us that a Japanese in Kobe has received a private letter from Kagoshima which incidentally confirms the deserted state of that town, and adds that the rebels goaded the population to march with blows and threats.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

The North China Daily News Correspondent writing under date of Feb. 23, says :—

Tientsin and the surrounding country was thrown into a great state of excitement on the 16th inst., by rumours that a large number of the southern troops, stationed at or near Hain Ch'eng, had mutinied, killed one of their officers, and were then roaming at large, and might perhaps be marching on Tientsin. The excitement was increased through fear that they might be joined by the southern troope—about 3,000 strong—stationed in camps near Tientsin. As the danger is past, and the excitement has subsided, I will endeavour to state briefly the circumstances of the mutiny, and the subsequent events.

About six miles south of Hsin Ch'eng—a large fortification situated a few miles from the mouth of the Pei Ho—and twenty-five miles S.E. of this place, is the encampment of Hsiao Chan. About 9,000 southern troops were stationed there in a number of small barracks. There has been much dissatisfaction among them because of the hard work required of them in digging canals, building forts, and cultivating the ground, in addition to military duties, and because of their small pay, on which there was the mark of shrinkage when it reached their hands. For this latter grievance, General Chou, the commandant at Hsin Ch'eng, who is said to have amassed a fortune while holding the post, is mainly held responsible ; and, consequently, for the mutiny also.

It was, therefore, arranged, that there should be a general rising on the 15th February, at midnight, when their officers were asleep ; but on account of some of the companies anticipating the time by three or four hours, the movement became known, and the officers in charge of the other barracks, by promptly closing and guarding the gates themselves, were able to restrain their men. In some cases, Gatling guns were planted in front of the gates, which were opened with effect on the mutineers as they approached. Thus only about 2,000 accomplished the purpose of the entire body, and as they were prevented from reaching the magazines, they have but a few rounds for their Snider rifles, which are therefore comparatively useless.

It is stated that had these insurgents marched direct upon Tientsin, they would have been self-announced, and the place at their mercy ; for it was over thirty-six hours before it was known here what had transpired twenty-five miles away. The Settlement would also have been in great danger. And had the entire body of 10,000 or 12,000 succeeded in carrying out their project, who can tell what might have been the fateful end ? As it is, no harm has come to any one, but the facts furnish a suggestive commentary on the refusal of U.S. Admiral Reynolds to leave a gunbont here during the winter, for the reason that Governor Li would take care of us, although we were alike cut off from flight and help in a sudden emergency such as this might easily have become.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 9th March ; the P. and O. mail from London Jan. 19 was received on the 5th March.

The annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce has been held, and several subjects of interest were discussed. Among other matters disposed of a draft letter to the foreign Ministers at Peking, asking their aid in endeavouring to persuade the Chinese Government to establish a Mint, was approved ; and the report of the special committee appointed at the last general meeting to consider the subject of trade grievances was accepted. The Chairman, Mr. J. G. Purdon, in his speech stated, in reference to the Mint question, that the committee had taken a great deal of pains and trouble to get up all the statistics and data they could upon which to base their information for the Ministers. Besides getting information regarding the cost of erection and carrying on of Mints at Calcutta, Japan and Hong Kong, we have addressed some of the Chambers of Commerce to obtain their views on the subject. Among others we paid the compliment to the Hong Kong Chamber, which, however, seemed to think it was undesirable to make any recommendation whatever in the matter. He thought some of the arguments advanced by their friends at Hong Kong were not very happy. One of the speakers made the very wonderful discovery, which he seemed to think was only known to bankers, that a coinage that could be relied upon for its purity was a very desirable thing, and the Chairman—he did not know why—looked upon the communication, which stated plainly its purpose upon the subject of a Mint, as a "pumping" question ! He thought such arguments could be left to answer themselves. All, he thought, would agree on the desirableness of having a Mint and a regular and uniform coinage, but a great many seemed to have the feeling that there would not be any security as to its efficiency and purity as regards the silver if left altogether in the hands of the Chinese, but there was no reason why it should not be placed under the protection and working of foreigners, as many other institutions in China were. The Chinese Government now have this subject of the establishment of a Mint under consideration, and they appear favourably disposed to it ; and it would be a very great pity indeed if this Chamber were to throw cold water, as it were, on the scheme, by appearing to regard with perfect indifference whether a Mint be established or not. What the Committee of the Chamber proposed to do was to send this memorial to the Ministers at Peking, soliciting their opinion upon the general question, and upon the prospect of the scheme being favourably entertained by the native authorities.

Messrs. Bell, Forbes, Gubbay, Hennequin, Holliday, Hubbe, Johnson, Lavers, Wetmore and Wood were elected as a Committee for the coming year.

There was a good attendance at the annual meeting of ratepayers, which took place on the 6th March. Considerable discussion took place on a proposal to introduce the principle of the Contagious Diseases Acts, which was accepted by a large majority. The Council were authorised to raise Tls. 24,500 by debentures for the purposes of buying a site and building a police-station in Hongkew, but this was merely a renewal of power taken last year, which was not availed of. A further loan of Tls. 10,000 for widening roads, if required, was also authorised. A special grant of Tls. 250 to the Museum was sanctioned. The most important question that came before the meeting for discussion was whether vessels should be allowed to moor alongside the Bund for the purposes of landing and discharging cargo. This question has been decided in the affirmative, and the result will probably be that ere long the promenade on the Bund will be a thing of the past, and vessels will be found alongside it just as they are along the west-end of the Praya at Hong Kong. Messrs. Bell, Glover, Krauss and Lavers were elected Trustees of the Hospital for the ensuing year.

We take the following from the North China Herald :—

Two fatal accidents have occurred on sailing vessels moored at the Hongkew Wharf. A native, while assisting in discharging some wire rope from the fore hatch of the Omba, overbalanced himself, and fell down the hatchway. He was picked up insensible, and removed with all promptitude to the Hongkew Native Hospital, where, on examination, it was found that he was dead, his neck having been broken. Another native was heaving at the winch on the house of the John R. Worcester, from which coals were being discharged, when the fore guy gave way, and fell on his head, inflicting injuries which resulted in his death on the following day at the hospital, whither he was conveyed immediately after the accident.

The Fungshun was the first steamer from this port to arrive at Tientsin. She entered the Peiho river on the afternoon of the 1st inst., following in the track of the Conquest, from Nagasaki, with a cargo of coals. The Conquest was fast in the ice about three miles up, and the Fungshun, after sticking for a short time alongside her, had to break her own way. She passed the German gunboat Cyclops bound down, and arrived at Tientsin at five A.M. on the 2nd. The Haining arrived the same day, having been unfortunate in grounding on the bar ; and the ice had cut a small hole in her side just about the water line. The Conquest is also said to be damaged. On her return passage the Fungshun passed the Appin and Taku in the river, on the morning of the 3rd. Three of the C. C. S. N. Co.'s steamers would therefore be among the first four arrivals, the Fungshun belonging to the China Merchants' Company.

The Russian corvette Haydamack has left for San Francisco. It will be remembered that she left Hong Kong in October to join the other Russian vessels ordered to the Pacific, but encountering a heavy gale off the Bonin Islands she was deprived of her masts, and narrowly escaped being a total wreck. Her supply of coal becoming exhausted, she procured jury-masts from one of the Bonin Islands, and under these managed to reach Japan, where she obtained coal and then came here to be repaired.

There is now moored at the Hongkew Wharf the Russian schooner Aleut, of only 32 tons register, American measurement, which has arrived with a cargo of coals from Nagasaki. She left San Francisco about two years ago, made a favourable passage across the Pacific, and has, in the meantime, been engaged in seal hunting around the Korean Islands. Her smallness for a Pacific passage has excited some curiosity, and several persons have been to the wharf to see her. She is manned with the small crew of five hands, and belongs to her commander.

FOOCHOW.

The China Mail gives the following account of an extensive fire at the above-named place :—

We learn that early on the morning of the 3rd March a fire broke out in Foochow, near the Oriental Bank, and destroyed some hundreds of Chinese houses. No foreign property was destroyed, but it was fully expected once or twice that the fire would attack some of the foreign houses. The fire raged in the group of Chinese houses in the hollow bounded by Olyphant's House, the premises of the Oriental Bank, Russell's, Heard's, Adamson and Bell's and Olyphant's offices. At one period the fire was in dangerous proximity to the building occupied by the Oriental Bank, and at another time it looked as if nothing could save Adamson's place. Fortunately, however, it was a perfectly calm night, and the mandarins and their soldiers are said to have worked in a manner truly wonderful for them.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 15th March ; the French mail from London Jan. 26 arrived out on the 8th March, and the following P. and O. mail of Feb. 2 was received on the 8th March.

Another of the trade combinations among the Chinese which have so frequently caused trouble is reported to be likely to arise in the Colony. The China Mail states that the dealers in Cotton and Yarn have unanimously resolved to cease trading in Hong Kong unless broken silver, like that produced in evidence at the last Sessions of the Supreme Court, be accepted by the Banks as the currency of the place. It adds that this looks like another "Hoppo dodge" to draw the trade away from the Colony ; but that the time has not yet come for the agents of the ocean steamer companies to send their craft up to Canton to discharge. It seems that the immediate cause for this resolution is that bank-notes are at a high premium—as high, it is believed, as $13 per mille. The premium had gradually risen since the Chinese New Year. The native dealers had therefore, according to their ideas, some cause for complaint. They asserted that when silver was paid into the banks the manipulation of the scales at the banks invariably brought them in losers in weight unless they tender clean dollars and as clean dollars are a scarce commodity, it naturally follows that bank-notes should be at a premium.

Consequent upon Sir Arthur Kennedy's departure, a large number of changes have taken place in the appointments under the local government, and in addition to those in the civil departments several are pending or have taken place in the clerical ranks. On the departure of the Rev. R. Hayward Kidd (colonial chaplain) on leave, it is understood that the Rev. Mr. Davys will obtain the acting appointment. Rev. W H. Baynes (seamen's and acting military chaplain) leaves for home by the Himalaya, and his duties will be performed by Rev. J. S. Ladds and Mr. Davys, the former becoming seamen's chaplain pro tem., and the latter acting as military chaplain, in addition to his other duties.

The China Mail gives the following items of general intelligence :—

We understand that the price of salt is higher now in the Colony than it has been hitherto. The reason given is that smuggling in this article has been looked after with greater vigilance. From what we can learn, the smugglers took advantage of the period at which the Chinese officials closed their seals of office, during the New Year holidays, and managed to clear a profit of some $10,000 out of a capital of about $3,000. There is no doubt that a great deal of smuggling is going on, and the Salt Commissioner has built special cruisers to put it down. The Chun Tung, commanded by Admiral Li, is one of these craft. He has succeeded in capturing several smugglers, but liberated them all on their promising to "sin no more." The salt seized, however, was forfeited.

We have seen the prospectus of a new Chinese Insurance Company, that is, a company started under entirely Chinese auspices. It is to be called On Tai, and is to have a capital of Tls. 400,000, divided into 2,000 shares of Tls. 200 each, of which Tls. 100 are to be paid up in one instalment, bearing interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The promoters base their hopes of success on the fact of the Marine Insurance Office attached to the Chinese Merchants Steamship Company having had to open a new office within seven months of its establishment, owing to the requirements of Chinese insurers being so great.

The following is a list of the naval and military officers and troops who departed in the Himalaya on the 3rd inst.:—Royal Navy : Commander W. Stewart ; Lieutenants R. O. Webb, W. T. Clark, J. Philips, H. B. Anson, E. A. Bolitho, and G. E. Harrison ; Sub-Lieutenants James G. Towling and Charles E. Baxter ; Surgeons A. C. Queely, James Simons, R. A. Brereton, and W. C. Sandys ; Assistant-Paymasters C. Jeffreys, Thomas Guard, and W. A. Harvey ; Engineers B. Kelly, G. E Bascombe, Stephen Sheldon, O. Tollenham, and E. J. Haysman ; Assistant-Engineers Richard J. Hamm and H. T. Walton ; Midshipman Charles S. Smith ; Gunner Philip Cox ; Boatswains William Cousins, B. Crowther, and J. A. Mahoney ; Carpenter Henry Dye ; 172 petty-officers and seamen and 40 marines. Military : Sub-Lieutenant Clark (to join his regiment in Ceylon) ; Surgeon-Major Wilson ; Royal Artillery : Sergeant Betts and 2 children, 1 gunner and 6 children ; H. M. 28th Regiment : Sergeants T. Stait and Comston, 8 men, and 5 women. Army Hospital Corps : Colour-Sergeant Fone, wife and children ; Colour-Sergeant Walton, wife and children.

The following account of the average amount of bank-notes in circulation in Hong Kong during the month ending 28th Feb., is published in the local Government Gazette :—

Banks.	Average Amount.
Oriental Bank	$292,670
Chartered Mercantile Bank	732,167
Chartered Bank	446,791
Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank ...	1,554, 877
Total	$3,026,505

We learn from Hoihow that the Revenue cruiser Feihoo (Captain Cocker) left that port for Pakhoi on the evening of the 9th March, having on board Mr. McKean (the Commissioner appointed to the new port), for the purpose of establishing the Foreign Customs-office there. Mr. Stuhlmann succeeds Mr. McKean, and is now in charge at Hoihow. The Feihoo, it appears, had the good fortune to save the lives of two Chinese junkmen on her passage down to Hoihow from this port. When between Nowchow and Hoihow, the two castaways were found clinging to a swamped junk which had capsized some nine hours previously, the rest of the crew having been drowned. The two poor fellows were taken on board, and having been fed, rigged up in dry clothes, and provided with a few dollars each, were landed at Hoihow—quite ready, we expect, to be capsized and picked up regularly once a-week on the same favourable terms. Captain Cocker has been deputed to survey Pakhoi and its neighbourhood, and the Feihoo will not therefore return to this port until about the middle of April. The port, we understand, will be formally opened on the 1st April.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 22nd March ; the P. and O. mail from London Feb. 16 was received on the 19th March. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times :—

H.E. Sir William Jervois leaves for Australia by the Normanby on the 2nd April. Lady Jervois and daughters, with Captain Paton, A.D.C., will leave for Europe by the French mail steamer on the 29th inst. In view of their departure a public meeting was held in the Exchange on the 16th—the Hon. W. H. Read in the chair– to consider what should be done to acknowledge in a fitting manner the cordial and friendly interest H.E. the Governor, Lady Jervois, and daughters have always taken in social matters, and a committee was appointed to carry out the wishes of the community.

From the 17th to the 20th H.E. the Governor, Lady Jervois, daughters, and suite were the guests of H.H. the Maharajah of Johore at the Istana, Johore, and on the 19th his Highness gave a breakfast in honour of his Excellency and family, to which a large number of the residents of Singapore were invited, and about eighty guests sat down to table. There were no speeches made. Among the guests on the occasion was Mr. Brassy, M.P., who arrived here from Hong Kong on his cruise round the world in his yacht the Sunbeam, on the 17th, and left Johore homeward bound after the Maharajah's breakfast party.

The Hon. Col. Anson arrived from Penang by the P. and O. mail steamer on the 19th.

It has been officially notified in the Gazette that the Straits Settlements join the Postal Union on the 1st April, when postage on letters will be reduced to twelve and sixteen cents via Marseilles or Southampton and Brindisi, and on newspapers to two and four cents.

The new steamer Loudon Castle arrived here on the morning of the 11th March, and anticipated the French mail by bringing the Times of the 9th February. She made the voyage in the unprecedentedly quick time of twenty-eight steaming days, in spite of some adverse weather, and she will, most probably, be the first steamer home with new teas.

Mr. J. G. Davidson, late British resident in Perak, arrived here from Perak on the 12th March, and leaves for home to recruit his health. It is Mr. Davidson's intention, we believe, to return here, and resume his practice at the Bar. In Mr. Davidson the Colonial-office has lost the services of a man who inspired respect and confidence here and in the native States, and whom it would have been wise to retain.

All is quiet in the Peninsula. Sultan Abdullah of Perak and his principal advisers are quietly residing here on due allowances, awaiting the deliverance of the Colonial-office in their case, with what patience they may, while ex-Sultan Ismail continues to lead the life of a philosopher with his family in Johore territory. Sultan Abdullah's eldest sons, Rajahs Mansor and Chulan, have been brought here to be properly educated for any position they may be called upon hereafter to fill. Meantime, the government of Perak is administered by the Rajah Muda Yusuf, under the advice of the acting Resident, Mr. W. E. Maxwell. All the troops have been withdrawn from Perak, except two companies, who will be removed shortly. The troops have been replaced by a police force, 500 strong, and a Resident's guard, 200 strong, all organised by an experienced military officer.

The only vessel of H.M. navy stationed here for some time back has been the Magpie, but H.M.S. Growler has arrived from China.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council Mr. Adamson presented a petition, signed by all the advocates and attorneys of the Colony, praying for reform in the judicial establishment. A statement showing the financial condition of Sunghie Ujong, Salangore, and Perak was laid on the table. The Hon. W. Adamson made a speech explaining his qualified support of the Chinese Immigrants Bill. Progress was made in Committee with the Immigrants Bill, the Crimping Bill, and the Loan Bill, and a Bill making more summary and stringent the deportation clause of the Peace Preservation Ordinance, 1872, was introduced by the Attorney-General. On the 13th inst. a petition from Mohammedan residents, praying for the appointment of a Mohammedan Registrar was laid upon the table; further progress was made with the Chinese Immigrants Bill, and the Loan Bill was read a third time and passed. On the 16th the Crimping Bill was put through committee; the Hon. J. R. MacArthur opposed the Deportation Bill as unnecessary and unconstitutional, and was replied to by the Colonial Secretary and the Attorney-General, and the Bill was read a second time. At the next meeting of Council the Chinese Immigrants Bill, the Crimping Bill, and the Deportation Bill will probably be passed, and the Council will adjourn sine die. The last two measures are viewed with general approval, but the first with equally general dislike.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Notwithstanding the continuance of the insurrectionary movement the dulness prevailing at the date of last report had been succeeded by a more general inquiry, and owing to an improvement in the value of native currency dealers showed rather more disposition to purchase at the low rates ruling. For Yarns the demand had been chiefly confined to medium qualities of 16/24, at a slight improvement, and Shirtings had been more saleable. Indigo Shirtings and Velvets had attracted some attention, but Turkey Reds and Prints were very dull. In Woollens there was more demand for Plain Lustres and Mousselines, but otherwise the inquiry was very limited. Metals were very quiet, and the business done had been unimportant.

NAGASAKI.—Business had been extremely limited in extent, but prices had undergone no material alteration. Grey Shirtings 8¼ lbs. were quoted $2; 7 lbs., $1.75; T-Cloths 7 lbs., $1.65; Turkey Reds 2¾ lbs., $2; Assorted Camlets, $15; Long Ells, Red, 12 lbs., $8.75.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Cornabe and Co.'s Circular says:—Owing to the intervention of the Chinese New Year holidays scarcely any business has been transacted. Deplorable accounts continue to be received from the interior regarding the misery to which the population has been reduced through famine, and we can scarcely look for much or any improvement in business until after the spring crops are harvested. The weather so far has been very favourable for the cereals now in the ground, and with a continuance of same we may look for an abundant harvest, which will have the effect of stimulating the now lagging business of the port. The quotations for Cotton Goods are quite nominal. Metals: Both Iron and Lead are saleable, but the inquiry is not very strong.

SHANGHAI.—A few orders had been filled by the river up-dealers, who had been offering for Camlets and Scarlet long Ells, with but partial success. They had been carefully regulating their prices by those current at the auctions, but holders of the special chops and colours wanted preferred saving rates for their goods, which current offers would not give.

FOOCHOW.—500 pieces 8¼-lbs. Grey Shirtings had been sold at $2.65 per piece. Lead was not in request, and business generally in imports was very quiet.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Yarns: A moderate business has been transacted and prices in some cases have ruled easier, but at the close a better feeling is apparent, and former values are expected to be maintained. Piece Goods: Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths have been in moderate request, and common and good White Shirtings have been fairly taken at a slight improvement. English Drills hardly command former figures. Some few hundred pieces of American Drills have been priced at $6 per piece, but the demand is not active, and no large sales could be made at this figure. These are the first American Cotton Goods that have been sold on this market for several years, and as dealers are uncertain as to their reception in the markets in the interior, they appear to be purchasing a few bales at a time as trial shipments. The same feeling exists with regard to American Sheetings, a few small lots of which have been quitted at $3.25 per piece. Woollens: A small business has been passing in most fabrics, but no special change in values is quoted. Camlets are moderately inquired for, and good Blankets are readily saleable. Metals: Hard Tin Plates are in demand, but soft kinds are not wanted at present. Lead is in rather better request, but rates are irregular. Some business has been done in Yellow Metal at about last values. Speculative sales of Quicksilver have been made to arrive, but the price has undergone no material alteration; the present stock is estimated to be 8,000 to 10,000 flasks. Coals: The sales have been 4,013 tons of Cardiff at 42s. to 44s., to arrive; 5,300 tons of Australian at $9.25 to 8, principally to arrive; and 250 tons of Formosa at $6.50 per ton ex godown. The value of Cardiff is maintained, but Australian kinds have been freely offered for arrival at lower rates.

CANTON.—There had been very little business transacted during the fortnight. Imports were not in request. Lead was a little firmer, and trifling lots had been sold at a slight advance on last mail's figures. W.B. at $8.30 to 8.35, and L.B. at S8.25 to 8.30 per picul. Sales 500 piculs; stock 700 piculs. Quicksilver was worth $67 to 68 per picul.

SINGAPORE.—A moderate business had been done in Cotton Goods, there had been little improvement in values although the fall in exchange was greatly against importers. The sales reported are 15,000 pieces Grey Shirtings, 71,000 pieces of T-Cloths, 18,500 pieces of Grey supers, 21,000 pieces White Shirtings, 11,200 pieces White Cambrics, 3,900 pieces T. R. Cambrics, 128 bales of Grey Yarns, 33 bales T. R. Yarns and 42 bales of Coloury Yarns.

PENANG.—A moderate business had been done at the previously ruling prices. At the close, owing to a sudden collapse in sterling exchange, importers were asking an advance, which dealers in the meantime refused to pay. Grey Shirtings: Small sales of 6lbs. at $30, 7lbs. at $32, 8¼lbs. at $35 to $43, according to quality, and of 45-inch 9lbs. at $45 to $46. Grey Supers: Limited sales of 5lbs. at $35, and 5½lbs. at $38½ to $39. Grey Madapollams: No inquiry. Grey T-Cloths: 6lbs. and 7lbs. in moderate request, and placed at $24½ to $25, and $28 to $30 respectively. A sale of 7lbs. Mexicans at $32. Grey Yarns: Small sales of 40's at $103, and 30's at $85. Woollens were very dull, and no transactions had occurred. Coals: The cargo of Cardiff, ex Jungfrau, 460 tons, had been sold at $7 ex ship.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Settlements had continued on the same insignificant scale previously reported, and the business of the fortnight had presented no feature of interest. The P.M.S. City of Peking, despatched on the 28th Feb., carried from this port 226,199 lbs., viz., 108,151 lbs. for New York; 68,583 lbs. for San Francisco; 21,190 lbs. for Boston; 13,466 lbs. for Chicago; 14,809 lbs. for Montreal. The destruction by fire, at Hiogo, of a considerable portion of the cargo intended for the Coulnakyle would probably somewhat delay that vessel's departure. From present appearances, the total export from this port, for the season, would fall short of last year's shipments by nearly 2,500,000 lbs. Total export 1st May to date, 15,433,316 lbs., against 18,181,339 lbs. and 15,807,216 lbs. in the corresponding periods of the two preceding seasons.

NAGASAKI.—The market exhibited no alteration. The export to 1st Feb. had amounted to 2,450,204 lbs., including 633,662 lbs. to England. Quotations: Common to medium, $6 to $8; medium to fine, $9 to $14.

SHANGHAI.—Black: A very small business is reported for the interval, without any change to note in prices. Settlements 1,201 chests Hohow at Tls. 12¼ to 18½. Stock: 10,497 chests. Green: An extensive business, principally in Teenkais and Moyunes, had taken place during the fortnight. Prices for all kinds had been well maintained until near the close, when there had appeared more desire on the part of holders to obtain offers, and some of the most recent settlements had been made at a decided decline on rates previously current.

FOOCHOW.—There had been nothing done at this port. The total export for the season to England and the Continent (deducting the cargo per Sarpendon lost) had been 59,234,377 lbs., against 63,784,240 lbs. last season; the export to the United States had been 2,547,019 lbs., against 2,666,220 lbs.; and to Australia 16,239,401 lbs., against 15,383,530 lbs.

AMOY.—The season was over.

CANTON.—No settlements had been reported; it was, however, understood that about 300 boxes Congous had been purchased and shipped as new season's Tea, but so much old leaf was mixed with the small quantity of new as to render it unfit to be described as new Tea. The prices paid had not been made public. Further shipments of Scented Teas had taken place, while about 2,000 boxes were said to be packed ready to be shipped. The weather had been fairly favourable for the new leaf, although the want of rain was likely to cause some delay in the arrival of the first picking. At Macao musters of new Tayslan Congou were looked for in a week or ten days from date. At Canton, first arrivals were not looked for quite so soon, unless it may be a few insignificant parcels.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Owing to absence of fine-sized Hanks, and reluctance on the part of native dealers to sell at the low rates offered, business had been very limited during the first part of the fortnight. Subsequently the rumour of a settlement of the Turkish question had induced a few purchases, and the market closed firm at annexed quotations. Hanks: Best, Nos. 1 and 2, 27s. 8d. to 28s. 5d. per lb.; good,

No. 2, 26s. 4d. to 27s. 4d.; good all round, No. 2½, 24s. 11d. to 26s. 0d.; medium, No. 3, 23s. 6d. to 24s. 2d; common and inferior, Nos. 4 and 5, 21s. 0d. to 22s. 9d. Osbiu: Best, 25s. 7d.; to 26s. 4d.; good and medium, 23s. 10d. to 25s. 3d.; Hamatski: Good to best, 18s. 6d. to 20s. 0d.; common to medium, 17s. 6d. to 18s. 2d. Kakeda: Best, 28s. 1d. to 29s. 2d.; good and medium, 25s. 7d. to 27s 4d. The total comparative export for the season was as follows:—1876-7, 19,567 bales; 1875-6, 11,341 bales; 1874-5, 8,837 bales; 1873-4, 11,339 bales. The stock was 1,800 bales, against 400 bales at the same date last season.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Report says:—A needy holder opened the market by quitting his stock on a basis of Tls.420 for Blue Elephant, but Chinese speculators were buyers at an advance as soon as the sale got wind, and the quotation is now Tls. 20 to 25 per picul higher. Amongst other market chops S.S.S. Dollar has been taken at Tls.400 and Buffalo chop at Tls. 420 for No. 2; the only other business reported is native speculation in Kahing and Woseih Taysaams. The unsold stock is about 15,000 bales.

CANTON.—There had been nothing done until the day previous to this mail's departure when private telegrams had occasioned an active enquiry. At the close $420 was refused for No. 4 Tsatlee.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NAGASAKI.—Tobacco: Small parcels had found buyers at irregular prices, and at the close there was no stock. Wax was firm at unchanged quotations. Camphor had declined to $13.50 per picul. Rice had suddenly advanced 50c., and was nominally quoted $2.39, there being no sellers.

CHEFOO.—The first cargo of Brown Formosa Sugar had arrived from Takas, but so far no sales had transpired. The market was expected to open at about Tls. 2.70 to 80 per picul. Export produce was very scarce, and prices had advanced.

HONG KONG.—A small supply of Formosa Camphor had been received, and as some inquiry existed for the Indian market holders were demanding $16.50 per picul, packed. No Japan cargo was offering, The sales of Cassia Oil at Macao had amounted to 65 piculs and the price had advanced to $106. Aniseed Oil touched $190 per picul, but had since improved and was held for $191 to $192. The stock of Aniseed Stars was 200 piculs; the Chinese were buying at $24 per picul.

CANTON.—Cassia: $11.70 to 11.80 for cases, and $11.50 to 11.60 for mats per picul; sales only 200 piculs; stocks increased to 7,000 piculs, which quantity is reported to very nearly exhaust the supply for the season. Cassia Buds, $17.75 to 18 per picul; no sales; stock, 100 piculs; season's supply very small. Cassia Oil: None on offer. Aniseed Star, $25 to 26 per picul; stock, 100 piculs. Galargal Root, $2.80 to $3 per picul; small stock. China Root, $3.60 to 3.80 per picul; no sales; stock, 200 piculs. China Galls, $13 to 13.25 per picul; sales, 100 piculs; stock, 50 piculs. Turmeric: $5.75 to 6 per picul; no demand: stock, 200 piculs. Rhubarb: No stock. Cantharides, $70 to 75 per picul. Musk: None on offer. Preserves: Chyloong's young stem Ginger, $5.70, best $4.10, cargo $3.50; Chowchow best $4.15, cargo $3.50 per box; Attai's young stem Ginger $4.90, best $3.95, cargo $3.40; Chowchow best $4.10, cargo $3.45 per box; Ginger in casks of 168 lbs., $12 to 13 per picul. Soy: Chyloong's, $3.80; Attai's, $3.70 per picul in casks of 5 piculs. Fire Crackers: No demand; best brands full count worth 74 cents, short count worth 70 cents per box. Matting remained without change, and only in limited request at about previous prices.

SINGAPORE.—The market for the principal staples of Export had been fairly active, an average amount of business had been done; prices generally had been maintained, the advices of the fall in values on the Home markets being balanced by the lower rates of exchange freights. Gambier was steady at $4.32½ to $4.35 per picul in the early part of the fortnight, but latterly the price had dropped, the last business reported was at $4.27½ per picul; about 1,000 tons have been contracted for; supplies were coming forward rather slowly; there was a scarcity of Cube Gambier, only one purchase being reported. Black Pepper opened firmer, a fair business (about 700 tons) reported. White Pepper had continued in demand, 210 tons had been bought at an advance on last quoted rates. Tin had risen in value, 273 tons had been taken and the market closed firm. A large business had been done in Sago Gour, the supplies due for some weeks had been contracted for at advancing rates. Pearl Sago had been in demand at firmer prices. Hides were in good enquiry, quotations firm. Horns were in request. Gutta Percha had been readily bought at full prices. A fair business had been done in Nutmegs.

PENANG.—There had been a fair enquiry for Tin, Pepper and Basket Sugar during the fortnight. Other articles had been quiet. Tin: Upon the fall in exchange taking place, a fair amount of purchases had been made; prices commenced at $19.50, and closed at $20.20 Black Pepper: The quantity arrived had been about 6,200 piculs, of which over half had been taken up for Europe and the rest for India and China—say 2,700 piculs West Coast at $7.92½, 2,800 piculs Atchin at $7.45 to to $7.50, and 700 piculs Trang at $7.10 to $7.15. White Pepper: Transactions at $12.90—Dealers asking higher. Sugar: Purchases of Penang No. 1 at $6.75 to $7.10 according to quality. Nothing done in No. 2. Basket Sugar had been bought at $3.40.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

In the Manchester Market a better feeling prevailed on the 19th inst., leading to a fair amount of business, principally in Grey Shirtings, T-Cloths, &c., and on the 20th there was a further improvement. Producers were firmer in their demands in view of the increased inquiry, and where willing to sell at previous prices, found buyers to greater extent than has been reported for some time past. Goods were the best to sell, but Yarns were also in better request and at steadier prices.

Literature, Science, &c.

Among the more valuable works announced as in the press we note that Messrs. Longmans have the third volume of Ihne's "History of Rome," and the eighth volume of the translation of D'Aubigne's "History of the Reformation." The first volume of Baron Richtofen's great work upon China, which will contain most valuable information, is nearly ready for publication. Baron Richtofen some years back made a long geological and scientific journey in China, and the portions of his notes already published in this and in the China papers displays great scientific research and a thorough acquaintance with his subject generally. In the forthcoming number of Petermann's Mittheilungen will be published a paper on the configuration of the Pacific sea-bottom, with a valuable map, embodying the observations made on board the Challenger, the Tuscarora, and the Gazelle. In a paper on Lieut. Wheeler's expedition to Southern California, Herr Oscar Loew revives the question of an early Japanese or Chinese immigration into America. He communicates an hieroglyphic inscription, discovered by him near Benton, in California, and which he supposes to contain Chinese symbols. An authoritative Life of Carlyle is in preparation by Mr. Fred. Martin, the compiler of the Statesman's Year Book. Dr. Abbott's work on Bacon is to be called "Bacon and Essex," and will contain fresh information as to Bacon's early years drawn from letters at the British Museum. The catalogue of Mr. Ernest Leroux, of Paris, contains the names of many works of interest connected with the Far East. The list of "Export Merchant Shippers" for 1877, published by Messrs. Dean and Sons, has been issued. This work gives full information as to the kind of goods dealt in by all the firms whose names are mentioned in it. It will be invaluable as a work of reference.

The Athenæum announces the death of Dr. C. Bremiker, which took place on the 26th of March, not long after he had completed his seventy-third year. Besides many other astronomical works, it will be remembered that he formed that part of the Berlin star charts which helped to enable Dr. Galle so readily to recognise the planet Neptune on looking for it in the place suggested by Le Verrier, on September 23rd, 1846. His logarithm-table calculations also were exceedingly important. Of late years he had been taking a large part in the geodetical operations conducted by General Bäyer, who much regrets his loss.

A comet was discovered by Dr. Winnecke, at Strasburg, on the morning of Friday, the 6th inst., in the constellation Pegasus. Its orbit has since been determined by Dr. Holetschek, of Vienna, by which it appears that it passed its perihelion on the 14th inst., at a distance from the sun slightly greater than the earth's mean distance; and that it will be nearest the earth about the 3rd of May. The elements of its orbit present a great similarity with those of Comet II., 1827, and a comet seen in 1852, and this leads to a suspicion that all three are the same.

The Past and Future of Ships of War, by John Bourne, C.E., is the title of a pamphlet which we are of opinion contains some of the most sensible suggestions ever written on the subject.

Justice to China—Under this title, a pamphlet has been issued by Mr. Henry Crompton calling for co-operation and assistance in order to diffuse a knowledge of the facts relating to the intercourse between England and China; to prepare the public mind for the discussion of these grave questions of political justice; and to give a hearty support to the efforts which will be made in Parliament to secure Justice for China. It sets forth the well-known views of those who hold that it would have been possible to establish diplomatic relations with China without coercion. The writer states that for forty years and more England has pursued a policy of aggression and coercion towards China, and holds that if we had followed the advice of some of our ablest officials, the intercourse between this country and China might have rested upon peaceful trust between the two nations, and we might have avoided the unrighteous wars and the crimes, for the perpetration and continuation of which we are all of us deeply responsible. The Chefoo Convention is taken as an illustration of the coercion spoken of, the murder of Mr. Margary having, the writer holds, been used for the purpose of extorting commercial advantages; and Sir Thomas Wade having telegraphed for a fleet with the avowed intention of coercing the Chinese Government to submit to the terms he thought fit to impose.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

LINNEAN.—April 5, Prof. Allman, President, in the chair. Captain Chimmo, the Rev. J. Constable, and Prof. Liversidge were elected Fellows. Sir C. Strickland exhibited a specimen of Crinum aquaticum, obtained from Grahamstown, South Africa, a plant which hitherto has rarely been seen in flower in Britain. A paper, "On Ferns collected by Miss Gilpin in the interior of Madagascar," was read by Mr. J. G. Baker. Some hundred and fifty species had been obtained, whereof the author regarded seventeen as new; many of the others also tended to elucidate points is species already partially known.

CHEMICAL.—April 5, Prof. Oldling in the chair.—A lecture. "On the Discrimination of Crystals by their Optical Characters," was delivered by Prof. N. S. Maskelyne. After a few general remarks on the use, to the chemist, of the methods employed by crystallographers, the lecturer proceeded to consider the methods of determining the symmetry of crystals by their optical characters.

At the British Archæological Association, on April 4, H. Syer Cuming, Esq., in the chair, Mr. J. T. Irvine exhibited a large collection of drawings of the little-known Saxon church at Boarhunt, Hants, and this building was minutely described. It has only a nave and chancel, of small dimensions but of well executed walling, with neatly-cut groins, which have been worked with a chisel, and not with an axe. The joints are remarkably close and thin, and from the fact that all the masonry is of Juan Abbey stone from the Isle of Wight it may reasonably be concluded that the date of the building was late in Saxon times, to admit of the facilities of transport, in addition to the evidence of the neatness of the work. Mr. L. Brock described at length the remarkable group of Roman pottery kilns recently discovered at Colchester, on the grounds of Mr. P. O. Papillon, near Lexden.—On April 12, Lord Houghton in the chair, Dr. Schliemann read a paper on "Troy, and its Analogy to Mycenæ," and was made an honorary member of the Association.

AMERICAN TRADE.

(THE TIMES.)

The stagnation of commerce and industry in the United States has for a long time perplexed and irritated the speculative world. The depression began nearly four years ago, and has continued up to this time with scarcely perceptible intermission or relief. As we pointed out the other day, the industrial interests of the Union have been paralysed since the panic of 1873, and the long expected revival has not yet made itself manifest. Standing upon the verge of a European war, we are deeply interested in inquiring how far our trade with the United States has been affected by recent and impending events. It appears, unfortunately, too evident that the powers of the American people, which in the domain of commercial and industrial progress seemed to be capable of indefinite expansion, have been brought abruptly to a halt. The dismal incidents of the past winter have left the people of the United States face to face with both dangers and remedies that have been long familiar to Old World societies. The Americans have now, almost for the first time, been enabled to understand by practical experience what vagrancy means, what pauperism, what emigration—and emigration, too, it must be admitted, from a country that still offers magnificent advantages to industrious and energetic men. It is certain, also, that the spirit of the American people remains unbroken. A panic of more than three years' duration has not disheartened them; they are hopeful now as they were in 1874. We published on Monday a statement of the business failures that have occurred in the United States within the last two years, and these statistics, although they showed a slight gain upon the aggregate amount of capital involved, were not on the whole encouraging. In the first quarter of 1877 the business failures in the United States numbered 2,876, while in the first quarter of the preceding year the failures of the same class were only 2,806. In the year first mentioned, however, the amount of the money losses was much less than in the latter; but New York in 1877 was responsible for one-fifth of the total liabilities of the States, while in 1876 that city was set down for only one-seventh of the whole. So far as New York is concerned, therefore, these statistics do not hold out much hope of improvement. It must be remembered, however, that the great Atlantic ports depend for their prosperity mainly upon the development of traffic in the West, and when there is a larger proportion of failures in New York there are fewer failures, probably, in the Mississippi Valley and on the Pacific Slope. The most obvious inference from the facts, so far as we have been made acquainted with them, is that the depression which for three years has afflicted trade upon the Atlantic Coast has now made itself painfully felt all over the Union.

The collapse of American enterprise has been recently proved in many other ways. The withdrawal of labour from the market in the United States, which some time ago was regarded as an exceptional case, has been repeated, over and over again. Emigration from New York to Sydney has been attempted, has succeeded, and promises to become a regular branch of trade. A few days ago a steamer left New York for Sydney with from 300 to 400 emigrants on board, most of them, it is said, artisans with some little capital, and consequently the very best class of settlers. This is the third emigrant ship that has been chartered for the trade between the United States and Australia since the beginning of the winter. We do not think that even the most patriotic Americans can quarrel with the result; for the distress lately described by the New York journalists was so terrible that any means of mitigating it ought to be welcomed. It is not, however, the emigration from the United States to Australia that we have to consider alone, nor even the evidence, of embarrassment in New York and other great American towns supplied by the statistics of mercantile failures, but also, and chiefly, the effect of these movements and disclosures upon the actual relations of society and business in the American centres of commerce. The political crisis in the United States has for a time delayed the settlement of the question among business men, but it may now be taken for granted that the policy of President Hayes has received the approbation of the country, and that any measures which he may recommend will be passed by Congress without any serious opposition.

COOLIES IN THE WEST INDIES.

On the 20th inst. Mr. Thomas Blake, M.P., introduced a deputation from the Anti-Slavery Society to Lord Carnarvon (with whom were Sir A. Musgrave and Mr. Herbert), at the Colonial-office, representing the coloured population of Jamaica, on the subject of coolie labour. Mr. Edmund Sturge, Mr. Alexander M'Arthur, M.P., Mr. Stafford Allen, Mr. F. W. Chesson, Mr. James Henderson, and the Rev. J. W. Davies were among the deputation. In the speeches made by the members of the deputation it was stated that the expenses of the coolie immigration to Jamaica were defrayed by the peasantry of the island, which already had an abundant population, quite sufficient for the cultivation there. There were a large number of people prepared to work under the conditions of fair pay for a fair day's work, and the peasants therefore had just cause to complain that their money should be used for the purpose of introducing the coolies, who really were not wanted, and only became an element of unfair competition, an expense, and a burden to the community. Lord Carnarvon in the course of his reply said he saw the importance of the question they had laid before him, primarily as regarded Jamaica, and secondly as respected other colonies. Of course the question of the criminality which it was said the coolies imported into the island was a serious matter, and one which his lordship hoped Sir Andrew Musgrave would give his attention to as soon as he arrived there. There was a large question how far it was right to apply any part of the public funds to the importation of emigrants for the sake of a particular class on the island. That was so serious that it should be very carefully considered. He could not say that he went with those who called it a sacrifice of the majority for the minority. In such cases they could not altogether separate one interest of the community from that of another; for that which benefited one important interest would generally be found to benefit all in an indirect way. In the Crown colony of Ceylon railroads were being made, costing much money, and which would benefit only one particular locality, yet they were paid for by the whole community. Take, then, the colony of Australia, where there were thousands of artisans and labourers, yet a large sum was voted annually for emigration purposes. They must not therefore lay down too rigid rules, but treat the matter as affecting the whole community. His lordship added that he did not feel satisfied with the present state of things. How far his dissatisfaction went was a question; it was sufficient to induce him to look into it as honestly and fairly as he could.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC.

On the 17th inst. Dr. John Dudgeon, of the Peking Hospital, delivered a lecture in John-street U.P. Church, Glasgow, on "Our Opium Traffic; its History, Policy, and Results." He said that though limited at the outset to medicinal purposes, the consumption increased so rapidly that in the beginning of this century its importation was prohibited, and it was only within the last sixteen years that its sale had been legalised. It had been forced upon the Chinese, even at the point of the bayonet; and the action of this country in that matter was one of the darkest blots on our foreign policy. Dr. Dudgeon said they were met to discuss a most important question—a subject transcending by far what was known as the Eastern question. It was the question of the Far East, involving interests of humanity, of commerce, and of our common Christianity among more than one-half of the human race — not only our own country, but India and more particularly China, and through the Chinese, through their emigrating, the world at large. He felt sure that it was ignorance of and not apathy regarding the character of the evil consequences of this trade which had prevented the question from being settled long ago by the British public. He contrasted the progress of Japan with that of China, and attributed it entirely to the want of opium, as by a stringent clause in the treaty with Japan no opium was allowed into that country. After an allusion to the manner in which the opium was prepared in India, and the action of Government thereanent, Dr. Dudgeon proceeded to speak of the easy manner in which the habit could be formed, and of the deleterious effects it had upon the natives. From estimates which he had made, he found that over the whole empire there were something like 20 or 30 millions of opium smokers. The Chinese were now growing their own opium to supply their own market, and starve the importation from India. In these circumstances, he maintained that by-and-by the Indian Government would require to find another source from which to derive £8,000,000 of revenue got from the opium trade. The lecturer further remarked that the Chinese were sincere in their hostility to the opium trade, as was shown in the fact that no soldier was allowed to be an opium smoker, and if so he was branded and disfigured on his face in order that he might carry the stigma wherever he went.

THE CHICO MASSACRE.

The American papers contain further particulars concerning the disclosures with regard to the above-named terrible occurrence:—J. M. Swain, a member of the Council of Nine, has made confession of the manner in which the affairs of the council were conducted, which agrees with previously published statements of the deliberate plans which were laid, involving the destruction of property and the taking of life, both white and Chinese. Among those whom it seems were proposed to the counsel as fit subjects of their murderous designs was Hon. John Bidwell, candidate for governor on the independent ticket during the last campaign, who was inimical to the Order on account of employing Chinamen on his ranche in the vicinity of Chico. The council appears to have been composed of three captains, each of whom appointed two lieutenants. Each captain had a certain district assigned him in which to operate. The manner in which the members of this secret organisation laid their plans for burning and blowing up buildings in Chinatown and manufacturing establishments in which Chinese were employed, and discussed the propriety and expedieucy of making way with parties who had incurred their enmity, is almost incredible. All the prisoners have been removed to the jail in Oroville, the county seat, and every precaution taken to render their escape or rescue impossible. Double guards are stationed within and without the jail, and the approaches to the town are protected by an armed force. The excitement over the disclosures of the criminals is intense, mingled with fear that the determined action of the authorities and citizens will not be sufficient to deter other members of the Labour Union from seeking to avenge the arrest of their companions. Owing to the obloquy cast upon the Labour Union by recent disclosures, the more respectable portion of that organisation have denounced the action of the Council of Nine as unsanctioned by the organisation; and to restore peace and confidence to the community it was unanimously resolved to disband and dissolve the organisation. The Citizens' Committee is working actively to insure a vigorous prosecution of the parties arrested.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Chinese Envoys have, since last mail, been present at the launch of the Japanese ironclad from Messrs. Samuda's yard, when H.E. Kwo made a somewhat amusing speech. On the 18th inst. they visited the Arsenal at Woolwich, where they were shown the latest improvements in torpedoes, and witnessed the firing off of the 38-ton gun.

PERAK.

In the House of Commons on the 26th inst. Sir Charles Dilke will ask the Under Secretary for the Colonies, whether it is true, as reported in the London and China Telegraph of the 16th inst., that Sultan Ysoof is to be installed at Perak, and that Sultans Ismail and Abdullah are to be deported from that country. Whether Sultan Ysoof is the same person as Raja Muda Yusuf referred to by Sir William Jervois, on October 29, 1875, as "heir presumptive to the throne of Perak," as "possessing activity and energy quite peculiar in a Malay," and also as having "expressed a desire to live under British rule:" whether any further papers relating to the affairs of the Malay States will shortly be presented to Parliament; whether it is true that the Maharajah Lelah has lately been executed in Perak on a charge of being concerned in the murder of Mr. Birch: whether there is any kind of foundation for a rumour current at Singapore that before the Maharajah was arrested a promise was made to him that if he surrendered his life should be safe: whether he was provided with legal means of defence, under what law he was tried, and what was the nature of the tribunal by which he was condemned: and, whether Her Majesty's Government will lay before Parliament a report of the trial.

THE PACIFIC MAIL ROUTE TO JAPAN.—An extraordinary railroad race against time has just been concluded. The steamer City of Peking left Hong Kong on February 19, and Yokohama on February 28, and arrived at San Francisco on March 17—a remarkably quick trip. On March 20 the freight consigned to New York—consisting of silks, teas, bronzes, &c., and valued at a very large sum—was started for New York in twenty cars of the Continental Fast Freight Line, via the Central and Union Pacific and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroads, or what is known as the southern route. The quickest time between Yokohama and New York that had ever been made previously was forty-two days by the northern route, and it was determined if possible to beat that time now. The train passed St. Louis March 27, Cincinnati on the 28th, Parkersburg on the 29th, Baltimore 30th, and arrived at New York at six P.M. of the same day, making the transit of the continent in ten days, which has never before been equalled by a freight train, the total time from Yokohama to New York being only thirty days.

DEPUTY COMMISSARY-GENERAL A. CROWDER CROOKSHANK, C.B., District Commissary-General, died at Dublin on the 15th inst. He served throughout the campaign of 1854-55, in commissariat charge of the Cavalry Division from the landing in the Crimea; was present at the affairs of Balganac and M'Kenzie's Farm, the Battles of the Alma, Balaklava, Inkerman, and the Tchernaya, and the siege of Sebastopol. For his services during this campaign he received the medal and four clasps, the decoration of the fifth class of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal. He also served on the China Expedition of 1857-58 in commissariat charge of the Expeditionary Field Force, and was present at the capture of Canton. He was for some years stationed at Ceylon as Assist.-Commissary-General, and was appointed to Dublin in December, 1872. In consideration of his valuable services in the Control Department he was, in 1873, made a Companion of the Order of the Bath.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN POTTINGER, C.B., Royal Art., of Mount Pottinger, Carrick-on-Shannon, nephew of the late Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart., her Majesty's Plenipotentiary in China, and afterwards Governor of Madras, and brother of the late Major Eldred Pottinger, celebrated for his heroic defence of Herat in 1836-7, died a few days since. Major-General Pottinger entered the Bombay Artillery in June, 1831, served throughout the Persian campaign of 1856-57, and commanded the Ahmednuggur Field Force during the Indian Mutiny from October, 1857, to February, 1858. He retired from the service on the full pay of a colonel, and became a major-general on the 1st of September, 1863. He served the office of high sheriff for the county of Leitrim in 1867.

ELLIS GILMAN.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. Ellis Gilman, on the 13th inst., at the age of sixty-seven. Mr. Gilman was a partner in the firm of Messrs. Ashton and Co., in the China trade, which firm he joined in 1850. Previous to that he had been a resident in the Straits for eighteen years, and was for some time a partner in the firm of Hamilton, Gray, and Co., Singapore. For some years he had been in failing health, and his attendance to business had become uncertain.

THE marriage of his Excellency Aoki, the Japanese Envoy at Berlin, to Fraulein Von Rhade, the daughter of a Pomeranian nobleman, was celebrated on the 20th inst. The civil marriage took place at Berlin, but the Evangelical clergy there declined to give the nuptual benediction to the marriage of a Buddhist with a Christian. The religious ceremony was therefore performed at the Church of St. Remberti at Bremen.

The Swallow, 3, double-screw composite gun-vessel, 1774 tons, 892-horse power, after a thorough refit, has been commissioned at Portsmouth for the South-East Coast of America station by Com. John B. Warren.

A Greenwich Hospital pension of £50 a year, vacant by the death of Dr. Peter Suther, deputy inspector-general, has been conferred on Staff Surgeon John Wilson.

COURT OF APPEAL.

DAMAGE TO CARGO.—THE PERANA (S.).

This was a cause of damage to cargo, which came before the Registrar of the Court of Admiralty in April, 1876. The facts of the case were, that the Parana, a trading steamer of 1,372 tons register, left England with from 1,000 to 1,300 tons of iron as deadweight, and was filled up with light goods. She was on a voyage to Hong Kong, and, having discharged her cargo, proceeded in ballast to Manila, where the master entered into a charter-party with Messrs. Eugster and Co. to load a cargo at Manila and Ilo Ilo for London, passing through the Suez Canal. Under the charter-party some parcels of hemp and sugar were taken on board at Manila and Ilo Ilo, but, not being supplied with a full cargo, she called at Singapore to fill up. After leaving Ilo Ilo she met with bad weather, and at Singapore had to undergo some repairs. On her homeward voyage she had to effect other repairs at Atchin, Galle, Aden, Port Said, Malta, and Gibraltar, and ultimately arrived, after 127 days' voyage, in the port of London, and, having discharged her cargo there, proceeded to Greenock, where her boilers were taken out. The plaintiff complained that his cargo of wet sugar, which was liable to drainage, had become deteriorated to the amount of 20s. per ton from the length of the voyage, which should only have been ninety days instead of 127. The Judge of the Admiralty Court, after reviewing the authorities, said that the depreciation in the market value of the goods was the natural consequence of the carrier's delay, and that the shipper was entitled to have included in his damages the difference between the market price at the time when the goods did arrive and the time when they ought to have arrived. From this decision the present appeal was made.

A lengthy judgment was pronounced by Justice Mellish, who, in conjunction with Justices Baggallay and James, heard the appeal. He said that the question the Court had to decide was whether, if there was undue delay in the carriage of goods on a long voyage by sea, it follows as a matter of course that, if there has been a fall in the price of those goods between the time when the goods ought to have arrived and the time when they arrive, damages can be recovered. In order that damages may be recovered, we must come to the conclusion—first, that it was reasonably certain that the goods would not be sold until they did arrive; or, secondly, that it was reasonably certain that they would be sold immediately after they arrived, and that that was known to the carrier at the time when the bills of lading were signed. It appears to me that nothing could be more uncertain than either of those two assumptions. Goods imported by sea may be, and are every day sold whilst they are at sea. If the man who is importing the goods finds the market high, and is afraid that the price may fall, he is not prevented, as an ordinary rule, from selling his goods because they are at sea. The sale of goods to arrive, the sale of goods on transfer of bill of lading, with cost bills and insurances is a common mercantile contract made every day. It may be that from not having samples of the goods, or from not knowing what the particular quality of his goods are, he may have a difficulty in selling them until they arrive, but the carrier would not necessarily know that the plaintiff himself is not the original consignee, but a man who had acquired the goods apparently by the consignment of the bill of lading whilst the goods were at sea. We were told that he was a person who had advanced money on the security of the bills of lading. That possibly may be the case; but whether he has done that, or is the purchaser, would make no difference. It was said that the goods were sold; if the person who sells them does not suffer the damage that the purchaser would suffer the damage. But that is pure speculation. If a man purchases goods while they are at sea no person can say for what purpose he purchases them. He may purchase them because he thinks if he keeps them for six months they will sell for a better sum, or he may want to use them in his trade. It is pure speculation to enter into the question for what purpose he purchases them. In this particular case the plaintiff did not sell the goods as they arrived; he sold them some months afterwards, when a further fall took place in the market. Of course, he does not seek to recover from the defendant that additional loss, but it serves to illustrate how uncertain it is whether he would have sold them. If he did not sell them when they did arrive, but kept them because he thought the market would rise, how can we tell he would not have done exactly the same thing if the goods had arrived in time? Therefore, it seems to me, that to give these damages would be to give speculative damages—to give damages when we cannot be certain that the plaintiff would not have suffered just as much if the goods had arrived in time; and I think, according to the principles on which the Courts have acted in all these speculative and uncertain cases of damage of this kind, is that damages ought not to be recovered. Therefore, upon the whole, we come to the conclusion that the report of the Registrar and Merchants is right. Besides quoting the Common Law authorities, they said it had never been the practice in the Court of Admiralty to give damages. Though it constantly happened, of course, that by collision goods were delayed in their arrival, it had never been the custom to include in damages the loss of market; and, therefore, upon the whole, we are of opinion that the conclusion which the Registrar and Merchants came to was right. The consequence, therefore, must be that the judgment of the Court below must be reversed. As to the costs, the Registrar and Merchants reported that each party ought to pay his own costs of the inquiry before them, and we think that ought to be retained, and the appellant should have his costs of the arguments in the Court below.

THE BANKRUPTCY OF MESSRS. VIVANTI.—At the Bankruptcy Court on the 16th inst. the case of Anselmo Vivanti, silk merchant, of Jeffrey-square, St. Mary-axe, was mentioned to Mr. Registrar Pepys, sitting as Chief Judge, upon an application to confirm a scheme of arrangement. On behalf of the trustee, it was stated that the failure took place in January, 1873, the secured and unsecured debts amounting to between £500,000 and £600,000, the available assets only amounting to £9,525, a very large amount of property being in the hands of secured creditors. To enable the estate to be realised, the principal part of which was abroad, the services of the debtor and his staff had to be obtained, this making the expenses very heavy. A meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing the debtor's offer to pay over to the trustee a sufficient amount to enable him, together with the money in hand, to pay a further dividend of 6d. in the pound clear of all costs, he getting his discharge. It would appear from the report of Mr. Penn, chief clerk, that there was at the present time a sufficient sum to pay the proposed dividend, but credit had not been given for a large payment made by him in realising the estate. The Registrar said that looking at the statement in the report, he thought he must have further evidence as to the money in hand. The application would be adjourned for a week, the figures being submitted to Mr. Penn in the meantime, who would be able to make a supplemental report.

MARINE INSURANCE CASE.—THE "ADMIRAL PROTET."—KALTENBACH V. MACKENZIE.—This was an action on a policy of insurance effected on the ship Admiral Protet, and was tried before the Lord Chief Justice at the last Guildhall sittings. The vessel was chartered to carry a cargo of rice to Hong Kong, and on going down the river, near Saigon, the ship struck on a shoal. She was got off and surveyed, and as it was stated that the vessel would cost more to repair than her value when repaired, it was decided to sell her. She was purchased by a Chinaman, who repaired her, and she had been engaged in the coasting trade. The question raised was whether there had been a constructive total loss, and at the hearing of the cause judgment passed for the defendant. Application was now made on behalf of the plaintiff for a new trial, which was granted.

THE "DYCE SOMBRE" CASE.—Judgment has been given by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of "Lord and Lady Forester versus the Secretary of State for India," in which litigation has been going on for thirty years, in regard to the estates of the late Mr. Dyce Sombre, of whom Lady Forester was the widow. The Judicial Committee, in 1873, decided in favour of Lord Forester, then Major-General Forester, M.P., and Lady Forester, and £30,000 was paid as principal and £130,000 as interest; appeals arose, however, in the Indian Court in regard to certain costs and interest on costs. By the present judgment the decrees of the Chief Court of India were affirmed and the appeals dismissed.

LAUNCH OF A JAPANESE CORVETTE.

On the 17th inst. a corvette, built from the designs and under the supervision of Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., was launched at Hull by Earle's Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, in the presence of several members of the Japanese Legation, the vessel having been built for the Japanese Government. There were also present Sir Spencer Robinson, Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., the Mayor of Hull, and several ladies and gentlemen. The vessel was named the Kon-go by Mrs. Lane, wife of the English Secretary of the Legation. The Kon-go is a composite corvette, but her engines, boilers, and magazines are protected by a belt of armour four and a-half inches thick. The Kon-go is the first vessel of her class which has been so protected. She will be supplied with engines, also constructed by Earle's Company, which will work up to 2,500-horse power, and the contract speed is thirteen knots. She will be barque-rigged, and her spread of plain canvas will be 12,000 square yards, her total area of sails being 17,000 square yards. Her armament will consist of twelve Krupp guns, some of them capable of throwing steel shells of 142 lb. One of these guns is placed on a "racer" in the stern, and it can be trained either to fire direct astern, broadside, or forward of the beam. In like manner her forward guns are so placed as to fire right ahead in a line with the keel, broadside, or abaft the beam.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, APRIL 17.

The past week has been a remarkable one for the constant uncertainty about the political situation; on the one side hopes are still entertained that a final diplomatic act still may avert the threatening storm, whereas on the other side the Pessimists are persuaded that between this and a year the whole of Europe will be in flames. Business on our Exchange therefore is best compared with a heavy loaded vessel in a gale of wind, labouring heavily over the towering waves, and every moment expecting to tumble down, head foremost, into a watery grave. The tradesmen and money-people go about, their heads hanging down, and but for the approaching summer no doubt suicides would have to be counted by the dozen. But even the spring does not appear to fulfil what it promised; the beautiful weather about which we could report of late, since the middle of last week has altogether changed for the worse; heavy and dry easterly winds, accompanied by an unusually low temperature and frosts at night, render the weather very unpleasant, and coughs and colds are the order of the day. But to the farmer the present weather is welcome; the acres are becoming dried and fit for the spring labours, and unless the month of May should be unusually bad a productive summer and a good harvest may still be hoped for.

The public attention to a great part is absorbed by the visit of the Crown Prince and Princess; the high visitors are expected on Thursday, and will be accompanied by Prince Wilhelm (eldest son) and Prince Heinrich (second son). The City of Hamburg in consequence will have not only two future emperors within its walls, but also a future grand admiral of the German navy. The preparations made are really grand, and the Queen of England, no doubt with great satisfaction, will read the reports about the hearty and noble reception of her children and grandchildren in a city which not many years back was regarded as an English colony on the Continent.

The German Reichstag has re-assembled after the Easter holidays on the 10th of this month, and on Friday, the 13th, the letter of the Chancellor, announcing his periodical retirement, has been debated. Members of nearly all sides of the House expressed their regret on this occasion about Bismark's fatigue, and wished him the best success of his repose; they also hoped the Chancellor after his return would be able to partake in the work of the Parliament.

Mr. Loewe, Member of the Reichstag, has brought in a motion according to which the abolition of iron duties, which took place on the 1st of January, 1877, shall be paralysed by an excise of m.0.75 per cwt. on the greater part of iron-ware, with the exception of machinery; but this motion has not much prospect of being accepted.

The International Bank at Hamburg has published her report and balance-sheet for 1876, and I give you the following extract:—The reduction of the capital of the establishment has now been finished, and the capital amounts at present to fifteen millions, consisting of 30,000 shares of m.500 each. The gross profit of the past year has been at the rate of 5⅞ per cent., out of which, after making deductions and providing reserves, a dividend of 3 per cent., shall be distributed. The establishment owns 61,600 shares of the International Bank of Hamburg and London (Limited), paid with £9 each. Among the assets the following items are to be found:—Cash, m.28,386; bills of exchange, m.203,521; stocks, m.15,150,004; liabilities belonging to share capital, m.15,000,000; bills of exchange, m.168,519; deposits, m.436,546; reserve fund, m.185,279; special reserve fund, m.130,000.

Germany has long felt the necessity of obtaining colonial possessions as a means of indirectly supporting its navy, which she is very desirous to increase; and she has latterly been looking in the direction of the Pacific Ocean. Some weeks back news came to hand that a friendly alliance had been effected between Germany and the Tonga Islands for the establishment of factories and navy stations, &c., and although this news did not meet with full credence it is now regarded as authentic, and the report has come from Berlin that the above-named "friendly alliance" will be laid before the Imperial Parliament for sanction as soon as the House reassembles.

At the commencement of the year 1876 the Hertha (screw frigate), coming from Japan, showed the German navy colours in the western part of the great ocean, especially at the Palaos and Pelew Islands, at the same time informing the natives of these islands that German settlers enjoyed the protection of a strong and formidable mother-country as well as the relatives of other European nations; and the Archipelago was also visited by the Gazelle, the upshot being a treaty of friendship and alliance with Germany, but not involving any responsibility on that country. The memorandum sets forth the importance of a naval depot in this direction. The larger portion of the residents on the Tongas are at present Germans.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our Produce Markets have been influenced by the warlike aspect of politics during the past week; all articles which will be in a better demand in case of a war between Russia and Turkey went higher in price, while all other articles remained rather dull. Money remains abundant, and the rate of discount in the open market is unchanged—3 to 4 per cent.

RICE has shown a quiet tendency, and transactions of importance did not transpire; 5,000 bags arrived from Japan, per Osburgha, have changed owners already afloat.

TEA is in little demand; from first-hand parcels only the sale of 600/16 boxes Imperial is reported.

COTTON.—Buyers have been very much reserved, and besides several parcels of American provenience, 50 bales South Sea Island have been sold.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, native, m.5.60 to 6.20; Mace, m.4.70 to 4.90 per kilo. Cloves are in good demand for consumption; Zanzibar quality is quoted m.142 to 143 per 50 kilo. Pepper dull; Singapore quality m.33 to 38½; Penang quality m.36 to 36½; White m.69 to 80 per 50 kilo.

Exchange: London, three months, m.20.32 to 20.26 per £.

SHIPPING.

In consequence of the prevailing easterly winds the arrivals have been scarce, but departures were numerous, and our harbour at present does not represent a great number of vessels. The business between here and the Far East seems slowly to be recovering; cargoes, although only to be had at low rates, are less scarce, and there is all appearance of a middling but steady business. The barques Adolph, Horn, and Vega, Nortvedt, both for Hong Kong, have left with full cargoes (both being chartered at a lump sum); the Galatea, s.s., Boehme (German Steamship Company), has also left for her usual route, being a full ship. The Bellona, s.s., Ahrens, has arrived from China via Amsterdam, and the Peter Godeffroy, Wendt, from Papeite. The Woodville, Nelson, Meteor, Dinckelberg, and Marco Polo, Zaeger, have taken the berth for Hong Kong; the Adolph, Hupfer, for Shanghai; and Gerhardine, Hansen, for Singapore. The Bellona, s.s., is advertised to leave on the 30th April for China; the Anna, Moennich, for Singapore; Ino, Mahn, for Bangkok; and Vesta, Schomer, for Manila, are still loading. It is a long time since our harbour contained so many vessels on the berth for the Far East as at present, a proof of the existence of a bettering business in this direction. The passenger trade to New York, &c., is worse than ever.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, APRIL 18.

Yesterday our members of Parliament met; the first sitting was, of course, not very interesting, excepting the communication that Mr. A. Kuyper will resign his membership on June 1. To-day the members of the Liberal party met, in order to discuss the Lower Class Instruction Bill. The question, however, is, whether this Bill will be laid before the members. Up to this moment there is no answer of the Minister on the section report, and it is very doubtful that this will occur. What may happen is still an enigma. It was discussed, some days ago, that Messrs. Van Lynden and Heemskerk would change, because the first-named had more chance than the Premier, but up till this moment there is nothing which confirms this rumour. It thus appears that things will remain as they are; and as a matter of course, when the Lower Class Instruction Bill will not be discussed before the elections, which will take place in the month of June next, they will bear a most calm and peaceful character. Several candidates are already brought forward, but their success is just like that of the International Flower Show, which has to struggle against rough weather, whilst the flowers are enormously damaged by the sharp northern winds. The Royal Family left this capital, and returned to the Hague.

The 'Change has been dull since my last report. The quotations of every Fund have gone lower every day. Stoppage of payments of course resulted; even the most solid and well-known house of Messrs. L. A. Kesper and Zoon failed to fulfil its engagements. It is said that the liabilities reach an amount of nearly two millions. The actual state of matters must change, if we wish to avoid a crisis. Capital remains most plentiful, and even at 2 per cent. or less large sums of money can be had, but, of course, against a security of which nothing can be said. The actual state of things is most wavering, and I am of opinion that most disastrous occurrences will take place. The engagements are enormous, whilst the capital is melted by those who engaged themselves.

AMSTERDAM, APRIL 19.

Yesterday a Bill was laid before the Chamber, proposing to make dry land of the Zuyder Zee and to construct a canal between Amsterdam and Cologne.

At the elections, which took place yesterday here and at Tiel, Messrs. C. Van Heukelom and W. H. De Beaufort obtained the majority, receiving respectively 481 and 759 votes.

The King has appointed Mr. H. Schröder Visser secretary of the Dutch Trading Company, and has conferred the Grand Cross (knighthood first class) of the Order of the Golden Lion of Nassau upon the Lieutenant-General Verspyck.

Mr. P. Brooshooft, editor of the Samarang Courant, will start for Java in the month of August next.

THE MERCANTILE BANK MEETING.

THE discussion which took place at the meeting of the Chartered Mercantile Bank with reference to the system adopted by that establishment of rendering half-yearly accounts has ended, as was probably most desirable, in the motion to make an alteration back to the old yearly system being withdrawn. There can be but little doubt that, as the Chairman pointed out, the plan of half-yearly meetings has at times some disadvantages. One of these was, as a matter of fact, experienced by the Bank during the last half-year of 1876, and some disappointment was felt on a comparison of the two half-years' business, although that of the first half and of the whole year was satis factory. It is, however, one thing not to adopt a principle, and another to "cry back" from it when it has once become established, especially if it have been in force for any number of years. Certainly, unless the shareholders had expressed themselves unanimously in favour of the change back to the old system, it would have been a mistake to adopt it. The Directors, we think wisely, took their stand at this point, and the opinion as reflected in the room being by no means unanimous, no change will be made. So far as the difficulty which caused it to be discussed at the meeting on Tuesday is concerned, it is really somewhat of an imaginary nature, when looked at from a practical point of view, as the result of the Bank's business for the year has, considering the difficulties that have had to be contended against, certainly been satisfactory. A little more carefulness in the half-yearly report and in the views based upon it, is probably all that is required to prevent a recurrence of the disappointment which has been experienced, and as this has been promised by the Chairman, we make no doubt that shareholders will have no reason to complain in the future.

THE TELEGRAPH IN CHINA.

THERE is nothing more necessary in studying the affairs of China than to bear in mind that the Chinese are in theory very different from what experience has long proved them to be in practice. In theory, China is simply stationary. She claims to have attained to the highest point of civilisation, and to hold that any shortcomings which may be found in her actions are the result only of her having deviated from the line marked out for her by her ancient philosophers, and pursued in older times by her rulers. With a nation so minded it might well seem impossible to introduce anything in the form of modern improvements; and, if she adhered in practice to the pretensions which she makes upon abstract grounds, all hope of bringing her into harmony with modern civilisation would have to be abandoned. It is not surprising that for long years thoughtful and well-informed people considered that the obstacles in the way of bringing the railway and the telegraph into China were insuperable; and yet, upon a small scale, both have now been introduced, and by the latest advices from China we learn that one of the most influential of the Chinese officials, TING FOOTAI, is anxious to establish a line of telegraph between Amoy and Formosa. It is impossible in the face of such facts to consider that the Chinese are so deeply imbued with admiration for the old and contempt for the new, as, if we took them literally at their word, would appear to be the case. The truth is that, like many other nations, the Chinese have had, as time went on, to recognise that rules and principles, however wisely conceived, have to be modified to meet changing events and altered circumstances. Like Rome in ancient days, China has had to deviate from the strictness of her principles by the introduction of something like legal fictions, by means of which she is able to adapt herself to altered circumstances while maintaining the theories applicable when the nature of her relations to other nations and the internal state of the country were both widely different from what they are at the present time. No people have a better appreciation of practical advantage than the Chinese, and it is at this point, as those who were acquainted with them have always foreseen, that we have the best hope as to the ultimate introduction of foreign improvements. Recent events undoubtedly go to show that this view of the subject is correct. The Chinese in theory are at the present day very much the same as they have been for centuries; but while maintaining their old-fashioned views they still show a due appreciation for the practical. The desire on the part of TING-FOOTAI to have a line of telegraph constructed between Amoy and Formosa is an illustration in point. Chinese mercantile men who are always in the van of progress have long become familiar with the advantages of telegraphy; and we now find that one of their leading officials sees that similar advantages might be gained in regard to State affairs. The circumstance is undoubtedly satisfactory, and, combined with other indications of a like character, gives room to hope that at last the crust of opposition on the part of the official classes is becoming broken, and that China will yet see her way to adopt modern improvements, not, as has been expected in some directions, by some sudden change, but gradually and steadily, as in each case she recognises her advantage in so doing.

THE SULU TREATY.

IN another column we give the Convention entered into between our Minister and that of Germany at Madrid with the Spanish Government, in regard to the Sulu Archipelago, which was signed on the 11th March, as we have already announced. It is very satisfactory that this long-vexed question has been brought to a termination, and we have to express our appreciation of the action of the Foreign-office in this matter. We cannot, however, refrain from suggesting that in cases like this, where mercantile interests are seriously affected by a stoppage of trade, greater expedition should be used in removing the obstacles and in the publication of the correspondence for the information of those interested. It will be seen that the despatch of Mr. LAYARD, our Minister, and the reply of the Spanish Government, are dated April of last year, and during this interval all inquiries at the Foreign-office and in the House of Commons have been met with a stereotyped answer: "The matter is still under consideration." It is quite apparent that the firm and able letter of Mr. LAYARD produced an immediate effect on the Spanish Government, and they at once conceded the rights claimed by our Minister, on behalf of British merchants and shipowners. In regard to the Convention itself, the most important point to notice is that it does not actually touch the question of the rights claimed by Spain in the Archipelago, but is confined to causing that country to recognise the indubitable fact that at all events she has no right to levy taxes upon trade conducted at any places which she does not occupy. In a commercial point of view the Convention is all that can be required, but some diplomatic questions of importance may yet possibly arise on this subject.

A POST-OFFICE notification has been issued stating that the rates of postage from the United Kingdom to Siam and Sarawak, via Southampton, Marseilles, and Brindisi, will in future be the same as to China, the Straits, and Ceylon.

THE appointment of Mr. JOHN POPE-HENNESY as "Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Hong Kong and its dependencies" was officially announced in the Gazette of the 17th inst.

CONSULAR REPORTS ON CHINA.

Sir Walter Medhurst, in his report on the trade of Shanghai for 1875-6, in noticing that the prices of silk in the middle of December of the former year ruled 3 per cent. over home rates, attributes this state of things to various causes, one of which is the new system of telegraphing, offering the silk on the home markets, and working for reduced commissions, thus establishing a very keen competition. Another is the large and increasing production in Europe, with accumulating stock of Italian silk, and last, but not least, "forced sales." The natural result of all this is heavy losses, followed by panics and failures in the trade throughout Europe and China.

Some very valuable facts are given with reference to Chinese banks. They are, it appears, generally composed of a limited number of partners, who supply such an amount of capital as they may consider sufficient for the business they propose to transact. The largest paid-up capital of a Chinese bank in Shanghai is Tls. 100,000; others have Tls. 20,000 to Tls. 60,000, and some have not more than Tls. 2,000 to Tls. 3,000. These last confine themselves to money-changing and transactions with the shopkeepers and petty traders. The operations of the bankers with whom foreigners have dealings are in many cases very large, and all of them make the utmost possible use of their credit. Many of the partners in these banks are wealthy men, and, besides their share of the capital their money is at the command of the bank in times of pressure or to assist in carrying out its operations. They have also correspondents in the large cities near Shanghai, who send down funds when the rate of interest becomes high. The ability of the bank to meet their obligation is to a great extent insured by the custom which prevails among them of having several settled times during the year, when all liabilities on orders are discharged. The business in exchange with the provinces in the interior, and the bills drawn by Chinese against their transactions with the Treaty ports, all pass through the Shansi banks, many of which have establishments in Shanghai.

Referring to the constitution of Shanghai a port of registry in 1875, Sir W. Medhurst says that, had facilities for registration been provided for several years before, when they were first so strongly advocated by his predecessor and himself, in order to meet the extensive business in ship transfers at that time carried on, and to correct the irregularities then prevalent in the employment of the flag, the enrolment of Shanghai amongst the ports of registry would have been productive of much real benefit to the trade, and a vast number of ships now sailing under foreign flags would have been added to the roll of British registered shipping. But, notwithstanding that the institution has been thus tardy in its introduction, it has nevertheless proved of great service to proprietors of coasting craft, who, residing on the spot, are enabled to own vessels and to effect their transfer without being driven to the alternative of communicating with stations at impracticable distances. The office of registry has, moreover, its utility in exercising a careful scrutiny over sea-going vessels, which are apt, at this distance from home, to infringe Acts of Parliament, to the serious detriment of life and property.

In the report on Chinkiang, by Mr. Stronoch, the most interesting remarks are those which relate to opium. The statements which he makes are, of a very serious character. He says:—

The traffic in this article during the year received an extra stimulus from a combined action among several of the foreign merchants to evade the likin tax of thirty taels (say £7 12s.) per chest by smuggling the drug past the tax stations in armed boats, which fought the revenue boats if necessary. A number of native craft were despatched every evening from the Concession Bund, some containing no drug, and intended to act as decoys for the cruizers should these come to too close quarters with the real drug carriers. The authorities reduced the tax to sixteen taels per chest, and this measure at once put a stop to the above wholesale smuggling; but the old petty modes still continued, as if the difference had just been the price the smugglers were willing to pay in armaments and large enterprises for evading the remainder of the tax. The state of the likin revenue would appear to confirm this conjecture, for the total income was the same before and after the reduction. This fact has been a puzzle to the superiors of the local authorities, and the explanation they satisfy themselves with is that the latter have gone in league with the foreigners, a theory which is ready to hand for most occasions against an official, but which to foreign eyes fails to meet all the fact of the case. The traffic in the drug is carried on with much risk, from the fact that recovery of claims for balance of account through the authorities is almost hopeless.

THE IRON CLADS FOR JAPAN.

(DAILY TELEGRAPH.)

In his speech at the launch the Chinese Ambassador gracefully alluded to Japan as, geographically, "the England of the East." Pursuing the figure, we may be permitted to hope that the insular Empire will succeed in maintaining the same friendly attitude towards the neighbouring territory in the Pacific which Great Britain has held towards the adjacent Continent in the Atlantic, and that, according to the wish expressed by Kuo, "the navy of Japan will never fire a shot except as an ally of China." There is no reason why the two nations should not continue to preserve a spirit of mutual amity. Their political interests are wholly distinct, whilst there is nothing in their reciprocal commerce which need raise the least shadow of jealousy. The population of China is already more than sufficient to gratify the ruling ambition of any Government, and the extensive plains lying immediately westward and falling by degrees into the possession of the Celestial authorities ought to be deemed ample for the necessities of the people. Moreover, China and Japan are connected by bonds of race. The inhabitants of both countries are Mongolians, though, like the English, the Japanese are of mixed origin. They also, to a considerable extent, profess the same religion of Buddhism. The Chinese classics form an important branch of Japanese education, and the alphabetic characters in the languages of both are identical. A rupture, consequently, between communities so intimately bound together would be simply unnatural. The most notable fact in the modern history of Japan is the rapidity of her progress in conforming to Western civilisation. In this respect she has utterly outstripped her continental neighbour. When Commodore Perry, in 1852, thundered at her gates, and threatened to bombard Yeddo if the Government of the Mikado refused to enter into commercial treaties with the United States, she was still in her original condition of political and social stagnation, blindly wedded to the institutions of the past, and regarding contact with Western nations as necessarily involving shameful degradation. Lord Elgin found Japanese society in 1858 essentially a feudal structure under the oppressive sway of the Shoguns of the Tokugawa family. The Samurai, or military nobles, dominated the peasants. The Eta and the Hinin corresponded to the miserable pariahs of India, and peculation was universal among the Government officials throughout the country. Long after treaties were signed and ports were opened, resistance to foreigners continued to be manifested in murders of French and English subjects. The central authorities found themselves impotent to enforce the provisions of the Treaty with England against the fierce opposition of the Daimios and the Sako party, who worried the Government to adopt once more a policy of exclusiveness and close the ports. The revolution against foreigners at length impelled the representatives of the ancient régime to burn the Emperor's palace and behead certain of his Ministers, who were favourable to the introduction of modern ideas.

The extent to which political and social change has passed over the country within the last sixteen years, however, is unprecedented in the annals of the world. There still remains a Conservative section in the community who apprehend mischief from the speed with which old opinions and customs have been displaced by new. But the progressive element exerts the stronger influence, and to all appearance the danger of serious reaction is past. A system of education has been established on Western models, and teachers from Europe and America are engaged in directing school instruction. Normal training institutions for the preparation of teachers are also in force. Scientific agriculturists from the United States have been employed to teach the people the art of cultivating the soil, and cotton and silk mills in several cities occupy many native hands. The designations of the Eta and the Hinin, and the humiliating distinction formerly existing between them and the other classes of society, are alike cancelled. Those who bore these despised names are now enrolled in the general register of the population, and as regards their social position and the methods open to them of gaining a livelihood they are on a level with the rest of the people. The Emperor is also deeply concerned for the encouragement of female education, on the principle that without good and intelligent mothers there cannot be loyal and useful subjects, and while only the lowest classes in China emigrate from that country, large numbers of young men of superior social grade have been sent from Japan, at the public expense, to study arts and sciences in the West.

THE SULU CONVENTION AND CORRESPONDENCE.

The Convention, after recounting the fact of the restitution of the German vessels, Marie Louise and Gazelle, sets forth that, inasmuch as the Governments of Great Britain and Germany have in all their reclamations insisted upon the freedom of navigation and commerce, and of direct traffic with and in the Sulu Archipelago, the King of Spain recognises that he cannot offer facilities for commerce [ne pouvoir offrir des facilités au commerce] in the points of the said Archipelago not occupied, in compensation for duties and payments which he might demand, but that, on the contrary, he will guarantee to England, Germany, and the other Powers, in the parts of the Archipelago occupied by him, complete security for the exercise of commerce. But in the points occupied by Spain the vessels and subjects of other nations will be amenable to the ordinary duties and regulations, the nature of which is indicated in this Convention. There is to be free trade in all kinds of merchandise at all parts of the Archipelago not occupied by Spain; and at the places occupied by her Spain engages not to introduce restrictive regulations. In case Spain should occupy any other places in the Archipelago the same regulations as are stipulated for, for the places already occupied, are to be applied. Each new case of occupation is to be notified by Spain to the Governments of Great Britain and Germany.

MR. LAYARD TO SENOR CALDERON COLLANTES.

Madrid, April 10, 1876.

M. le Ministre,—In pursuance of instructions from Her Majesty's Government, I have had the honour of calling the attention of the Spanish Government on various occasions to the impediments which for some time past have been thrown in the way of British trade and shipping in the Sulu Archipelago by the Spanish authorities in the Philippine Islands, whose proceedings have caused great injury to British interests, and have led, as your Excellency is aware, to grave remonstrances on the part of Her Majesty's Government. Her Majesty's Government have again directed me to bring this subject to the serious attention of the Government of the King. They have, after mature reflection, come to the conclusion that the interference with foreign trade in the Sulu Archipelago by the Spanish authorities and naval forces cannot be justified. Whatever may be the nature of the relations existing between Spain and Sulu Her Majesty's Government believe it to be their duty to maintain in the strongest manner that those relations do not, and cannot, confer upon Spain the right to prohibit, or to interfere with, direct traffic by British and other foreign vessels with Sulu ports.

Her Majesty's Government trust that the orders which, according to your Excellency, have been recently sent to the Captain-General of the Philippines, to raise, and not to renew the blockade of the Sulu waters, will have the effect of preventing any further interference with foreign trade in the Archipelago; but, at the same time, they think it desirable that the Government of the King should be made clearly acquainted with the views which they entertain upon this subject. I venture to press those views very earnestly upon your Excellency's attention. They refer to a matter to which Her Majesty's Government attach great importance. I, consequently, feel sure that your Excellency, in your well-known desire to deal with all international questions in the most equitable and friendly spirit, will not fail to give them all the consideration that they deserve, and that no time will be lost by the Government of the King in taking such measures as may be necessary to meet the well-founded demand of Her Majesty's Government that no impediment shall be placed by the Spanish Government or by the Spanish authorities in the Philippines or elsewhere in the way of perfect freedom of access and trade with the Sulu Archipelago.—I have &c. (Signed) A. H. LAYARD.

REPLY.

Palace, April 15, 1876.

Excellency,—The sole object of the military expedition sent by the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands against the Sultan of Sulu was to oblige the latter to fulfil the treaties between him and Spain, and, if possible, to put an end to, or at least to diminish, the piracy of which that Archipelago is the hiding-place; which object is, as regards this latter part, favourable to the commercial interests of the world alike, and very, if not precisely, similar to the object of the combined action of three great Powers in China. The blockade, which, in consequence of that state of war, it was necessary to establish, has now happily ceased, and the difficulties and obstacles have, therefore, also disappeared as regards all commerce in general.

Consequently, I have not only the satisfaction of being able to give your Excellency this complete assurance, but also of assuring you that our authorities and navy will not again raise those obstacles, but that the commerce of England, like that of all other friendly nations, will find in them the most decided support, when it may require it or it can be given. It is equally satisfactory to me to agree, as I do agree with your Excellency, in considering that the relations which may exist between Spain and Sulu do not give a right to either State to prohibit or interfere with the direct traffic of British subjects and other foreigners with the ports of the said Archipelago, which traffic ought to be and shall be respected in accordance with the principles of international maritime law.—I avail, &c.

THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

The twenty-third ordinary general meeting of the shareholders in the above Bank took place on the 18th inst., at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street; W. Paterson, Esq., in the chair. Mr. W. C. Mullins, the Secretary, having read the notice convening the meeting, the report and accounts were taken as read.

The Chairman, in proposing the adoption, said he had great pleasure in doing so, as the results of the business for 1876, especially the latter half of the year, had certainly far exceeded their expectations. When they last met he had been glad to tell the shareholders that the Bank was in a better position than it had been in for many years, and it was gratifying to him to be able to add that the position at the present time was better than ever. They were doing a sound regular business, and the deposits and current accounts were increasing. This was indicated by the figures in the report, which also showed that the result of the working during the past year had exceeded 15 per cent. on the capital. He thought that the shareholders would agree that the year had been an exceptionally good one. The published accounts did not show the value of the capital abroad, and it would, therefore, be satisfactory for the shareholders to know that in pursuance of the policy inaugurated last year the amount now stood in the books at such rates of exchange that they could calculate on its full equivalent being returned in sterling bills if it were necessary to order it home. There was, however, no need to anticipate that this would have to be done. They need not fear another silver panic, and he only alluded to that of last year to explain in great measure the increase in expenditure, which was accounted for chiefly by the extraordinary cost of telegrams rendered necessary in consequence of the interruption of the lines, and in connection with Indian Government operations. He might notice that telegrams were very valuable for many purposes to a Bank like theirs, the most important of which was that of saving the Bank from losses which formerly accrued from want of information. In connection with the Bank premises account, which had been reduced by £10,000, he might explain that the property in Threadneedle-street would probably fetch more than it stood at in the books, but a reduction had been made on that in the East, especially the premises of the Bank in Bombay, which, although in a central position and only twelve years old, might not, perhaps, realise the amount at which it stood in their books. The sum of £5,000 had been placed to a superannuation fund, as it was considered only right that some provision should be made for their staff should they break down, many of them being employed in unhealthy climates. With regard to the reserve, the proprietors would be glad to see that a substantial addition had been made to it, the directors thinking that, by taking such a course, the views of the shareholders would be better met than if the dividend had been increased. Some doubts had been expressed as to the necessity of their having so many agencies, and he, therefore, thought it right to state that they had one and all contributed more or less to make up the aggregate of the profits. The year had been a year of anxiety to them all, especially to their General Manager, Mr. Gwyther, and he felt called upon to say that the shareholders were greatly indebted to him for his indefatigable exertions in conducting the business of the Bank. They had also a most efficient staff of officers, and their thanks were likewise due to them, including the agents and managers abroad, for their faithful services. With these remarks, he would propose the adoption of the report and accounts.

Mr. John Jones seconded the motion.

Mr. Bett said he thought the shareholders had good reason to be gratified by the report which was presented to them; and pointed out the advantage at which the Bank stood in comparing it with others, as it had reduced its capital practically to a gold standard. It was very important that this point should be borne in view. At the same time he thought that the Chairman should frankly tell the shareholders the rates of exchange at which the amounts were entered in the books.

The Chairman said the rates were for the rupee 1s. 9d., and for the dollar 4s. (Cheers.)

Mr. Surtees took exception to the large amount which had been passed to reserve fund, and thought that £55,000 which would have raised the figure to £100,000 would have been sufficient instead of £65,000. The amount put to reserve this year amounted to one-fourteenth of the whole capital, and he thought that the less sum might have been passed and the £10,000 used to increase the dividend to the shareholders.

Similar views were expressed by another Shareholder, who said that for three years they had only had a dividend of 5 per cent., which he hardly thought sufficient, considering the nature of the business.

Mr. Purdy said that he fully supported the action of the directors, upon which, as a banker, he considered the shareholders ought to be congratulated. They had adopted the wise and necessary policy of setting their house thoroughly in order. They had had difficult times, and had, thanks to good management, passed successfully through the fire; and he considered that it was very satisfactory that the directors had the boldness to adopt a line of policy which would now place the bank beyond doubt, and make it sound and impregnable under all circumstances. There might, for instance, be a war—indeed, there seemed to be little doubt but that there would be one. Then, again, they might have to face a difficulty as to silver; and it was only right they should put themselves in such a position that they could look at such contingencies with complacency; and might, if they desired to launch out into new business, have the necessary capital to enable them to do so. If the shareholders looked into the accounts, they would see that the gross profits for the past year were something like 25 per cent. on the capital. This was not likely always to be the case, and as the profits had been exceptionally made they might be exceptionally applied; and the manner in which they were applied was undoubtedly in the shareholders' favour, as it made the position of the Bank thoroughly secure, than which nothing could be more satisfactory. He certainly thought the shareholders ought heartily to support the board of directors.

Mr. Adam expressed his opinion strongly in favour of the reserve being increased, and suggested its being kept entirely separate. He would be glad if the Chairman would inform the meeting how it was invested. The question was, when they had the reserve, what they could do with it.

No further questions being asked, the Chairman briefly replied. He said the directors as well as the shareholders would like a larger dividend, but they felt the paramount importance of increasing the reserve, which would have the effect not only of augmenting the value of the shares but of materially adding to the stability of the Institution, and of raising it in the public estimation. (Cheers.) With regard to the question of how the reserve was employed, he said that a large portion of the Bank's funds was, as the shareholders no doubt knew, in Government securities, and on the whole it was laid out very lucratively.

The motion for passing the report and accounts was then put, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Surtees then proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, expressing his satisfaction with the explanations which had been given, and the energetic manner in which the Bank's affairs had been managed.

A separate vote of thanks to the general manager and officers was then proposed and passed with cheers, and the meeting separated.

THE CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the shareholders in the above Bank was held at their offices on the 17th inst., George G. Nicoll, Esq. in the chair. The notice convening the meeting having been read by the Secretary, and the proceedings at the last half-yearly meeting confirmed, the accounts, which are given in full further on, were taken as read.

The Chairman, in proposing the adoption of the accounts and report, said that the accounts did not present anything very particular as compared with previous years, the returns for the most part being nearly the same. The fixed deposits showed a slight improvement, and this was also the case with the item of bills payable. There was a diminution in charges of about £5,000, and with reference to this, he could observe that although the directors desired as much as possible to cut down expenses, they still recognised that this should only be done so far as it was compatible with keeping up the branches in as efficient a state as possible. The shareholders should not reckon upon further reductions in this direction, although there was one this year. He now had to pass to a more important matter, namely, the disappointment which had been experienced in respect to the returns of the last half year as compared with the previous one. The directors, he need not say, were as sorry as the shareholders could be; but he would remark upon the disadvantageous position the Bank was placed in in consequence of its having to render six-monthly accounts, as compared with the other Indian banks. No other bank was called upon to do this, and it sometimes happened that the first half-year was profitable, and the second not. This had been the case in the present instance, but the shareholders must be content with the results of the year. He would remind them that formerly only yearly accounts were made up, but that at the suggestion of a shareholder, Mr. Browne, a resolution was passed introducing the present system. At the time the directors pointed out the disadvantages of carrying out this idea, and they now saw the disadvantageous results of this system of working. At the same time the directors would not take upon themselves to alter it unless it was the unanimous opinion of the shareholders that they should do so. If, however, they were of opinion that the half-yearly accounts should be abandoned they would return to the old system. He then went on to allude to the unfortunate working of the last half-year, which he said arose in this way. At the last meeting he told the shareholders of the interruption of the wire between this and China. This had lasted some time, and had interfered with the operations of the Bank. For a long time they could not communicate with China, and the operations in that direction had in consequence been a large loss to the Bank. There was also another cause; and he would frankly confess it, namely, that the directors had unfortunately committed errors of judgment. He did not mean to conceal that the result would have been better if they had pursued a different policy; but the fluctuations this year had been so great that it was impossible entirely to avoid mistakes. The interruption however of telegraphic communication with China would not occur again, because there was now a duplicate wire. The directors hoped to benefit by the experience they had had and the mistakes which they had made. Still the result of the working of the Bank for the whole year was not altogether unfavourable. The net profit was about 12½ per cent., and considering the trying cares which those connected with banking had had, this was not altogether unfavourable as compared with past years. They had made 13½ per cent., or in other words 8 per cent. dividend, and added in the last two years £85,000 to the reserve fund. They hoped that the like results would attend their operations for the next few years. They trusted they would do as well if not better. Under all the circumstances, the result attained could not well be complained of. The Bank had never been in a more sound situation than now. The difficulties it had had to deal with had chiefly arisen from the violent fluctuations in exchange, which had been caused by the position of silver. He had explained before the adverse circumstances affecting exchange in India, and this effect had been much increased by the fluctuations in silver. He thought, however, there was nothing to apprehend for the future, but for the extraordinary amount of the metal in Germany. That was an element we could not judge of; and so long as this uncertainty prevailed, we should not be relieved of the violent fluctuations which had affected banking operations for the last few years. The silver production of the world was barely equal to the demand, and it might be taken as pretty well certain that the production of the California mines would be absorbed by America; and as the financial position of Spain and Italy improved, there would be an increased demand. As soon as we came to the end of the German supply, silver would stand in a better relation to gold than before, and things would come to their normal level. The demonetisation in Germany had been provided for at an estimate of ten marks per head for silver currency. Some thought that was not sufficient, and that it should be fifteen or twenty marks; as there had been nothing said of any change in the policy based on the estimate of ten marks, the demonetisation was likely to continue some time. There was no doubt that the stock of silver in Germany was very large, and until it was displaced the silver market must always be subject to violent fluctuation and disturbances. The Chairman concluded by saying that the Bank's business was never in a sounder condition, because the prices of India and China produce were safe; and, although they might not make such large profits as they might desire, there was very little probability of their suffering losses. He trusted that next half-year there would be a better outturn, and everything looked satisfactory, and as tending to cause their hopes to be realised. With these remarks he would propose the adoption of the report and accounts.

The Rev. Mr. Maude said he had long been a shareholder in the Bank and had never doubted that the business as carried was sound in principle. He, however, thought there was one thing which required alteration, and that was the system of rendering half-yearly accounts, the result of which was that we often laid a flattering unction to our souls on the basis of the first half-year's business, and were afterwards disappointed when the accounts were finally made up for the year. He would therefore propose that the half-yearly meetings should be abandoned.

Attention was here called to "order," the business before the meeting being the passing of the report. This the Chairman ruled was the case, but an informal discussion of the matter went on for some time, in which Dr. Thom, and some other shareholders took part. The former supported the Rev. Mr. Maude's views, suggesting, however, that perhaps, a remedy for the difficulty might be found by making the half-year's accounts as complete as possible. If such could not be done, it would be well that the half-yearly system should be abandoned, as it was a source of undoubted mischief, not so much to the Bank as to shareholders who might be under the necessity to sell. —Another Shareholder said he was at a loss to see what harm could be done by the half-yearly meetings if sufficient care were taken to make up the statement, as it could not but be to the benefit of the shareholders to know how the business was going.

After some further discussion, the Chairman said that unless the shareholders were unanimously in favour of an alteration of the system the directors would prefer that it should continue as at present; and in reply to a shareholder, said that every care should be taken to make the half-yearly statement as accurate as possible.

There being no seconder to the Rev. Mr. Maude's proposition, it was withdrawn.

The motion for passing the accounts and report, being seconded by Mr. Robertson, was then carried unanimously; and Messrs. G. G. Nicoll and J. M. Robertson being re-elected directors, the meeting separated with the usual compliment to the chair.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.

The twenty-sixth annual general meeting of the shareholders in the above-named Corporation took place on the 19th inst.; George Arbuthnot, Esq., in the chair.

In submitting the reports and accounts, the Chairman said that he had not very much to say as to the business of the past year, but would like to make a few observations. A comparison of the business of the past year with that of 1875 showed that there had been a diminution in the bills of exchange of about 1¼ million. This was owing to the depressed state of business in the East, of which all were aware; also to the caution which this Corporation had exercised, owing to this state of affairs, and to the great fluctuation in exchange, which, indeed, had been quite unprecedented. The rates had varied from 1s. 6½d. to 1s. 10d. for the rupee in India, and from 5s. to 6s. for the tael in China. These fluctuations taking place, it became a difficult calculation how to meet them. They might afford a great opportunity for successful exchange operations, but it was very difficult to foresee how they would end. Such operations might represent great gains or, on the other hand, great losses; and in such times it was dangerous to attempt to make any forecast. These circumstances had operated against the Bank, and the directors would otherwise have had the pleasure of announcing to the shareholders that they had reverted to the dividends paid previous to 1875. That they had not done so was no doubt a disappointment to the shareholders, and it was also a disappointment to the directors. He must, however, also frankly add that there had been another cause of disappointment; as they had had to make provision for a heavy loss on an account which had stood many years on their books, and had hitherto been a good one; but the profit on which through the stagnation in business in a particular part of the world had ceased. But for this they would certainly have been able to declare a dividend, which would have been more pleasant to the shareholders; but the circumstances which had gone against this were exceptional, and did not preclude the hope of reverting to the old rates in the present year, so far as they were as yet able to see. In conclusion, the Chairman stated that the Bank stood in the best possible credit, as was shown by the larger number of depositors as compared with last year. They amounted to about a quarter of a million more, taking both items, that is those bearing and those not bearing interest. He was happy to say that the managers, both at home and abroad, were fully as assiduous as ever in promoting the interests of the Bank in every possible way.

A Shareholder inquired where the account upon which the loss had been sustained was, and, in reply, the Chairman stated it was in the Mauritius.—Mr. Cannan called attention to a point to which he had referred at a previous meeting, namely, the large amount which was paid to the depositors by way of interest, which made it appear that the Bank worked more to the benefit of depositors than of the shareholders, and he proposed a resolution to the effect that the interest paid on deposits should be reduced, so that the shareholders should benefit by the profits of the Bank in a larger degree than hitherto.—This motion was seconded by Captain Cotton.

The Chairman said that the observations which had been made upon this point on a former occasion had not been overlooked; and the Board had communicated with the gentlemen who have the management of affairs abroad, and their opinion was that it would not conduce to the interest of the Bank to get rid of the deposit accounts, and in view of this opinion from their able representatives abroad as well as that of their manager here, they did not feel that the view put forward could be acted upon. He need, perhaps, hardly say that the Board had no other object in view in these operations as well as others than that of consulting the interests of the shareholders; and they thought that the comparatively low rate of interest (four per cent.) allowed by the Bank gave them an advantage, and they would therefore prefer that the resolution should not be pressed upon them.

Mr. Cannan upon this withdrew the motion, and the report and accounts, being put to the meeting, were carried unanimously.

The retiring directors, Mr. Collmann, Mr. Arbuthnot, and Sir Wm. Baynes, were then re-elected, and Mr. J. R. Robertson and Mr. Samuel Rawson, formerly of China, were elected auditors, the latter being proposed by Sir Rutherford Alcock.

After a hearty vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. Cannan, to the chairman, directors, manager, and agents was passed, the meeting separated.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALASIA AND CHINA TELEGRAPH COMPANY, LIMITED.

The seventh ordinary general meeting of this company was held on the 18th inst., at the National Safe Deposit Company's Buildings, Queen Victoria-street, under the presidency of Mr. John Pender, M.P.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, which was taken as read, said that at the last meeting, namely in October, he had stated they were then hourly expecting news of the repair of the Madras and Penang Cable, and that they had scarcely left the room when this news actually arrived. He was glad to be able to state that the cables were all in a satisfactory condition at present, and he hoped that the Company would be able to work at less expense as to repairs than they had been able to do hitherto. Going into the accounts, he stated that the gross earnings for the half-year ending 31st December last amounted to £110,523, being an increase of £1,157 over the corresponding half of the previous year. The expenses of the similar period were £59,267, or an increase of £17,752, this being in a great measure owing to the large amount of repairs that had to be executed. They had also opened two new stations for the New Zealand cable, and had to keep up a second maintenance ship. The interest upon debentures was increased by £3,933, in consequence of the issue of those unissued at the end of 1875. The total net revenue was £51,255, or a decrease of £16,596, out of which it was proposed to pay a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and carry a balance of £6,011 to reserve. This was in spite of the long interruption of seven months to the Madras-Penang cable. The Rangoon-Penang Cable, sanctioned at an extraordinary general meeting held on the 16th December, 1875, had been successfully laid on the 8th instant, and the directors trusted that, affording as it did an alternative communication between India and the Straits and China, it would prevent a loss of revenue in the future similar to that which the company had lately sustained. The Australian people having experienced the benefits of telegraphic communication, found that it was most inconvenient to have it interrupted at any time, and the colonists had therefore held a conference, at which it was resolved that they must be secured against such a thing, and that if a double cable were laid it must be done by pro rata contributions from the different Colonies in proportion to the population. If the colonists thus found a cable an arrangement could doubtless be made for the Eastern Extension Company to work it. It was hoped that before many years telegraphic communication would be established with the Cape Colonies, a change which would do much towards bringing the different parts of the would into connection with this country and the great centres of civilisation. Mr. Pender animadverted upon the little aid which Government afforded to telegraphic enterprise, and the fact that they were so slow to recognise the great advantages they gained from the telegraph. In fact, instead of aiding the companies every Government they had to deal with contrived to have their despatches sent at half price. However, telegraphic property generally was improving, and becoming a more stable mode of investment; as the mode of repairing the lines when damaged was now better understood, and if a line did not do at one place, from rocks or other cause, it could be shifted to another.

Mr. Massey, M.P., vice-chairman, having seconded the adoption of the report and the payment of the dividend in accordance therewith, a brief discussion followed.

The Chairman, in reply, said if they had been free from repairs and the loss of income consequent on the breakage of the cable there would have been a difference to the company of £57,000. As they had been so unfortunate with their breakage, he thought it better to leave the question of increased dividends alone for the present. It had afforded them much pleasure to announce the successful laying of the Rangoon cable. The report was then unanimously adopted. On the motion for the re-election of the retiring directors a further discussion took place. Mr. Newton objected to there being so many directors, and argued in favour of an amalgamation between the Eastern and the Eastern Extension Companies, "by which another great step towards the completion of the Globe Company's scheme would be effected." Mr. Abbott spoke of the advantages of such an amalgamation, which would in future remove all unpleasant discussion as to the excessive number of directors on the two Boards.

The Chairman, in reply, said the company consisted of several companies, and at the time of the amalgamation it was understood that the directors should continue on the Board of the united company "till they dropped off from circumstances beyond their control." (Laughter.) There were difficulties in the way of an amalgamation between the Eastern and the Eastern Extension Companies, and they had also found many objectors to such an amalgamation, and he did not think it would be wise to urge this amalgamation at present. The saving to be effected would arise only from the number of directors being fewer. The retiring directors—Sir T. Fairbairn, Lord W. M. Hay, and Viscount Monck—and the retiring auditors were then re-elected, a vote of thanks to the Chairman and directors terminating the proceedings.

The report of the directors of the Oriental Bank Corporation states that :—

The accounts show a net profit of £158,329 9s. 9d. (including £9,069 17s. 4d. brought forward from the last account), after defraying current expenses, and providing for all bad and doubtful debts. A dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year ended June 30 was paid in November last, and the directors now propose to pay a like amount, which absorbs £150,000 of the net profit, and leaves £8,329 9s. 9d. to be carried to the credit of next year's account. The meeting will have to appoint two gentlemen as auditors for the present year, and the Court cannot give this intimation without an expression of regret that the death of Mr. T. W. L. Mackean has deprived the shareholders of the services of a gentleman who was in every way most highly qualified for the trust which he had held for the past ten years.

The directors take this opportunity of informing the shareholders that in order to meet the necessity that has arisen for increased accommodation for the transaction of the Bank's business, they have secured very eligible premises in Threadneedle-street, corner of Bishopsgate-street, into which they expect to remove early next month.

The directors' report of the Singapore Gas Company for the half-year ending 31st December, 1876, to be presented to the shareholders at the meeting on the 24th inst. is as follows :—

The directors have the satisfaction of reporting continued progress in the lighting of Singapore, for particulars of which they refer to the report from their engineer and manager, Mr. E. J. Wells. The directors going out of office by rotation are Messrs. Henry Palfrey Stephenson and Frederick Alexander Malcolm Nicol ; and these gentlemen, being eligible for-election, offer themselves for the support of the shareholders. The present auditors, Messrs. William Thomas Morrison and Alfred Williams, retire from office according to the articles, and, being eligible for re-election, offer themselves to the shareholders for that purpose. The balance-sheet to 31st December, 1876, appended to this report, shows the financial position of the company. The directors have written off for depreciation of works and plant, and off the expenses of first establishment, as per balance-sheet, at the rate of 1 per cent. per annum for the present half-year, and ½ per cent. per annum for the half-years ending December 31st, 1874, and June 30th, 1875, during which half-years the profits would not admit of the usual amount being written off on this account. The profit for the half-year after writing off these sums amounts to £2,650 9s. 7d., which, together with £167 4s. 9d., the unappropriated profit of the preceding half-year, makes the available balance £2,817 14s. 4d.; out of this sum the directors recommend the declaration of a dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, less income-tax, on the amounts paid up on the preference and original capital ; the balance of £626 18s. 3d. to be carried forward to the profit of the succeeding half-year. The dividend to be payable on May 21.

The Anglo-American Telegraph Company have declared an interim dividend for the quarter ended 31st ult., of ½ per cent. on the Ordinary, and 1 per cent. on the Preferred Stock. To the renewal fund £25,000 is placed, and £26,000 (including spare cable) is carried forward. This distribution compares with one of 1½ per cent. on the Ordinary, and 2½ per cent. on the Preferred Stock for the same period last year, when £66,000 was carried forward. The rate for messages by both the Anglo-American Telegraph Company and the Direct United States Cable Company will be raised to 3s. per word on the 1st May.

The directors of the Union Steamship Company recommend the payment of a dividend of £1 per share for the half-year ended the 28th of February last.

The directors of the City of Buenos Ayres Tramways Company have issued their yearly report and accounts. The dividend recommended is 3s. 6d. per share free of income-tax, being equal to 7 per cent. per annum, and £1,000 is added to the contingent fund, thus raising it to £22,434.

The directors of the Standard Bank of British South Africa have decided to recommend to the proprietors at the ordinary general meeting, to be held on the 27th inst., a dividend of 25s. per share, and a bonus of 5s. per share, being together at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and to carry £20,000 to the reserve fund. The rate of distribution is the same as at this time last year.

The directors of the Darjeeling Company have recommended the declaration of a 7 per cent. dividend from the profits of 1876, at the annual ordinary meeting to be held on the 30th inst.

The directors of the Mercantile Bank of River Plate (Limited) have issued their report for the year ending Dec. 31 last. They state that in valuing the assets they have written off all debts ascertained to be bad, made provision for the estimated loss on doubtful accounts and depreciated securities, and, as regards properties at present unsaleable or only realisable at prices which it would be injudicious to accept, have stated the values at the figures at which they were taken over by the Bank. They do not, however, expect that these figures will be realised, and look for a considerable eventual loss under this head. Since the last report the liabilities have been reduced by £998,682 and now amount to about £460,000. The balance-sheet gives the amount written off for bad and doubtful debts as no less than £701,156, and the loss through depreciation of currency at Buenos Ayres, as £33,237.

The Tea Market still remains extremely flat and lagging. There have been large sales, but rates are little altered, all teas under 10d. continuing very low. For really good classes there has been some slight demand for current wants before the new teas come forward. Silk is unaltered. There have been reports of bad weather for the European crop, but prices have not responded.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London during the week which ended on the 14th inst. was 3,878,721lb., which was 1,023,106lb. more than was cleared during the corresponding week of last year. Of this quantity 2,560,525lb. went for home consumption, 349,015lb. for exportation, 2,712lb. for ships' stores, and 966,469lb. went coastwise to various outports, 216,061lb. having been for immediate exportation. With the solitary exception of the quantity taken for stores, each of the foregoing items was largely in excess last week of the quantities taken for the same purposes during the corresponding week of last year. No less than £64,013 was paid in London for duty during the week, the 9th inst. having shown the heaviest clearance of any day this year. Usually, merchants hold back as much as possible for some time previous to the Budget night, but this year the reverse course was taken, so as to provide, it may be assumed, against a possible increase of duty. The sum paid for duty during the corresponding week of 1876 was £46,995.

Tenders were received at the Bank of England on the 18th inst. for £265,000 bills on India, of which £165,000 were on Calcutta, and £100,000 on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta for telegraphic transfers at 1s. 9⅞d. per rupee will receive about 19 per cent., and on Bombay 39 per cent. of the amount tendered for—tenders above these amounts receiving in full. Last week the minimum accepted was 1s. 8 15-16d. per rupee, there being, therefore, a rise equal to about 3 per cent.

The amount of bullion per P. and O. steamer Hydaspes, from Southampton, April 19, was :—In silver, to Penang, £17,500, to Singapore, £36,000, to Hong Kong, £35,000, to Shanghai, £21,360. Total £109,860.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Telegrams from Hong Kong advise the opening of the market for the new season's 1877-8 Tayshan Congou, Canton district; and the total export from all China to date is 165,000,000 lbs., the largest quantity ever received in one season, and which will no doubt long be remembered by those who have had a deep stake in the leaf, for the losses have lasted through the season, culminating at the present time to 15 to 40 per cent. From the early opening of the Canton market it would appear shippers will not be denied, despite the depression ruling amongst importers; but the home trade continues flourishing, the good value in Congou at 7d. to 10d. per lb., at the latter figure teas with Pekoe flavour offering a safer risk to buyers than for some time past; and there would be a large business at these prices were it not known that an immense quantity of good common is still held by one or two importers, which will be offered at public sale without reserve. The decline in silver also indicates that we shall again receive large supplies from China early in the season, shipments having already commenced from Canton. The quotation for good common Congou is 7d. per lb., which figure appears low; but if the China exchanges continue at about the present rates, the supplies will be practically unlimited.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Our market shows no improvement during the past week. The continued public sales without reserve keep business by private contract very quiet. Prices this week, for grades just above good common, have ruled rather lower, but all good kinds are fairly maintained, as they are not so much pressed for sale. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain firm; common to fair common have sold at about last week's prices, good common showing no change; fair kinds have sold from 9d. to 10d. per lb.; medium from 11d. to 1s. 2d., being firmer prices; good to fine meet with a moderate demand at previous rates; finest are firm. Pak Lin kinds: The few sales made show no change in prices. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair common remain as before; good common to fair kinds at 8d. to 9½d. per lb. have sold lower at public sale; fair to good medium are much as last week; good to fine kinds remain firm, as also finest, but sales have only been on a moderate scale. New-make kinds: Common to fair have been inquired for good kinds are also wanted with blackish leaf, but the brown-leaf kinds with good quality are heavy of sale. In Oolongs but little has been done; the few sold at public sale have been without change in prices. In Souchongs there is no new feature to notice. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: Common kinds have been more freely offered, and prices are ¼d. to ½d. per lb. lower; fair to good are only saleable at comparatively low rates. Orange Pekoes show no material change. Foochow Capers are dull of sale. Orange Pekoes: Common kinds have sold rather easier, but good to fine have been firm at fully previous prices. Green Teas: The good qualities have been fairly maintained, but common to medium sell slowly, even at the low rates current.

The public sales have comprised 21,063 packages, all offered and sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

SILK.

There is nothing whatever doing in the market, and all appear to be waiting for news of the prospect of the European crops. Already telegrams respecting bad weather have been received with attention, and although they have not been followed by increased business, as they would have been formerly, still they will probably tend to steady prices somewhat. Deliveries continue on the same small scale as last month, and are from 1st to 18th inst.:—China, 786; Canton, 263; Japan, 308; Bengal, 55; Total, 1,412 bales.

After our last report the downward movement in prices was prolonged, Plantation Ceylon selling at a further decline of 6d. to 1s., making the total fall for the week ended the 14th inst. 3s. to 4s. per cwt. During the present week there was little or no change in the tone of the market until the 18th inst., when the Dutch sale went off, on the average, rather below valuations, good ordinary Java selling at 49½c. to 50c. (equal to about 82s. 6d. per cwt.), which increased the dulness in this market, and the public sales went off flatly at a further decline of 1s. for Ceylon, plantation selling, triage at 78s. to 86s., common to colourly small at 87s. to 92s. 6d., low middling grey at 93s. to 95s., middling at 95s. 6d. to 98s., good middling to fine middling at 99s. to 101s., bold at 102s. to 113s., pea-berry at 102s. to 106s. 6d. Only very small quantities of Native Ceylon have been sold, small and broken at 70s. to 72s. 6d., good ordinary at 80s., pea-berry at 85s. 6d. to 87s. Of 792 bags Manila offered barely 100 bags sold, fine ordinary pale greenish at 83s., the remainder being bought in, Indan at 80s. to 83s., mixed kinds at 74s. to 80s. Of 136 bags Singapore offered, 76 bags picked bally sold at 73s.

The Dutch Trading Company's public sale of 100,397 bags Java held on the 18th inst. in Amsterdam commenced flatly at a decline of about 1c. for good ordinary kinds and 2c. to 2½c. for good, but afterwards improved and closed equal to valuations; good ordinary Java sold at 49½c. to 50c., against 52c. to 52½c. in March, and 52½c. to 53½c. in February. Subjoined is the result in detail:—

COIR GOODS.—Supplies have recently accumulated, and the public sales this week presented perhaps the largest quantity of Yarn ever known, the total amounting to 8,109 bales 510 tons, with 1,468 bales 13 tons Fibre, and 45 tons Rope. The proportion of damaged and small lots was very large, and the catalogues were of unusual length. The demand for Yarn was, however, about equal to the supply, the competition being generally good, and nearly the whole was disposed of. Prices of all medium to good, although irregular, were about equal to the previous sales, common being slightly cheaper, and coarse roping fully 20s. per ton lower. Fibre declined 20s. to 30s. per ton. Of Yarn 55 bales Ceylon sold, low medium to fine at £30 to £43 10s.; 330 tons CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction of 131 bales offered about 50 bales sold at easier rates, mottled £5 10s. to £6 5s., white at £7 10s. to £7 12s. 6d. for rather coarse wide, and £9 7s. 6d. for middling.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Quietness has again been the prevailing feature of the market, the uncertainty regarding the outbreak of war still causing many buyers to hold quite aloof. At the same time from some quarters there have been more offers, and where sellers have met them with moderate reductions on current quotations, a fair amount of business has resulted, principally in Grey Goods suitable for China. In Yarns there have been but few transactions, and at lower prices.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

A NEW CHANNEL STEAMER.—A new twin steamer for the Channel Steamship Company, built upon the same principle as the Castalia, but differing in important points of construction, and intended to secure speed as well as prevent sickness, was launched from Leslie's yard on the Tyne on the 14th inst. This vessel is named the Express, and is composed of two complete hulls, 300 feet long, from the inner sides of which rises an arch, bearing an immense superstructure, containing cabins and saloons, and occupying nearly the entire width of the hull, and almost the whole length of the bow. The vessel steams either way, as there are complete and independent engines in each hull. The total power is 5,000 horse.

AN inquiry has been held at Hull into the loss of the Atlantic liner Colombo, whilst bound from Hull to New York. She was a vessel of about 2,500 tons, carried a crew of forty-three hands, and is a missing ship. The inquiry chiefly affected the nature and stowage of the cargo and the construction of the vessel, and at its conclusion it was announced that the Court had not elicited any evidence that could enable it to offer any definite opinion as to the cause that led to the loss of the vessel.

ALL past performances of Transatlantic steamers have been eclipsed by the White Star steamer Germanic, Captain Kennedy. From the time she left Liverpool until her arrival at New York only seven days and ten hours elapsed, and we believe this to be the fastest voyage on record.

THE steamer Tagus, which is reported to have left Oporto for Liverpool on the 3rd inst., is some days overdue, and apprehension for her safety is being felt. It is feared in many quarters that she is lost, though the owners are of opinion that her machinery has broken down, and adverse winds prevailing, she had been driven out of the track of steamers. She is comparatively a new vessel, and hitherto has made her passages very quickly.

THE Austrian Government, through the Foreign-office, has forwarded a sum of £100 to the Board of Trade, to be disposed of as it may think best for the benefit of the inhabitants of the island of St. Kilda, in recognition of their kindness to the Austrian crew recently shipwrecked on the island.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 18, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

Presented at the Twenty-Third Ordinary General Meeting, April 18, 1877.

The General Balance-sheet and Profit and Loss Account, now submitted to the Shareholders, show that, after providing for all Bad and Doubtful Debts, the net Profit for the year ended 30th December last, inclusive of £6,989 7s. 2d. brought forward, amounted to £119,307 0s. 9d., whereof £20,000 was absorbed by the Interim Dividend declared last October, leaving an available balance of £99,307 0s. 9d. Of this sum, the Directors propose, in pursuance of the policy already approved by the Shareholders, to transfer £65,000 to the Reserve, thereby increasing that Fund to £110,000. They further recommend that a Dividend of 3½ per cent. be declared for the past half-year (free of Income-tax), making, with the distribution in October last, a Dividend of 6 per cent. for the year. There will then remain a balance of £6,307 0s. 9d. to be carried to Profit and Loss New Account.

The Directors deemed it expedient, previous to closing the accounts, to write off £10,000 for depreciation of the Bank's Premises abroad. They have also thought it desirable to set aside £5,000 for the creation of an Officers' Superannuation Fund.

Mr. James Whittall, lately a partner of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., of China, has consented to join the Board, and the Shareholders will be asked to confirm his election as soon as the Deed of Settlement permits.

The Directors retiring by rotation, Mr. Frederick William Heilgers and Mr. William Christian, present themselves for re-election.

Mr. Owen Lewis and Mr. William Vanner, having completed their term of office as Auditors, again tender their services.

Summary of News from the Far East.

Lamentable as the details already published concerning the famine in the North of China have been, the present mail brings far more harrowing facts than any which have yet come to light. According to a correspondent at Chefoo, the luckless people, driven almost wild with hunger, have in many cases eaten the thatch off the roofs of their houses, while some have kept themselves alive by devouring fuel-leaves, and others have died for want even of these; untiring efforts have been made in Shanghai to relieve these sufferings. Much excitement has been created in Tientsin among the officials by the recent revolt of the soldiery, the question being asked, "Who is to blame?" and rumour fixing upon General Chou, who, it seems, was responsible for the soldiers being squeezed out of the wages due to them. As, however, risings among soldiery on this account are by no means uncommon in China, the matter will probably be hushed up after a short time, unless further disturbances take place. The proclamation concerning the Chefoo Convention has been posted up in a permanent form at Tientsin. According to the North China Herald a curious result has been brought about by the action of the Chinese authorities with reference to lekin, one immediate effect of the abolition of the tax on foreign imports within the Settlements having been a declaration by the native merchants in the city and suburbs that unless they too were exempted they would all remove into the foreign settlements. The movement was reported to have spread even to Soochow, where the people said they did not see why they should pay lekin if Shanghai does not. Lekin, it is justly pointed out, is essentially a war contribution, and cannot be maintained with a semblance of justice at the present time, though of course the mandarins cling to it on account of the facilities for squeezing which it offers. The laying out of the foreign settlement at Ichang led to some little misunderstanding with natives. The people got an idea that they would not be paid for their land, although told they would be compensated in due course, and they began to throw stones at the foreign visitors; they were, however, soon quieted, and no harm was done. The Hong Kong papers contain a despatch embodying the reply of the Secretary of State for the Colonies with reference to the C. O. Whitmore case, which caused so much sensation a short time back. The Harbour-master's returns for 1876 show an increase in the shipping.

The present mail does not bring later advices from Japan than those already to hand via the United States, and embodied in our last issue.

The details of the arrest of ex-Sultan Abdullah are reported, also that Yusuf is to be installed as Sultan at Perak, under the guidance and direction of the British Resident. The Tamil Christians presented an address to Lady Jervois and her daughters. Commander Wilcox has taken command of H.M.S. Juno as senior officer. At the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 23rd March the Bill for Chinese Immigrants was read a third time, after some opposition from Mr. Reade and Mr. McArthur.

Our advices from this port by the present mail extend to the 13th March, and are only one day later than those received vid San Francisco on the 17th inst., and published in our last issue.

TIENTSIN.

The North China Herald correspondent, writing under date of March 7, says:—

The recent rising of the troops has created quite an excitement, I hear, in official circles, and raises the question, where lies the blame? I believe that General Chou comes in for the largest share, so far, at least, as squeezes go, but it is of little avail for the pot to call the kettle black. The matter of army reform is a very serious question for this corrupt Government to deal with. It would be a matter of interest to know how the present case will be met; with charges of embezzlement, some troops gone and sowing disaffection doubtless, and others desirous of leaving, the authorities will not have an easy task. The Viceroy intends starting in a few days to inspect the camps at Ta Ming Fu, in the southern neck of this province, from which place he will return via the Grand Canal to Tientsin. He need not be looked for here for about three weeks probably.

The proclamation relating to the Chefoo Convention has now been posted in a permanent form in and about the city. It is written on strong paper and pasted on boards, and apparently put up to remain till purposely taken down.

CHEFOO.

The North China Daily News Correspondent speaking of the distress from famine in Shangtung says:—

It is reported everywhere that many eat the rotton Kao-liang stalks from the roofs of their houses. Of their eating fuel leaves there is no doubt; thousands eat them and thousands more die because they cannot get even that. Villages of 500 families report 300 dead of starvation. Out of a family of four three are dead, and the fourth little boy is under my care now. Who is dead or dying is the subject of everybody's conversation, and the worst is yet to come, I fear. The number of those who go daily for gruel to soup-kitchens is so great that they only get six or eight cash worth each. Many have had nothing but this to live on for months, and even young men of twenty are getting so weak that they cannot walk ten li for it. Speaking after careful consideration, and in the language of sober, sad truth, it is said that one-half of the people in the villages of Lui-kü will not live to see the wheat crop.

NANKING.

The Sinpao publishes an order from the Viceroy of Nanking that mulberry-trees shall be passed free through the Customs to Wuchang. The Che-hsien of Kung-ngan is anxious to introduce the manufacture of silk in that neighbourhood, to improve the condition of the people, and has contributed and raised money to buy 10,000 grafts of mulberry-trees, and twice that number of young trees, in the province of Chekiang, and begs that they may be allowed to come free from imposts. Orders to this effect have accordingly been given to the Custom-houses of both the Two Kiang and Hu-kwang.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 16th March; the French mail from London Jan. 26 was received on the 14th March.

Most energetic and creditable efforts have been made by the residents, both native and foreign, in the Settlements of Shanghai, to afford relief to the sufferers from the famine in the north. The harrowing description of the distress given by the correspondent of the North China Daily News evoked the strongest feeling of sympathy. A meeting was promptly held at the Custom House, a committee formed, and before the mail left as much as Tls. 4,000 had been collected and remitted to Chefoo; no less than Tls. 1,000 was collected by one of the English missionaries among the Chinese in a single afternoon, and similar efforts were being made by the Catholic missionaries in the French settlement. During the last two months Mr. Ton-King-Sing' a well-known Singapore Chinese gentleman, had collected Tls. 30,000 and 10,000 dresses, which had been forwarded to the north through the medium of the Shangtung Guild. All classes and nationalities have, in fact, heartily co-operated, and the work has been set on foot in a thoroughly systematic way, the Settlement being divided into districts, within each of which certain gentlemen have undertaken to receive and collect subscriptions.

The charge of the British Consulate has again been taken by Mr. W. M. Cooper, during the absence of Mr. Davenport, who has gone to Wuhu to make arrangements for the opening of that port.

The Chinese authorities have erected a memorial hall and tablet, with a boundary wall over and around the grave at Soonkiong, of the late General Ward, who took so prominent a part in the suppression of the Taiping Rebellion. Mr. Myers, the U. S. Consul General, was present at the ceremonies, which were conducted in accordance with Chinese procedure in such cases, the deceased having attained high grade as a mandarin, and having been naturalised as a Chinese subject.

The annual meeting of shareholders in the S. S. N. Co. is called for the 23rd March. The Chinese have already paid up Tls. 1,200,000 on account of their purchase, and it is understood that a first instalment will be paid to shareholders at the end of this month. The Daily News names Tls. 70 as the probable amount.

Mr. Hart has been elected chairman of the new Municipal Council, and Mr. Lavers vice-chairman. The various sub-committees have been appointed, and the police force, as usual, inspected. It numbered 100, and the men are reported to have presented a remarkably smart appearance. The chairman of the outgoing Council, Mr. Krauss, at the close of the inspection complimented Mr. Penfold, the superintendent, and the inspectors on their good conduct and efficiency. A proposal has been made to the Municipal Council to make a new road betweeen the Fubkien and Hupeh-roads, across certain lots, the owners of which will cede the necessary land at half its assessed value. The Council, however, do not think the road is sufficiently necessary to justify them in going to any expense to secure it. The question of extending the Yuenfong-road is again raised, and the Council are willing to do so if all the land required can be got at half its assessed value. It is proposed to have a deed of settlement drawn up defining the powers of the trustees of the General Hospital, and the general status of that institution under the present arrangements.

A meeting of American citizens, held at the U.S. Consulate, and presided over by Mr. Myers, U.S. Consul General, took into consideration the injury done to American interests by the rigid carrying out of American shipping laws, which require that the names of the vessels should be legibly painted on the stern and that the captains and mates should be American citizens. Instructions to carry out these rules strictly had, it appears, been received from Peking. No formal resolution was passed; but it was understood that the Consul-General would write a despatch to Mr. Seward, the U.S. Minister, expressing the views of the meeting.

We take the following items from the North China Herald:—

During the voyage of the British barque Joyce Phillips from Sydney to this port, the chief mate, David Williams, was accidentally shot by the captain, Henry Wilkinson. On the forenoon of the 22nd February, when the vessel was about one hundred miles off the Loochoo Islands, the captain took a revolver to pieces to clean it. In putting it together again, he was unable to find the proper place for one of the springs, and after working at it for a couple of hours, he loaded each chamber and put the revolver away. In the afternoon it occurred to him that the spring belonged to the trigger, and with the assistance of the mate he succeeded in placing it in its right position. While they were sitting talking together on a chest in the cabin, the captain having the revolver in his hand, one of the chambers was discharged, the ball entering the mate's body just below the ribs on the right side. The captain fancies he must have lowered the trigger unthinkingly. All efforts to save the mate's life were futile, and he died the following day. While conscious he made a statement in the presence of five members of the crew, saying the occurrence was an accident, and exonerating the captain from all blame. What he said was taken down in writing, and signed by each member of the crew present; he was too weak to sign it himself. An inquiry has been held into the circumstances of his death by Mr. Mowat, at H.B.M.'s Consulate, who after hearing the evidence of the captain, the second mate, and the steward, was convinced that the death was purely accidental, and that it was unnecessary for further proceedings to be had.

We have a programme of the Spring Race Meeting, to be held on the 30th April, and 1st and 2nd May next. It comprises eight events on the first, seven on the second, and seven on the third day.

We are informed that there is no possibility of the Shanghai Rowing Club sending a crew to compete in the interport four-oar race at the forthcoming Kobe Regatta. At the last meeting of the Shanghai Rowing Club it was agreed to accept the invitation of the Kobe committee, but the captain who was then appointed now finds, on inquiry, that none of the members who were willing to form a crew can leave their business at the necessary time.

The American barque Agate arrived here on the 12th March in a damaged condition. She left New York on the 25th of October, and made a favourable passage to the Cape of Good Hope, entering the Ombay Passage on the 18th of January. A week later she struck a coral reef, not marked on the chart, extending four miles and a half to the southward and eastward of Boe Island. Her rudder was carried away and the gudgeons started; and her keel and bottom were much damaged by bumping on the reef, where she remained five days. It was not until about a hundred tons of cargo had been jettisoned that she floated, and it was then found that she leaked and was making between seven and eight inches of water within the hour. For the remainder of the passage it was necessary to keep the pumps constantly working; and the wonder is that she has succeeded in reaching her destination so well. Notwithstanding her misfortune, she made the passage in 133 days—very good under the circumstances.

The German steamer Hesperia arrived this week from Hamburg, having as passengers three officers and thirty-four marines for the gunboat Cyclops, whose present crew will shortly start for home.

It is expected that H.B.M.'s gunboat Lapwing will shortly be ready for sea. She has been provided with a new keel, a new false keel, new rolling chocks (commonly called bilge-pieces) and several new planks in her bottom. Her machinery has also been overhauled and made complete. When she leaves here it is thought that she will go to Japan.

The U.S. gunboat Palos was to leave on the 8th March for Ningpo, to be on hand at the opening of Wenchow.

FOOCHOW.

The panic with reference to Formosa has subsided, and the Chinese express themselves free from further apprehensions as to any designs on the part of Spain on the island. It is reported that Mr. P. Giquel is to be made a mandarin of the first-class.

A correspondent of the Herald describes a recent visit to the coal mines at Kelung, and gives a very encouraging report concerning the progress of that promising industry. A few months ago the work received a considerable stimulus by the arrival of a body of English miners. The machinery employed is said to be of the very best description, and it is hoped that ere long the production of coal will equal about 200 tons per diem. As the coal fields are barely three miles from the place of shipment—a little north of Kelung harbour—and a tramway runs from the north of the mines direct to this jetty, the cost of transport from the pit is comparatively trifling; and it is therefore probable that this useful undertaking will prove to be a most welcome source of income to the Provincial Government. Hundreds of Chinese, many from a considerable distance, arrive daily to watch the working of the mines and the coal-laden tramway cars running with terrific speed down the hill-side to the harbour. Ting Futai takes the greatest interest in the enterprise, and on the occasion of his recent visit minutely inspected the machinery and mining plant. To Mr. Hobson, lately Commissioner of Customs at Tamsui, much of the credit is, we are told, due, for having brought the mines to their present efficient working state. It is, therefore, to be regretted on public grounds that that gentleman should be removed from such a useful sphere of labour.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 22nd March; no later mail from London had arrived out.

The progress of the general trade of the Colony appears to be satisfactory, notwithstanding the complaints which are made respecting its diminished profitableness. From the report of the Harbour-master for 1876, which has been published, it appears that there were 2,113 more vessels of all kinds, measuring 338,117 tons, that year than the preceding, and the junk trade showed an increase of 1,917 vessels, and 123,724 tons.

A despatch has been received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies by the Governor, in answer to the representations which were made at the public meeting convened some time back with reference to the C. O. Whitmore case. It will be recollected that an unfortunate man died in consequence of brutal treatment which he received on board that vessel, which was under the American flag, but that, in consequence of the suspension of the extradition treaty with the United States it was impossible to bring the offenders to justice. Lord Carnarvon, in his despatch, calls attention to the renewal of the treaty since that time, regrets the escape of persons apparently guilty of crimes revolting to humanity, and approves the sentiments conveyed in the resolutions passed at the meeting.

The Daily Press of the 21st March says, that the Chinese gunboat Shen-chi, which arrived the day before, was to leave again on the 22nd, to be present at the opening of the new port of Pak-Hoi. She took on board two customs-officers and a Chinese gunboat's crew. If she arrived before April 1, the port would be opened that day, but if not, it would not be opened until her advent.

Five Chinamen, who in the early part of 1874 were found guilty of murder but were strongly recommended to mercy by the jury who tried them, have been released from prison, and appeared in the Supreme Court to express their thanks for the clemency shown to them. The murder took place at a village in Kowloong, but it appears that it was committed under great provocation, without premeditation, and in consequence of immoral acts on the part of the murdered man. On these grounds Sir Arthur Kennedy had commuted the capital sentence passed upon the men.

Mr. J. J. Francis has been admitted upon the roll of barristers of the Supreme Court.

MACAO.

A mêlee has occurred at the above place between the sailors of the Portuguese gunboat Tipo, which was being repaired there, and some of the soldiers of the garrison. There seems to have been some bad feeling between them, consequent on their having been on different sides during a revolt at Goa, under the Governorship of Viscount St. Jannario, some years ago. A pretty smart scuffle took place; two policemen were badly wounded, and it was found that the sergeant in charge was in complicity with the rioters. The emeute was, however, put down by military aid, and at latest dates all was quiet.

BORNEO.

SARAWAK.

The Gazette has the following items:—

We have after a somewhat long interval been able to welcome one of Her Majesty's ships at Sarawak; H.M.'s Juno, Commander Anson, anchored at the Moratabas entrance of this river on March 14, and sent up a steam launch on the same evening. The next day the commander with a party of officers visited Kuching, where they remained until the 17th. They were entertained at Astana. The very unpropitious weather prevented them, we fear, from seeing very much of Kuching, but we hope that what they did see left a favourable impression. Their Highnesses the Rajah and Ranee paid a visit to the Juno on the morning of the 17th, and remained on board to breakfast.

Their Highnesses the Rajah and Ranee visited the Mission School for the purpose of distributing the prizes to the successful boys. Besides four prizes awarded to the boys who were first in their classes there were others given by his Lordship the Bishop to the younger children, who had borne the best characters during the past year. The first prize, a copy of Miss Jacob's "Life of the Rajah Sir James Brooke," was awarded to Ah Thong; Ah Chong, Si Drass, and Ah Kong were also the recipients of prizes. Accompanying the distribution of the prizes, a few remarks were addressed to the boys by the Rajah, pointing out the advantages they were enjoying.

The school now numbers forty-five scholars—ten of whom are Dyaks. It has for some time now had the advantage of the service of a new master, Mr. Bayley, since whose arrival there had been a marked difference in the appearance and general deportment of the boys. It is also worth remark to what an extent the singing-class has improved both in compass of voice as well as in the pronounciation of English words. The improvement is more particularly noticeable in church. Singing may not appear to be a very important branch of education, but it materially tends to raise the general tone of those who learn to take an interest in it, and gives them an occupation apart from study, when in its place they might resort to more frivolous and perhaps even evil modes of recreation.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 29th March; the French mail from London Feb. 23 was received on the 27th March. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

Replies have been received to the despatch of his Excellency the Governor concerning Sultan Abdullah, Sultan Ismail, and the other Perak Chiefs said to have been implicated in the murder of Mr. Birch and the disturbances in Perak. These replies amount very nearly to an adoption of the recommendations of his Excellency, based upon the report of the Commission of Inquiry into the matter, which, it will be remembered, consisted of Judge Phillipo, Mr. Plunket, and Mr. Paul; and the result is that Sultan Abdullah, the Lacksamana, the Shabandar and the Muntri of Perak are to be deported from the Native States. Sultan Ismail and his party are to remain in exile at Johore, his Highness the Maharajah having undertaken to secure their abstinence from interference in the affairs of Perak. Yusuf is to be acknowledged as the native ruler of Perak "dum se bene gesserit," and the Government will be carried on, under the advice of the Resident, in his name.

Digitized by Google

In pursuance of these intentions, Sultan Abdullah, the Laksamana, and the Shabandar, who have been residing here under supervision for the last three months, were arrested and conveyed to H.M. Civil Jail for safe custody until the place to which they are to be deported is determined on. Suitable allowances for their maintenance will be provided for out of the Perak revenues. The Muntri of Larut has also been sentenced to the same fate, and will be shortly brought down here in custody. Rajah Dris and other younger chiefs will be allowed to return to Perak as a matter of grace and clemency upon their promise of loyalty and good behaviour.

Mr. Bond, who is legal adviser to the Sultan Abdullah of Perak, upon learning of his client's arrest, immediately applied to the Registrar of the Supreme Court for a writ of Habeas Corpus, which, however, was not granted. The Sultan, or rather ex-Sultan, for he has been deposed, and the other chiefs were, we believe, arrested by the Governor's orders under Ordinance No. 4 of 1876 for the arrest and detention of State prisoners. Mr. Bond has, we are informed, telegraphed to the Secretary of State about the arrest, and contests its legality, on the plea that the Ordinance does not, and cannot, apply to the ex-Sultan. The point will, no doubt, be laid before the Acting Chief Justice. Almost contemporaneously with the arrest of the Perak chiefs another State prisoner, Rajah Mahdie, of Salangore fame, was released from custody in the Civil Jail by the Governor's order. The release was an act of grace, but unconditional, merely upon the Rajah's promise not to meddle with affairs in Salangore, and, it is said, the Rajah will go to Sumatra.

An extraordinary general meeting of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company was held at the Company's offices. There were present, the Hon. W. Adamson in the chair; Mr. E. M. Smith, manager, Hon. W. H. Read, Hon. J. R. MacArthur, and Messrs. I. Henderson, J. Brussel, L. R. Glass, directors; Mr. E. T. Cork, legal adviser of the company; and Messrs. E. J. Wells, M. Little, H. T. Powell, J. Lutjens, A. Becker, P. Sohst, F. C. Bogaardt, R. Jamie, A. Ross, J. Miller, C. Moses, J. R. Kellock, J. Cameron, H. Hinnekindt, W. G. Gulland, A. Currie, and W. Nicholson, shareholders. The resolution passed at a previous meeting of the shareholders was confirmed, by which Clause XXII., of the Articles of Association is altered to enable a meeting of shareholders representing two-fifths of the capital of the company to increase the capital of the company. It was then proposed that the capital of the company be increased from $600,000 to $800,000, the Chairman, the Hon. Mr. Adamson, explaining at some length the reasons which had induced the directors to recommend this course to the shareholders. An amendment to this was brought forward proposing that the capital be increased to $1,000,000; but the original resolution was carried. Considerable discussion arose on a subsequent proposition that the new shares should be issued "at such time, in such numbers, and at such premium as the directors may from time to time decide," and it was urged that the directors should take the shareholders into their confidence, and declare in what manner they really intended to place the shares in the market; that the value of shares would be seriously affected by the uncertainty which must otherwise prevail; and that the directors were assuming to themselves discretion which properly belonged to the shareholders. An amendment was then proposed by Mr. Powell, and seconded by Mr. Hinnekindt, to the effect that the directors should at once place the shares in the market at a premium of 20 per cent., and on being put to the meeting a majority was in favour of the amendment, but a poll was demanded, and on a record being taken of the voting powers of those present, under section XL. of the articles of association, the amendment was declared lost—101 for, 484 against; the original resolution was then carried. Some other minor resolutions were then carried, and the meeting broke up with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council the Chinese Immigrants, Crimping, and Deportation Bills were read a third time and passed. The Hon. W. H. Read proposed that the Chinese Immigrants Bill be read that day six months, and again pointed out the difficulties as well as the dangers of bringing the Bill into operation. The Hon. J. R. MacArthur seconded the motion, and the Attorney-General replied. The motion, however, met with no other support, and the Bill was read a third time and passed. The Hon. Mr. Whampoa was absent from indisposition, but, we believe, Mr. Whampoa is of opinion that the Bill will be found unworkable. After the Bill was passed some interesting informal discussion took place, we are informed, and assurances were given that due precautions will be taken and full explanations given before bringing the Bill into operation.

H. E. the Governor has been pleased to recognise Mr. T. H. Fredericks as Acting Vice-Consul for Denmark at Penang until further notice.

H. M.'s steamer Magpie, Commander Anson, which has been stationed here for some time, left the roads for the China station and will call at Labuan on her way to Hong Kong. Commander Wilcox, of H.M.S. Growler, assumed command of H.M.S. Juno as senior naval officer on this station on the 26th, relieving Commander Anson, who has reverted to the command of H.M.S. Magpie.

The following address was presented to Lady Jervois and her daughters by the Tamil Christians of the St. Andrew's Church Mission. Lady Jervois made a suitable reply, which was duly explained to the congregation:—

TO LADY JERVOIS AND HER DAUGHTERS.

We, the undersigned members of the Tamil congregation, worshipping in the St. Andrew's Mission Chapel, beg that Your Ladyship, and your amiable daughters, will accept the copies of the Sacred Scriptures we now present.

We know that Your Ladyship and family act under the influence of their principles, for, ever since your arrival in this Island, you have not only adorned your station in life, but won the heartfelt respect and sympathies of all classes of people: and amid the claims and anxieties of your position, you have not forgotten the few humble Christians of this Mission: you and your daughters, as opportunities offered, mingled in our assembly, worshipped with us, and partook of the gracious emblems of our once crucified, but now exalted, Saviour; proving to us, that while Christianity regulates the distinctions of the different stations in life, it also engenders that true respect which always accompanies such conduct as you have displayed towards us.

As you are about to leave these shores, we will never cease to pray to our Heavenly Father, that He may bless, guide, and surround you, and his Excellency Sir William, and your family with every domestic happiness, wherever you may be.—Signed by

THE TAMIL CHRISTIANS; and WM. H. GOMES, Missionary S.P.G.; FRANCIS SAMUEL, Tamil Catechist.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—Black: The week's business had been extremely limited in extent. It was anticipated that the remaining stock will have to be shipped by the teamen themselves, or taken back to the country to be mixed with the new crop, as there are no buyers for it here at present. The total export, with the stock, shows a total excess in the crop from the North of China of nearly ten million pounds over last year's. Statistics are:—

Green: There had been a fair business for the week, settlements being:—Moyune, 6,500 half-chests at Tls. 26 to 30½; Fychow, 2,000 half-chests at Tls. 22 to 25½; Pingsuey, 1,000 half-chests at Tls. 27; —total, 9,500 half-chests. Medium Moyunes had chiefly attracted attention, there being but few Teenkais left in stock. Teamen were anxious to dispose of what they still hold, and notwithstanding the fall in exchange there had been a gradually declining market, rates being fully two taels below those at which the market re-opened after the China New Year. From the highest point of the season the drop had been fully four-and-a-half taels, and chops for which Tls. 33 and 33½ were offered and refused might be bought at Tls. 28½ to 29. A considerable portion of recent purchases was going forward by steamer via London to New York. The stock comprised 4,000 half-chests Teenkai tea, 12,000 Moyune, 10,000 Fychow, 500 Pingsuey, and 1,000 Shanghai-packed. Statistics are:—

SILK.

SHANGHAI.—Great activity had prevailed since last mail, prices for Tsatlees had advanced during the week Tls. 50 to 60 per picul, but the leaning was towards easier values at the close. Coarse Silks had not been so much sought after, but for fair 9/12 moss and good skeins an advance of Tls. 20 to 30 per picul was demanded. Re-reels had attracted much attention from their relative cheapness, and a very large business had been done therein at previous prices. Holders were now unwilling to sell, except at an advance of Tls. 20 per picul. The sudden and very decided improvment in Silk had so far inspired the few remaining holders with confidence in the article that it was difficult to find sellers of desirable lots except at much higher prices than home values would seem to warrant. It was difficult to give trustworthy quotations for the close of the mail, but the latest transactions reported had been Yakee Chop No. 3 Tls. 540 (at ex. 5s. 7d. = 25s. 6d.), Ting Changkee's "Foong-yuen" Tls. 445 (= 21s.). The bulk of the transactions in Re-reels had been in common to fair grades at Tls. 440 to 480 (20s. 9d. to 22s. 7d.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

SAIGON.—Messrs. Kaltenbach, Engler, and Co.'s Market Report says :—Beyond a slight inquiry for Java the demand for Rice has been confined, during the period under review, to shipments hence to China. Chinese exporters showed at one time much eagerness to buy, but consequent upon a serious decline reported from Hong Kong they are now keeping back again and our market is drooping. Owing to the great number of steamers which recently visited our port, prices, however, did not thus far recede to any material extent ; but we look for a further decline before long, inasmuch that tonnage shows a slight falling off, and supplies from the interior continue to be liberal. Cotton : Stocks are insignificant ; quotations for cleaned being $16 for No. 1 and $9.50 for No. 2 ; uncleaned $5.15 to 5.30 per picul. Fish : is likewise in very small supply and all descriptions are higher. Hides have also advanced, and are now quoted as follows :—Scoured Cow, $18.50 to 19 per picul ; unprepared ditto, $14.25 per picul ; and Buffalo $7.90 per picul. Horns are quoted $8.60 to 10.45 per picul, according to quality. Gamboge : $50 to 51 per picul nominal. Pepper has receded to $7.50 per picul.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Peet and Co.'s Circular says :—Arrack : The bulk of what may be expected to be available this year has been contracted for at f.165 to f.170 per leaguer of 133 imperial gallons. Coffee, Java : The market is bare. For delivery later on nothing is doing, planters preferring to wait until their produce is to market rather than submit now to a reduction on the figures current last month. The Government will sell publicly during the year 100,000 piculs. Padang : The usual quarterly auction will be held at Padang on the arrival of the steamer that left this for that port on the 24th March. The quantity to be disposed of is small, and will not exceed 18,000 to 19,000 piculs, of which 16,400 piculs were in store by last advices (17th March). The leaf disease is spreading, and it is now feared that the yield will be affected thereby, to the extent of 20 to 30 per cent. Refining Sugar : The market is bare. Business ex next crop has been on a but limited scale at f.17 to f.17.50 per picul, usual basis, according to time of delivery and assortment. Jacatra Sugars have been arranged for at f.14 per picul for colour No. 9. Grocery Sugars : Without transactions. Rice : There is absolutely no stock of good White Batavia. Rattans : Unchanged but scarce ; Black Pepper : Sales at f.18 per picul. Nutmegs and Mace : Little or nothing doing. Cloves : A small parcel of Bencooleen changed hands at f.80 per picul. Cassia : Padang quotations f.15¼ to f.16 per picul.

BANGKOK. — The Borneo Company's Circular says :—Rice : Mill cleaned Rice has been sold as low as $1.45 per picul for Nassuan, and $1.27½ per picul for Namuan, but our quotations at present are $1.47½ and $1.35 per picul (at ex. 4s. 2¾d. per 5s. 10d. and 5s. 4¼d. per cwt. in Gunnies f.o.b. without freight or insurance.) Prices of foreign grain in China show a marked rise, but with the present dearness and scarcity of tonnage there cannot be much change here. Native cleaned Cargo Rice is worth Tic. 54-5 per coyan =$1.63-65 per picul in mats. White Rice has declined to Tic. 63-4 per coyan, for Straits quality ($2.09-13 per picul in mats f.o.b.) and to Tic. 70-71 per coyan for best polished grain ($2.33-6 per picul in Gunnies f.o.b.) Sugar is now arriving freely, and the price of Laconchaisee Sugar D.S. No. 16 is Tic. 9⅞ per picul, No. 13 Tic. 8⅛ per picul ($53.23 f.o.b.). Teelseed is very scarce at Tic. 93 per coyan for Namuan and Tic. 95, Suphan ($3.54-61 per picul f.o.b.) and we are not likely to see any decline this season. Sticklac is in little demand at Tic. 18 per picul for Khorat good medium quality ($14.50 f.o.b.), and only piculs 300 have found buyers during the month. Black Pepper : 300 piculs are offered at Tic. 12 per picul ($8.00 f.o.b.) without finding buyers, and large supplies from the coast are shortly expected. Gamboge : 8 piculs mixed quality have been taken at Tic. 78 per picul, while Tic. 82 per picul would be paid for picked Pipe ($56.74 f.o.b.). Buffallo Hides are very scarce and wanted at Tic. 11½ per picul for best ($9.61 cleaned f.o.b.) Cow Hides also are in request, and common unpicked would fetch Tic. 20¼ per picul ($15.30 cleaned f.o.b.); Buffalo Horns have risen to Tic. 15½ per picul for 4 lbs. and Tic. 14 for 3 lbs. (9.23 f.o.b.), and are difficult to procure at these rates. Sapanwood is plentiful just now, and 7.8 pieces per picul could be purchased at Tic. 1½ per picul uncleaned ($1.81 f.o.b.).

THE RE-ORGANISATION OF PERAK.

IN reply to a series of not inopportune questions put by Sir CHARLES DILKE on Thursday last, Mr. LOWTHER has stated that Rajah MUDA YUSUF, who has all along been friendly to the British Government, and who is described as "possessing activity and energy quite peculiar in a Malay," will shortly be installed as the future Sultan of Perak. Sultan ABDULLAH is to be deported from Singapore, and will probably therefore end his days at one of our Government Stations in India; while Sultan ISMAIL is to be interned at Johore, under the supervision of our tried friend the Maharajah. Another question asked by Sir CHARLES DILKE, which, however, has not been reported in any newspaper, was whether some time subsequent to Mr. BIRCH'S appointment the Malay chiefs at Perak sent a deputation to Singapore to ask for that gentleman's removal, at the same time giving reasons for that course. To this inquiry Mr. LOWTHER made no reply, and as Mr. BIRCH has now gone far beyond the reach of any hostile deputations, there was perhaps no need to press the subject. We believe that as a fact some such deputation did take place, but even if it made out any case against Mr. BIRCH, which is far from having been shown, the non-removal of that officer was the fault of the Singapore authorities, supposing it to have been anybody's fault. Mr. BIRCH ought not to have been treacherously murdered for the crime of not removing himself. With respect to Maharajah LELA, we are glad to learn from Mr. LOWTHER'S statement that there is no foundation for a rumour, said to have been sent home from Singapore, that before the Maharajah was arrested a promise was made to him that if he gave himself up his life should be safe. At the same time every one must regret that such a rumour should ever have got abroad at all, for though untrue the natives in the Malay States may still credit the story, and it is a most serious obstacle to the renewal of friendly feeling if our Government is believed to have been guilty of a breach of faith. Furthers papers, both with regard to the affairs of the Malay States generally, and to the trial of the Maharajah LELA, are shortly to be presented to Parliament; and pending their production it would be impossible to pronounce any satisfactory judgment either upon recent events, or upon the out-look for the future. All we know at present about the Maharaja LELA'S trial and execution is, that he was tried and condemned by native law, that facilities were afforded him for his defence, that Raja MUDA YUSUF and another chief presided at the trial, and that Messrs. MAXWELL and J. G. DAVIDSON watched the proceedings as assessors on behalf of the British Government. We cannot, however, close this paragraph without alluding to one reflection which we feel sure must be stirring in many minds. An English officer was murdered at his post and sharp vengeance has been taken upon all—no matter what their rank—who had a hand in the deed. But that officer—at the time he fell—was publishing a proclamation calculated to provoke enmity among the Malays, and one which would never have been sanctioned by the authorities at home had they but known of it in time. MARGARY also was treacherously slain when discharging his official duties, and in MARGARY'S case there had been nothing in the way of previous provocation. Why is MARGARY'S blood still crying out for vengeance unheeded?

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE JUDICIAL STAFF IN THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

(Apr. 23rd.) Mr. A. M'ARTHUR asked the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the attention of Her Majesty's Government had been called to the insufficiency of the judicial staff in the Straits Settlements, and whether there was any intention to meet the wishes of the community by the appointment of an additional judge.

Mr. LOWTHER said the attention of the Government had been directed to the alleged insufficiency of the judicial staff in the Straits Settlements, but it was occasioned by the temporary absence, on leave, of the Chief Justice. A second judge had been appointed, and Her Majesty's Government have directed that power shall be taken to appoint a third judge of the Supreme Court, if such a course should be found necessary; but before deciding upon incurring this additional expenditure we are awaiting fuller information as to the possibility of so rearranging the business as to relieve the Supreme Court of much that is now unnecessarily thrown upon it, and petty debt cases below a specified amount have been already removed from that tribunal.

PERAK.

(26th.) Sir C. DILKE asked the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies whether it was true, as reported in the London and China Telegraph of the 16th inst., that Sultan Ysoof was to be installed at Perak, and that Sultans Ismail and Abdullah were to be deported from that country; whether Sultan Ysoof was the same person as Raja Muda Yusuf, referred to by Sir William Jervois, on October 29, 1875, as "heir presumptive to the throne at Perak," as "possessing activity and energy quite peculiar in a Malay," and also as having "expressed a desire to live under British rule;" and whether any further papers relating to the affairs of the Malay States would shortly be presented to Parliament. The hon. baronet further asked whether it was true the Maharajah Lelah had been executed in Perak on a charge of being concerned in the murder of Mr. Birch; whether there was any kind of foundation for a rumour current at Singapore that before the Maharajah was arrested a promise was made to him that if he surrendered his life should be safe; whether he was provided with legal means of defence; under what law he was tried, and what was the nature of the tribunal by which he was condemned; and whether Her Majesty's Government would lay before Parliament a report of the trial.

Mr. LOWTHER said it was quite true, as reported, that arrangements were being made for the deportation of Sultan Abdullah from Perak to another portion of HerMajesty's dominions, that Sultan Ismail had also been assigned a residence under supervision. Authority would meanwhile be exercised by Sultan Ysoof, who was the person referred to in October, 1875, by Sir W. Jervois, as heir presumptive to the throne of Perak, as possessing peculiar energy and activity, and as having expressed a desire to live under British rule. Further papers in relation to the Malay States would shortly be laid before Parliament. It was also quite true that the Maharajah Lelah had lately been convicted and executed upon a charge of complicity in the murder of Mr. Birch. There was no foundation for the rumour that before the Maharajah was arrested a promise was made to him that if he surrendered his life should be safe. Means of legal defence were supplied to the Maharajah by Sir William Jervois in the shape of a Queen's counsel, by whom the prisoner was ably defended.

CEYLON.

Mr. Alderman M'Arthur proposes to call the attention of the House of Commons on the 1st of May to the unsatisfactory state of affairs in the island of Ceylon in relation to ecclesiastical endowments; and to move, "That, as the members of the Anglican and Presbyterian Churches in Ceylon constitute a small part of the population, and the great majority of the inhabitants are Buddhists, Hindoos, and Mohammedans, this House is of opinion that the payment out of the revenues of the colony of annual subsidies to the ministers of those Churches inflicts great injustice and occasions serious discontent, and ought therefore to be discontinued."

THE HONG KONG OPIUM FARM.

Dr. Dudgeon, in a letter to the N.B. Daily Mail, attacks the system of granting licenses for the sale of prepared opium in force in Hong Kong. He states that in 1858 an ordinance was passed making the sale of crude opium entirely free and that of prepared opium a strict monopoly. The highest tender offered was $33,960, which was accepted. Our Government officers were in the public paper of that day accused of taking bribes of the Chinese, and it would appear that opium had poisoned the morality of both Chinese and Europeans. In 1861 the revenue from opium reached £12,412. In 1869 attached to the license were clauses regulating the thickness of walls, the construction of chimney breasts, and the formation of hoods of uninflammable material in the opium furnaces and boiling-houses. In this year the revenue reached $108,660, and the Registrar-General remarks, "A large business has been done in prepared opium, the export to Australia and California reaching an aggregate of about Tls. 2,562,000 in weight, amounting in value to $1,950,000. In Hong Kong about Tls. 648,000 weight was purchased." In 1872 a Commission was appointed to inquire into the working of the monopoly. The object in view was apparently simply to ascertain whether a sufficient amount was paid by the monopolists towards the colonial revenue. The Commissioners, were, however, unable to ascertain the precise amount of opium boiled, consumed in Hong Kong and exported from the island, but they suggest that the Government take the monopoly into its own hand and establish one or more boiling establishments, or that they extend the monopoly for periods of three years, or that it be put up to public auction. At the present time the annual revenue is $125,500, and there are seventy-eight licensed shops. Dr. Dudgeon concludes his letter as follows:—"This model colony of ours—a beacon of civilisation to the benighted Chinese, only distant from the mainland of China about a rifle shot—and destined to give proof of our immense superiority, recognised only very recently the three vices to which the Chinese are specially addicted, viz., gambling, opium-smoking and the social evil. These are regulated by our Colonial Government, carried on in houses conspicuously marked as being under Government licence, and all contributing more or less toward the Colonial revenue. The first of the foul triad happily now no longer exists. Strong pressure from our countrymen in the colony itself and Britons in China generally, compelled our home Government to abandon this source of revenue. The gambling gains, I believe, still lie at Hong Kong, no one daring to touch the dirty money. The other two evils are still under the direct patronage of the Government. Nothing but the most lamentable ignorance of the Chinese mind could have led the Colonial authorities to this direct contradiction of all that the Chinese held to be sacred duty on the part of their rulers."

Naval and Military.

The troopship Orontes, Captain E. H. Seymour, arrived at Portsmouth on the 24th inst. with the 10th Regiment and a number of military invalids and time-expired men from the Straits Settlements, Singapore, the Mauritius, and Natal.

Rear-Admiral John Corbett, C.B., who has been selected for the command of the East Indies Station, entered the navy in 1836. As Midshipman he served in the Carysfort throughout the operations of 1840 on the coast of Syria, including the bombardment of St. Jean d'Acre and the blockade of Alexandria, for which he received the war medal with clasp and the Turkish medal. Passing his examination in June, 1842, he was appointed in 1843 to the Queen, in the Mediterranean. He was promoted to Lieutenant May 4, 1846, being next appointed in July, 1847, to the Vengeance. After obtaining his Commander's commission, February, 1852, he served some time as Admiralty agent on board a contract mail vessel, and while acting as such received injuries for which he is now in receipt of a special pension. In 1854 Commander Corbett was appointed to the Wolverene on the North American and West Indian Station, and in July, 1856, to the Inflexible, which he commanded with distinction in the Canton River against the Chinese in 1857, and was promoted to Captain for his services in the war. Since that time he has commanded the Scout in the East Indies and China, and was last employed in command of the Britannia, trainingship, from September, 1867, to August, 1871. Rear-Admiral Corbett was appointed a C.B. in June, 1869, and was Naval Aide-de-Camp to Her Majesty from April, 1870, until promoted to flag rank.

A pension of £120 per annum has been awarded by the Admiralty to Mr. Whillier, Paymaster-in-Chief, in consideration of injuries received by him in the Service.

It is reported that all military officers on leave have been requested to rejoin their regiments.

TRADE MONOPOLIES IN JAPAN.

WE learn that advices have been received from a reliable authority that a matter of considerable importance in connection with trade in Japan, and which has already attracted attention, is likely to be the subject of public if not official notice in that country. It appears that, by a somewhat complicated arrangement, the Japanese Government have contrived to establish a complete monopoly of the export trade in rice. The Government receive the rice from the farmers, who send it to them in payment of the taxes, and the authorities are able to obtain it almost at any price they choose to give. This advantage in the purchase—if purchase it can properly be called—is worked by a select clique of officials to their own especial benefit. In order to put a face on the matter, they employ a foreigner to sell the rice; and thus there is practically only one foreign house able to export rice from the country. Whether a trade of this character can, properly speaking, be looked upon as legal is open to question, but there can certainly be no doubt that it is in every way undesirable and impolitic, as tending to check legitimate enterprise, without even giving any substantial benefit to the Government properly speaking. We trust that attention may be directed to the matter; and that should the facts prove as we have every reason to believe they are, some representations may be made on the subject to the Japanese authorities. No doubt the Government of Japan is at liberty to do what it will with its own; but it is at least scarcely equitable that when it has conceded to foreign nations the right of free trade in theory it should practically render that concession abortive in respect to one of the most important staples, by stepping in and, by means of such facilities as only a Government can possess, conducting the trade itself. We make no doubt that if the subject be placed in this light before the Japanese authorities they will perceive the justice of introducing some change in the present system. The duty of remedying this evil appears to us to lie especially with the Yokohama Chamber of Commerce, and we trust that it will take the matter up, and that greater success may attend its efforts in this than, if we may take the Report of the Chamber for 1876, just to hand, as a guide, seems to have rewarded its exertions in the matter of "Drawbacks," "Hatoba accommodation," "Protests against passports," and the "Limits of the port," in respect to all which questions it scarcely seems to have pushed matters quite so energetically as might be wished. We are fully aware of the difficulty of keeping up the necessary energy in public bodies in places in the East; but without some real efforts it is quite hopeless for them to expect to carry measures, however necessary and just they may be, to a successful issue.

BANKING WITH INDIA AND CHINA.

The reports for the year 1876 of the various banks connected with the Far East and the speeches made by the Chairmen in introducing them at the meetings recently held are of much value, as presenting different views as to the manner in which it is desirable that banking operations should be conducted during times when the course of exchange is of a doubtful and varying character. The feature of the year 1876 as respects exchange with India and Chin has been the great and rapid fluctuations to which the rates have been subject. This has been the cause alike of the profits and of the losses; although, with some inconsistency, the point has been touched upon mainly only so far as it is explanatory of the latter. Fluctuations in exchange are obviously the very atmosphere in which banks whose transactions consist largely in exchange operations must live; and in itself, therefore, a fluctuating exchange market does not give cause for regret, nor would it be greatly to the interest of those concerned, if there were prospects of an entire cessation of variations similar to those which occurred last year. At the same time it is beyond question that in conducting operations in times when the course of the market is doubtful, greater skill and greater care are required than under normal circumstances; and consequently little blame can be attached to those who have made errors of judgment during the period under notice. It would, however, be a mistake to imagine that as a rule success in banking operations under circumstances such as those of last year is to be secured by very large operations based upon some definite and apparently far-seeing calculation. In such operations much is staked on either side. If they succeed they show very large profits, but, on the other hand, if they fail, they are productive of considerable losses. The right policy in times when exchanges are subject to rapid fluctuations is to be constantly on the alert and to operate moderately upon each successive phase of the markets. Without making comparisons, which might be invidious, we may safely say, speaking generally, that during the past year success has attended banking operations with India and China precisely in proportion as this policy has been adopted, and losses have ensued so far as it has been overlooked. The most obvious lesson which the history of the past year's banking operations teaches is no doubt that of caution and prudence; but these qualities even need scarcely be carried to the length of abstaining from all operations in which any risk whatever is involved. By such a plan dangers may no doubt be avoided, but opportunities are also needlessly lost. The wisest course to pursue is, if we may borrow the simile, not to stay in port, because a fair breeze cannot be depended upon; but, knowing that the wind may change, to avoid carrying too much sail and to be ready to tack so soon as it is necessary to do so. Carefully wrought out abstract theories founded upon one or two broad facts often become under such circumstances a very tempting basis of action; but too frequently before the time has come for these causes to bring about the results anticipated counter causes, which entirely neutralise them, have arisen. These are the obvious lessons which are taught by the comptes rendus of banking operations with the East, which have been given to the public during the past fortnight. On the whole, notwithstanding some disappointments, it is clear that there is every cause to look hopefully on the future, and that we have good reason to believe that the Indian and China banks will increase in favour with the public as a means of investment. The business which they conduct is becoming more and more consolidated; and now that there is less fear than before of any interruption of telegraphic communication, there is little reason to apprehend any of the severe losses which had occasionally to be faced in former times.

THE recent reversal of the decision in the Admiralty Court in the case of the Perana steamer, in regard to which a claim was made for compensation for loss of market consequent upon undue delay of the steamer on the voyage [from Manila], is of much importance in respect to sales for arrival. The Judge of the Admiralty Court awarded damages, considering that the depreciation in the value of the goods was the natural consequence of the carriers' delay; but the Court of Appeal have reversed this decision, holding that it was not certain that the goods could have been sold immediately after they arrived; while the sale of goods "to "arrive" is an ordinary mercantile transaction. This decision, if it be taken as a precedent, establishes that claim for loss of market consequent on undue delay of a vessel on the voyage can only be made in the event of the goods having been sold for arrival. It might still be a question how the matter would stand in cases where it might be shown to be impossible to effect a sale for arrival at all.

SOME attention has been drawn to recent affairs in the Straits. At a meeting held on the 20th inst. of the Aborigines' Protection Society, Sir P. BENSON MAXWELL in the chair, the subject of the execution, by British authority, of the Maharajah LELA, for alleged complicity in the murder of the late Mr. BIRCH, was taken into consideration. The matter, however, was deferred pending an official answer to questions which Sir CHARLES DILKE had given notice of his intention to put, with regard both to the execution of the Maharajah LELA and the deportation of the Sultans ISMAIL and ABDULLAH from Perak, which will be found in another column. The attention of the Secretary of State for the Colonies has also been called to the position of the Judges in the Straits Settlements, and the assurance given is satisfactory, but not the cost at which the efficiency is to be obtained.

WE understand that the stay in England of Sir JAMES LONGDEN, the Governor designate of Ceylon, will be somewhat longer than was anticipated. He will probably leave England about the end of July, and would in that case arrive in Ceylon early in September next. An error has been made in the statement which appeared in the papers here, to the effect that Captain A. COLLINS, of the 57th Regiment, had been nominated Aide-de-Camp to Sir JAMES, no appointment as yet having been made to that post.

WE note that Comte de ROCHECHOUART, who was formerly First Secretary of the French Legation and Chargé d'Affaires at Peking, has been appointed Agent and Consul General for France at Belgrade. We trust that in due time Comte de ROCHECHOUART will be selected for the post of Minister in China.

THE Gazette notifies that the QUEEN has approved the appointments of Mr. HANS KIOER as Danish Consul at Hong Kong, of Mr. ARTHUR LANEN as French Consul at Hong Kong, and of Mr. EDMAND RINN as French Consul at Singapore.

THE reduced scale of postal rates to Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, China, and other places in the Far East, which recently came in force, will be applied to Java and the Philippine Islands on May 1, and to Japan on June 1.

A TELEGRAM announces that H.E. POPE-HENNESSY, the new Governor of Hong Kong, arrived out on the 22nd inst.
